DALTON CONFESSES ALL!

DENBY HEAD OF NAVY; T. R. JR. HIS ASSISTANT

Harding Officially Names New Aids.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

St. Augustine, Fla., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—After an hour's talk this morning in his pleasant, sun flooded room over the hotel gardens, President-Elect Harding turned over the direction of the United States navy to Edwin Denby of Detroit as secretary, and Col. Theodore Roosevelt as first assistant.

At the same time he announced as a general policy, echoed a few minutes later by Mr. Denby, that the big navy program would be maintained until an agreement had been reached on disarmament.

In this appointment Mr. Harding has picked as the fifth member of his official family a man who, hitherto unknown as a national figure, gives promise of being one of the most popular men in the new government. The modesty, unaffected surprise, poise, and dignity with which Mr. Denby met the biggest stroke of political fortune that he could have imagined as possible won all who came in contact with him.

Tall, Robust, Jovial, Modest.

Mr. Denby is a man of about the same physical build as his new chief, tall, heavy, well proportioned. His head is bald and his features bear a marked resemblance to those of Tom Reed. There is also something of the massive, rugged Bryan chin and nose there. But through it all shines a kindliness.

He comes to his place of power with the background of experience "before the mast." He has the enlisted man's viewpoint. This will be seen more and more as his policies, now frankly unthought of, develop.

There was no formality about the little scene in the conference room this morning. Mr. Harding and Mr. Denby stood beside the open window. They looked like men to trust.

Names Teddy's Son.

"Gentlemen," Mr. Harding said, "I have nominated Mr. Denby to be my secretary of the navy and he has accepted. I would like to say also I have wanted to take advantage of the services of Theodore Roosevelt and have asked Mr. Denby to accept him as first assistant. Mr. Denby has agreed with me cordially on this and Mr. Roosevelt has accepted the appointment."

Mr. Denby confirmed all this and said later that he was "tremendously pleased" to have Col. Roosevelt as his second in command.

Mr. Harding referred to a letter on naval policy which he had written to Senator Lodge. He said:

"I have said to several members of senate and house committees on naval affairs that it would be unwise to suspend our capital ship program until we have entered into some agreement for disarmament with other nations."

Mr. Denby, asked for a statement as to his policies, said that he had none yet.

Denby's Idea of Duties.

"I would like to say," he said, "that my conception of the duty of secretary is to act as navy adviser to the president, the cabinet and congress; and secondly, and more important, to maintain whatever navy congress gives us at the highest peak of power, ready for battle at an instant's notice."

As to disarmament, theories of building, types or any of the more technical problems, Mr. Denby said he would have to wait to study and consult. He goes in with a knowledge of navy men and a great love for the navy.

One of the first regrets Mr. Denby has expressed was that he would have to give up his present work as chief probation officer for the criminal courts of Detroit.

Cheered Fighting Marines.

Big, kindly, and knowing the weaknesses of human nature, as morale officer at Paris island during the war, a position which was given him after he had enlisted as a "buck private" with the marines, it was his duty to talk to new recruits, telling them of all that war meant, its horrors and its sacrifices, all that the discipline involved, injecting into them the "spirit of the corps."

He was sent abroad on this duty as observation officer and was under fire for a brief time. His appointment, therefore, is a distinct recognition of the heroic part the marine brigades played in France. It also gives the navy direct credit to two members of the American Legion, for Mr. Denby wore the Legion button on his coat today, and Col. Roosevelt was one of the organizers.

New Secretary Reminisces.

"Do you want to know why I am so pleased at this?" Mr. Denby said after

PACKERS END WAR-TIME PACT TO FIX WAGES

Alschuler's Work as Arbiter Praised.

War time arbitration of wage disputes between the packing industry and its employés begun in January, 1918, ceased yesterday. Judge Samuel A. Alschuler was notified there would be no further use for his services as arbitrator.

This action was taken by Attorneys Carl Meyer and James Condon, counsel for the packers. In a letter to the secretary of agriculture, they said that inasmuch as the war has been over two years and the purposes of the agreement having been secured, there was no further need for the arbitration agreement.

The work of Judge Alschuler as an arbitrator was highly commended by the attorneys.

Working on New Plan.

In the future wage differences and other grievances between the packers and their employés will be settled under some new plan. Attorney Meyer said arrangements under which employés will have representation are being considered.

Rumors that trouble was expected at the yards following the lifting of the government ban on strikes and lockouts could not be confirmed. Labor leaders said no strike votes were being considered. Gossip among the workers to the effect that the packers were planning to reduce wages and lengthen hours is said to have caused the rumors.

A Wartime Measure.

Differences between the packers and their employés in the latter part of 1917, when a strike was threatened, led to the arbitration agreement. It was purely a wartime measure and in line with the president's policy of mediation in industry where the manufacture of war supplies was affected.

The agreement held that if grievances could not be adjusted between employés and employers they should be referred to the United States arbiter.

On March 30, 1918, Judge Alschuler granted the workers a wage increase of $75,000,000 a year, the eight hour basic day, and many other advantages.

SQUAWS DEMAND VOTE AND SHARE IN RUNNING TRIBE

Old Town, Me., Feb. 26.—Indian women of the Penobscot tribe today started on the warpath to obtain the right to vote in the tribal elections and share in the conduct of reservation affairs.

Already some forward looking squaws have nailed the suffrage colors to the totem pole with the assertion that a grand lady sachem would make a wiser chief than any brave.

Last night the new women began rejoicing when they received a ruling from Attorney General Shaw that they could go as far as the tribe allowed, for the state would remain neutral. He said that tribal suffrage was entirely a matter for domestic adjustment.

'ENVOY TOO GOOD A FRENCHMAN TO GO DRY IN U. S.'

PARIS, Feb. 26.—Questioned in the chamber of deputies today if it was true that M. Jusserand, French ambassador at Washington, had abolished French wines from the embassy table, M. Doumer, the finance minister, replied:

"Our ambassador is too good a Frenchman; he has too good taste to bar from his table the best wines in the world. I am satisfied he can make America understand that, if it is a good thing to fight alcoholism, French wines are an antidote for alcoholism."

EUROPE MAY ASK AMERICA TO PAY DEBT OF LATINS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—The appearance of the British cruiser Cambrian in Costa Rican waters to enforce concessions made by the Tinoco government and presumably for the collection of debts owing Great Britain is regarded with apprehension in Washington as an indirect movement that may involve Mexico.

If this country presses Great Britain for payment of its debt, it is understood that England may call the attention of the United States to the fact that she has money coming to her from the Latin-American countries, including Mexico, and that on the United States, under the Monroe doctrine, rests the duty of collecting these debts or permitting their collection by force.

In any event it is expected the British will put in as a counter claim against her debt in the United States the debts owed to her from Latin-America.

Other European countries holding Latin-American obligations are expected to follow the lead of Great Britain.

CONGRESS ACTS TO ADVANCE 'CITY BEAUTIFUL' PLAN

Another step toward the achievement of the Chicago beautiful plan was taken yesterday when the house of representatives at Washington agreed to permit the city of Chicago to take possession of a three cornered lot on the southeast corner of the boulevard link bridge. The city will use the ground, which has been the site of the government barge office, in straightening South Water street.

The city will pay not less than $25.50 per square foot for the land and, in addition, has agreed to turn one of the towers on the bridge over to the government for use as a barge office for twenty years.

Pours Kerosene on Self; Sets It Afire; Burns Kill

Mrs. May Drenek, 1915 South Fifty-eighth court, Cicero, died at the county hospital last night of fatal burns. According to the Cicero police, who are investigating the case, the woman poured kerosene on her clothes and lit them. Mrs. Drenek was 29 years old, and is said to have been the mother of one child. The police late last night had not located the husband, John Drenek, whom they sought for further information.

WOMAN SHOOTS NEGRO JANITOR AS RINGS VANISH

Bullets Meet Attack with Scrub Pail.

Armed with a revolver, Mrs. Pearl Bryant of 6040 South Park avenue, wife of a wholesale tobacco dealer, fought a winning battle yesterday with Robert Elder, a Negro janitor, who attempted to fell her with his scrub pail. Elder was captured after he had been shot twice in the back. Mrs. Bryant accused him of stealing two rings.

The janitor had been scrubbing the floors in Mrs. Bryant's apartment when she discovered that her wedding and engagement rings, valued at $300, were missing from the edge of a wash basin in the bathroom, where she had placed them. She recalled Elder had been scrubbing the bathroom floor a few moments before.

Demands Her Rings Back.

She went to her bedroom and obtained her husband's revolver, then confronted Elder.

"You'd better put those rings back where you got them," she ordered. He decided he had business at home.

"If you attempt to leave this apartment, I'll shoot you," she warned. He asked permission to go into the bathroom and look for the rings, but Mrs. Bryant, fearing he would hide the jewelry, refused to grant the request.

"I won't throw them away," he said, stepping toward her. Suddenly he swung his scrub pail at her head, but she was too quick for him. She jumped back as he turned and fled toward a rear door. She fired two shots.

The police found Elder having his wounds dressed in his basement flat at 6048 South Park avenue. He was locked up at the Grand Crossing station on a larceny charge, but the rings were not recovered.

Handbag Thief Shot.

John Jennings, 4536 South Dearborn street, another Negro, was wounded twice in the back during a revolver battle with the police after he had grabbed a handbag from Miss Anna Feldman of 5020 Dorchester avenue.

Miss Feldman was walking in Bowen avenue between Vincennes avenue and Grand boulevard when the man seized her purse. She dashed after him, screaming, and Policemen John Corcoran and John Doyle took up the chase. The Negro started to shoot and in the fusillade that followed was shot twice.

3 SETS OF TWINS BORN TO GLENCOE HOME IN 4 YEARS

Four years ago Laurence P. Palmer Ball, wealthy manufacturer of railway specialties of Glencoe, and proud father of a 2 year old son, paced the library of his home. Then a nurse appeared. Mr. Ball queried: "What is it?" The nurse replied, "Twins—boys."

Two years ago found Mr. Ball again busily engaged in pacing the library. Then the nurse. "What is it?" interrogated the manufacturer. "Twins—boys," the nurse answered.

Yesterday down on "Sunnyhill Farm," at Lyndon, Ky., where the family is wintering, once again found Mr. Ball pacing nervously the floor. Enter the nurse. Then the question. The reply. "Twins—girls."

Loop Restaurants Take "War" Out of Some Prices

H. C. Carpenter, supervising manager of the western division of Child's restaurants, announced the second price cut in two weeks. Many items are reduced to their "before the war" level. Twelve items were reduced in the first cut and fifteen are reduced by the second. Ham and eggs, formerly 60 cents, have been cut to 45 cents. Wheat, corn meal and buckwheat cakes have all been cut from 20 cents to 15 cents, with sausages to 30 cents, instead of 40c. Apple and raisin pie have been put back to 10 cents.

Hughes in Court for Last Time Before Cabinet Duties

New York, Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Charles E. Hughes today made what probably will be his last appearance in court before entering the cabinet, when he argued before Judge Mack, United States District court, the case of the Victor Talking Machine company, defendant, in a suit brought by R. H. Macy and company for $500,000.

Plaintiffs ask triple damages under the civil section, Sherman anti-trust law, because the phonograph company, they allege, refused to supply them with records.

Dainty Tongued Testers to Sample Seized Hootch

New York, Feb. 26.—Aid of secret service agents and "whisky experts" will be enlisted to examine 100,000 bottles of liquor seized from passengers entering this port, Collector Newton of the port of New York announced today. The good liquor will be sold to hospitals and the bad dumped into the sea.

"SIGHT OF ALL THE BONDS TOO MUCH FOR ME"

Super-Thief Tells a Strange Tale.

William Dalton, 17 year old clerk, who in forty-eight hours attained notoriety as premier bank robber of his generation through his theft of $772,000 in Liberty bonds from the Northern Trust company in Chicago, made a full confession of his crime to a Tribune reporter last night. His statement follows:

BY WILLIAM DALTON.

It sound like a big job—this getting away with three-quarters of a million dollars in bonds, doesn't it? Here's all there was to it:

I am 16 years of age—will be 17 next October. Three years ago, in 1918, I went to work for the Northern Trust company. I stayed with them for about six months. Then I went back to school.

About a year ago I went back to work for the bank. I was a page—I carried messages from one part of the institution to another. Not long ago I was promoted to junior clerk. I have been getting $65 a month. I worked hard, but I had no kick on the bank. I was able to pay my mother $3.50 a week. The wages I was getting didn't have anything to do with my taking the bonds.

Spends Evenings at Home.

I didn't have any real bad habits—I spent my evenings mostly at home with my mother. I liked the movies and went to them often.

Since I started work a year ago I have been steady on the job. The bank people sent me over to the Y. M. C. A., along with a number of other employés, and started me on a commercial course. They paid the tuition fees.

They were very kind to me and helped me along every way they could. I can see that now.

Not Influenced by Landis.

I want to say [this in answer to a question, because earlier interviews had mentioned it] that Judge Landis' handling of the case of the Ottawa man's case—bank thief—didn't have any influence in making me steal the bonds; not a bit.

Since the first of the year I had handled—counted and checked up—a big lot of Liberty bonds every day.

On Wednesday toward quitting time I got to thinking. It came into my mind how easy it would be to carry a lot of them off.

Picks Out Automobile.

After I got through work that night I went over to an automobile sales place on the west side near our home and looked at a second hand Ford. I told the man I liked it and would come back the next day and buy it. I also bought a $3.25 satchel at a little store over there. Not any very sure idea of taking the bonds and running away, but working in that direction.

When I got home and saw mother I thought it would not do. I couldn't carry out that plan. I knew it was wrong. But I had drawn $50 out of my savings at the bank, leaving only $68.12 on deposit.

Temptation Again.

Well, the next morning I was down at the bank; went to the basement and got a package of the Liberty bonds and took them up to my cage on the third floor as usual. Then the idea of making way with them came back to me strong.

It wasn't the usual way, but I went out to eat at 10:45 for fifteen minutes. When I got back to the bank the big pile of bonds was still there on the counter in my cage—all piled up.

My boss, Irving Hanson, wasn't around, and at 11:30 I took the bonds and dumped them into the satchel I had bought the night before and brought down to the bank that morning.

Slips Out with the Bonds.

It was easy. I walked out of the cage; went downstairs, out of the alley entrance and across the street to the Y. M. C. A. There I went into a wash room, took a $500 bond out of the bag and put it in my pocket.

When I got out on the street and started moving through the crowds the whole thing came to me, just what I'd done. At the first corner I stopped—I was scared. I thought of going back and giving up the bonds. But I was afraid of getting caught—so I went on.

For half an hour I walked around

THE REWARD

Check for $26,000 Given to Paul Draper. He May Divide It with Dennis.

A check for $26,000—reward for capture of Dalton and recovery of the $771,500 bonds—was handed to Paul Draper in the Bloomington jail last night by H. O. Edmonds, vice president of the Northern Trust company, in the presence of W. S. Miller, another vice president of the bank, and John S. Lord, attorney for Lloyd's. Not wishing to take the responsibility of carrying it around with him until Monday, the boy turned it over to Fred B. Capen, Bloomington's representative of the Northern Trust company, who will deposit it to Draper's credit tomorrow.

Young Draper said he intends to spend most of the money in developing a 326 acre tract of land seventy miles northeast of Lewiston, Mont., for which he filed a homestead claim in 1916.

"Are you going to be married?" he was asked.

"No," he replied, with a smile.

"Are you sure?"

"Well, I might. I don't know yet. I'll have to think it over.

"But I think part of the money ought to go to James Dennis, who gave father the tip that Dalton was in Heyworth. That's something else I'll have to think about. I don't know now just how much credit Dennis deserves for the capture and how much of the reward he should receive, but I think I'll give him a share of it."

The reward was given to Draper without any reservation of any kind and any portion of it which he gives to Dennis will be due solely to his own magnanimity.

Draper served with Company B of the 124th machine gun battalion of the 33d division and was wounded in action the day before the armistice was signed. He was founded five times by a high explosive shell and spent twenty months and ten days in a hospital.

"The money certainly is a welcome present at this time," he said. "I had no idea when I got up this morning that I was going to be rich by night. I guess the army training of learning to think quick and act quick helped me to win it."

CHINESE CO-ED LOSES $200; HUNT U. OF C. STUDENT

Miss Cora Wong, Chinese co-ed of the University of Chicago, is not so sure now that a cane, a fur coated collar, and a perennial cigaret constitute a real business man.

But a week ago Miss Wong, who lives in Beecher hall at 5492 Ingleside avenue, had a different idea about such things. She wished to send $200 back to China to a cousin there that she might come to Chicago to school. But the business end of the transaction was too much for Miss Wong. She could not think out the intricacies of a money order, the perplexities of a draft, or the other complex matters concerned in such a transaction.

Then she recalled Paul Meung, also a student at the university and a fellow countryman, living at 5945 Drexel avenue. Paul, whose swell clothes announced him the shrewd business man, agreed to help her. Then he disappeared. So did the $200, she told the police.

Chile Admits Germans Take Over 300,000 Acres

SANTIAGO, Chile, Feb. 26.—Foreign Minister Matte today confirmed reports published here that German interests have acquired a thirty years' concession of nearly 300,000 acres. He said the concession was given to two German engineers to erect a plant to manufacture iron and steel products.

BOY WHO STOLE $772,000 MUST PAY PENALTY

Will Be an Example, Bank Heads Say.

William Dalton, 17 year old Chicago youth who Thursday stole $772,000 worth of Liberty bonds from his employer, the Northern Trust company, will be prosecuted to the limit for his offense.

This announcement was made in Bloomington, Ill., last night by John S. Lord, representative of Lloyds of London, underwriters of the bank for the bonds.

Dalton was arrested in Heyworth, a small town twelve miles south of Bloomington, early yesterday afternoon. All the loot except one $500 bond was found in his possession.

The lad was taken to the Bloomington jail, and after he had made a full confession was placed on a Chicago and Alton train to be brought back to Chicago early today.

The party, which comprised insurance company and bank officials, with a heavy guard of private detectives, was scheduled to reach here at 7 o'clock.

Can't Condone Offense.

"It is a very regrettable incident," said Mr. Lord in announcing the insurance company's determination to insist on the prosecution of Dalton, whose salary at the bank was $65 a month.

"It is especially regrettable in view of Dalton's youth. We have no hard feelings against him—but neither can we condone the magnitude of the offense which he has committed.

"Should we grant immunity in this instance it might serve as an incentive for other lads similarly situated to attempt similar thefts.

"The boy is now under arrest on a warrant sworn out Friday afternoon in Chicago. We will not oppose his release on a reasonable bail."

Bank Officials Firm.

H. O. Edmonds and W. S. Miller, vice presidents of the bank, after counting the bonds, declared that prosecution of Dalton rests with State's Attorney Crowe of Cook county.

"The law must take its course," said Mr. Edmonds. "Strictly speaking, it is not for us to prosecute, but we must—for our own protection and the safety of other boys placed in like positions—allow the law to act.

"I am sorry for Dalton. I was a boy myself, and I think I can appreciate something of his attitude. When his sentence is served the bank will put no stone in the way of his future advancement in life. Of course, it would be out of the question for us to give him a position in the bank again, but if we can help him in any other way, I believe he will do it."

Officials Go to Bloomington.

Lord went to Bloomington with Messrs. Edmunds and Miller, W. E. Webster and John J. White, superintendent and assistant superintendent of the Pinkertons, and George De Mar, Chicago detective. The negotiations for the return of Dalton and his loot were quickly completed.

A check for $26,000, covering the reward offered for the youth and the money, was first paid over unreservedly to Paul E. Draper, crippled world war veteran, who identified Dalton from his published photograph caused his arrest. rDaper ma nate part of this reward to James Dennis, an overseas buddy, from whom the original "tip" on Dalton's identity came.

Visit the Youth in Jail.

The bank officials and officers then went to the Bloomington county jail, where Dalton was held prisoner when he was removed from Heyworth.

There they listened first hand to a complete recital of the crime, what led up to it, and Dalton's movements following the theft of the bonds. Dalton talked freely, made no effort to spare himself or to conceal even the slightest fact in connection with the affair. He did not appear to be embarrassed by the presence of Messrs. Miller and Edmunds, his former employers.

For the first time he admitted that the theft was not executed on the impulse of the moment. He had deliberated over it unconsciously for months and consciously for at least twenty-four hours, he said. He had tentatively made arrangements for the first steps in his getaway before taking the securities, he asserted. He had even purchased the satchel in which the bonds were to be carried.

Tells How Easy It Was.

He spoke repeatedly of "how easy" it was to walk away with a fortune under the noses of its guardians.

Nonchalant, smiling, perfectly at ease, he recounted every step of his course from the bank doors on South La Salle street to the tiny poolroom-restaurant where his career came to an end with the touch of an official hand on his shoulder.

"He's the coolest man I've ever seen," Constable Draper said later. "He took his arrest as calmly as if I'd asked him for a match."

Laughs with His Captors.

Afterward, in custody, he laughed and joked with his captors, smoked cigarets, enjoyed several helpings of coffee and cake—even offered to aid in every way the negotiations coincident with his return.

Only one sign of regret was particularly noticeable—the break in his voice as he spoke of his father—dead eight years—and of his mother and sisters and little brother at home.

He will plead guilty when he comes to trial, he declared. He does not wish the state to go to any unnecessary expense in his punishment.

"I'm going to face it like a man," he said.

He attributed his downfall to no particular cause—just the cumulative result of a boy's daydreams of riches and success fomented by the constant stream of fortunes which, passing through his hands, should have represented to him only that much paper.

Denies Reports on Landis.

He denied earlier published reports that he was perhaps instigated by the leniency accorded a bank cashier of Ottawa, Ill., who had committed a similar crime when that cashier was brought to trial before Judge Landis. He even criticised the leniency extended in that case.

He had no fault to find with the salary paid him by the bank.

"I saved money on it," he said, "and I paid my mother $3.50 every week besides buying all my own clothes and furnishing my own pocket money."

He preached no sermons—he acted under his inquisition only as a normal, intelligent high school freshman would act under normal conditions. He apparently, from his comments, realized that he had erred and was willing to face the penalty.

The arrest of this premier bank thief of his generation, for whom the greatest dragnet in the Chicago police annals had been thrown out, came as the result of his having accepted a "lift" from a passing motorist on a country road near Bloomington.

Quits Bloomington on Foot.

Dalton, after spending Friday night in the American hotel in Bloomington, was becoming more and more afraid of recognition because of the barrage of publicity sent broadcast anent his disappearance. Rather than trust himself to the scrutiny of train travelers, he left Bloomington on foot for Heyworth, twelve miles away.

The same morning James Dennis, 25 year old war veteran, now a $30 a week chauffeur employed by the W. D. Alexander Coal and Lumber company of Normal, drove into Bloomington to get a check from the Alexander company to meet a pay roll for men employed at Wapella, near Heyworth, at building a community school. The check was mailed the previous night and Dennis' trip was useless. He returned to Wapella. Five miles from Heyworth he overtook Dalton.

Offers Dalton a Lift.

Something about the lad attracted his attention, for he stopped and shouted:

"Want a ride?"

The boy hesitated, then climbed in.

"Where are you going?" Dennis asked.

"To Springfield," Dalton replied.

"Why don't you tke the railroad?"

"I don't want to go on a train," the boy answered.

In the ensuing conversation Dalton admitted he was from Chicago and finally said something about having "lots of money."

That started Dennis thinking. He had been reading of the bond robbery.

Starts Law's Machinery.

The more he thought about his young companion, the more he thought he was Dalton. He finally called up Joe Stevens, who runs a combination restaurant and pool room in Heyworth. Dalton had entered this restaurant after leaving Dennis' car. Dennis told Stevens of his suspicion, asked Stevens to keep an eye on the boy, and started in search of Paul E. Draper, who had been his particular "pal" in many a scrap on the fighting lines in France.

He told Draper about the boy. Draper hastened to his home and procured a copy of a Chicago newspaper in which appeared Dalton's picture. He went to the Stevens restaurant, where Dalton was then playing pool with a number of the village boys, and identified Dalton from the picture.

Young Draper then found "Blev" Bolin, city marshal. He took Bolin to the restaurant, pointed out Dalton, and asked Bolin to arrest him. Bolin looked at the picture, then at the boy.

"Aw, hell! that ain't him!" he said.

"I know it is," asserted Draper. "Arrest him."

"Nothing doing," said Bolin as he started to walk away.

Draper then went in search of his father, a constable. He found him, produced the picture, and took him to the restaurant. Constable Draper walked up to Dalton and said:

"Son, you're under arrest. I think you are William Dalton, wanted in Chicago for stealing bonds."

Dalton at first tried to conceal his identity.

"I'm a salesman for a book concern," he told the constable.

"Where are your samples?" the latter asked.

"Oh, I don't carry any yet," William explained. "You see, I am just starting out in this game. They want me to spend a few weeks just getting accustomed to travel. Then I'll go back to the main office for final instructions."

Suggests Visit to Judge.

The constable suggested that Dalton tell his story to "the judge."

The prisoner was taken before Justice of the Peace Brown. And with him the black bag that he had with him. It had not been opened.

"Well," said Justice Brown after the case had been presented, "let's have a look at the bag."

The "look" revealed the fortune in Liberty bonds that fairly popped from the bulging bag on the judge's bench.

"I guess you've got the goods on me," said Dalton in even tones, and without so much as a heightening of color.

He was treated as an honored guest. He had the best chair in the house. Cakes and coffee were set before him. All who wished were permitted to talk with him. Anyone might ply him with questions, and most every one did.

SOLD $500 BOND HERE

One of the bonds stolen by William Dalton was sold by him Thursday to Martens & Co., 125 West Madison street. The bond, of $500 denomination, was sold for about $440.

First word that the bond had been sold was telephoned to S. C. Stallwood, treasurer of the Northern Trust, by Charles Martens, head of the Martens company, shortly before 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Mr. Martens said he believed a bond bought by his house Thursday noon was one of those stolen and verified the number by means of the bank's list.

"I will send it right over by a messenger," he said. The bond was taken to the bank by George D. Dherekers, an employé of Martens.

Mr. Miller said the bank would stand the loss of the payment made for the bond bought by Martens & Co.

The bond was taken into the bond house at 2 o'clock Thursday, according to Mr. Martens, and was presented to Dherekers.

"Why do you want to sell the bond?" the clerk asked.

"It only pays 4½ per cent and I know of a better investment," replied the youth later identified as Dalton.

"We believe that the youth who sold the bond was Dalton," said William S. Miller, vice president of the trust company. "A Liberty bond such as he sold is worth about $437 today."

It is believed that Dalton went to the broker's office to sell the bond immediately after he had luncheon. Going out from the bank, with the package of bonds under his arm, he met another employé and had luncheon with him.

After luncheon Dalton remarked that he was not going directly back to the bank and left his companion. It is believed that he went to sell the bond immediately after leaving his companion.

DALTON'S DASH

Tribune Artist's Moviegraph of $772,000 Boy Thief's Movements from the Time He Stole Northern Trust Bonds Until Captured, Showing Each Step in Two Day Flight.

Here's Time Table of Dalton's $772,000 Flight and Capture

FOLLOWING is a detailed account of the movements of Willie Dalton and the developments in the case from the time he stole the $772,000 in Liberty bonds until he was arrested in Heyworth, Ill.:

THURSDAY, FEB. 24.

12:30 o'clock—Ate luncheon alone in Northern Trust company cafeteria.

1:15 p. m.—Returned to cage in bank's trust department, only to leave short time later.

2:30 p. m.—Bank officials observed Dalton was not present and simultaneously discovered $772,000 bonds had disappeared.

2:31 p. m.—Pinkerton Detective agency notified. Search for thief begun.

2:45 p. m.—While directors held emergency meeting in bank, detectives watched all outgoing Chicago trains.

8:30 p. m.—Dalton walked into College Inn at Naperville, engaged room, took dinner, and went to bed at 9:30 o'clock. Told hotel clerk his auto had been stalled two miles out of town and he had walked into village.

FRIDAY, FEB. 25.

7:00 a. m.—Dalton paid hotel bill with $10 bank note and walked away from Inn, carrying small black bag containing stolen fortune with him.

9:00 a. m.—Rode in bus from Naperville to Lincoln and Fox streets, Aurora, with R. C. Whittier, owner of bus service.

1:15 p. m.—Announcement of theft made to Chicago police and newspapers.

SATURDAY, FEB. 26.

7:50 a. m.—Proprietor of College Inn, Naperville, telephoned Dalton home boy had slept at his hotel Thursday night.

8 a. m.—Pinkerton agency sent several operatives in auto to Naperville, while others departed by train.

9:15 a. m.—Hotel owner was questioned by detectives and led them to Aurora; Dalton's trail picked up by asking questions of residents along way.

10:00 a.m.—Whittier informed searchers he had driven Dalton to Aurora.

10:30 a. m.—Aurora police and newspaper men instituted search for Dalton, learning of his presence there day before.

11:30 a. m.—Newsboy told of having seen Dalton near Y. M. C. A. and described interests in bank robbery news.

12 noon—Citizenry of Du Page and Kane counties out in search of Dalton.

1 p. m.—Dalton captured at Heyworth, Ill., after having passed through Bloomington unobserved. Confessed calmly and was placed in McLean county jail at Bloomington.

Polish National Daily. This youth, he said, could come at any time to the office of Chief Fitzmorris.

Olbinski is employed as a bookkeeper by the Polish National alliance, 1406 West Division street.

Chief Fitzmorris announced that he was satisfied without the appearance of "Joe" that Olbinski was not connected with the bond theft and did not know Dalton.

Just Misses a Fortune.

George Kingsley, owner of the newsstand in the interurban station in Aurora is wearing a rather long face. George, who, because of his saving proclivities, is known in Aurora as "Frugal George," let $26,000 slip out of his hands Friday. So did others, for that matter, but it hurt George most.

That morning a young man checked a black handbag with George for the sum of 10 cents. Then the young man went out and got a bite to eat and returned. George gave him the bag and smiled when the 10 cents tinkled on the counter.

SPOILS AUTO SALE CLEW

Proof that Dalton did not attempt to buy an automobile of Ray F. Mudd & Co., 210 South Kildare avenue, was offered to Chief of Police Charles C. Fitzmorris by Edward J. Olbinski, the would-be purchaser, 2840 North Sawyer avenue, yesterday morning. Olbinski showed the bonds which he had offered in payment and the receipt for $25 first payment.

Olbinski appeared in the office of Chief Fitzmorris with his attorney, Leo S. Mallek, 139 North Clark street.

He said that he was the man that had wished to purchase an automobile of M. S. Darr, salesman for the company, and offered his proof.

Companion a Chauffeur.

His companion, he said, was a youth of the name of "Joe," who was a chauffeur and mechanic in the employ of the contractor who delivered the

BANK IS "DELIGHTED"

The following statement was issued by the bank officials last night:

"Naturally, we are delighted over the capture of Dalton and the recovery of the bonds. It is a wonderful instance of the value of the press and the resourcefulness of its representatives in a matter of this sort, and we wish to express to them, as well as to the Pinkerton National Detective agency, which represented us, and to the Chicago police department our deep appreciation of the efficiency shown by all of them.

"Howard O. Edmonds and William S. Miller, vice presidents of the bank are on their way down to Bloomington to act for us.

"Of course, we will gladly pay the reward to the person entitled thereto, whoever he may be.

"SOLOMON A. SMITH, President."

HE'S MY BOY; I'LL STICK TO HIM: MRS. DALTON

Mother Rejoices at Fact Youth Is Alive.

"He's my boy, and I'll stick to him."

These were the first words uttered yesterday by Mrs. Nora Dalton, mother of William Dalton, the 16 year old youth who stole $772,000 worth of Liberty bonds from the Northern Trust company, when she heard he had been captured.

"Thank God he has been found," she added as she sank into a morris chair with a sigh of relief. "Now we will learn the truth. I am glad he is no longer a fugitive."

The scene was the modest home at 4508 Wilcox street. Mrs. Dalton's daughters, Mary and Julia, stood at either side of her, their arms about her shoulders.

Glad Her Boy Lives.

"I am thankful to THE TRIBUNE for publishing my appeal to William to give himself up," Mrs. Dalton sobbed. "I believe he did give himself up.

"He is alive, as I feared he might not be.

"I know he is not altogether to blame. There must be some one else some one who led him astray. He would never think of doing anything wrong. There must be a sinister influence in the person of some man who led him to take those bonds.

"I'm glad it's all over. Unless he greatly fears the person I think planned the theft he will tell all. Then my boy will be seen in a different light. O, how I prayed that he might not be dead or hidden away somewhere! Now I know he is safe."

Sleepless for Two Nights.

Mrs. Dalton stopped weeping. She could cry no more. The strain was over. For two nights she had not slept. Thursday night because her boy had been gone all night. Friday night because she knew of what had happened. Gradually she became quiet. And then she fell asleep.

Man with Stolen Checks Identifies Safeblower

James Cartwright, notorious safeblower, recently released from Auburn prison in New York, was arrested at Sixty-first street and Cottage Grove avenue yesterday by Detective Sergeants John Noonan and George De Mar and identified by Thomas Martin as the "James Sanders" who gave him $8,200 worth of signed travelers' checks. The checks have been identified as part of the loot obtained by six men in the holdup of the Commercial Savings bank of Moline, Ill., on Aug. 3 last.

Cartwright gave the name of Frank L. Seymour when arrested. He had been traced by A. M. De Voursney and A. T. Kolar of the Burns detective agency. Charles La Mance, 19 years old, of Durant, Okla., also was taken into custody. Cartwright declared La Mance was innocent of any connection with the holdup.

"He's simply a poor boob, like Martin, who was helping me get rid of the stuff," he said. He will be taken to Moline today.

VILLAGE PASTOR TO POINT MORAL IN YOUTH'S FALL

Mothers Will Hear Sermon Tonight.

With the spotlight of publicity playing on the little town of Heyworth, scene of the capture of William Dalton, the Rev. W. H. Elges, Presbyterian minister there, announced that he will preach a sermon tonight on the lessons to be learned from the boy bank robber.

"The town is excited over the boy," Dr. Elges said. "People here are making a popular hero of him. I talked with him for more than an hour and am going to talk to the people of the town about the lesson that this boy's deeds should bring home to every mother.

Temptation Too Great.

"He is just a boy and should not be condemned too harshly. I am not going to hold the bank officials to blame either—but boys of his age should not be tempted by vast sums of money. He is too young to have been allowed the responsibility of handling money in large sums.

"Every one in the town has fallen in love with him. While I talked to him he sat holding a cat in his lap, stroking its fur and foundling it.

Breaks at Name of Mother.

"A reference to his mother made him cast his eyes downward and choke back the sobs. This is the first time that he has showed emotion. I am going to tell the mothers of Heyworth what leads to making a bank robber of an innocent and God fearing boy. He admitted to me that he read and read mystery and detective stories and that he enjoyed thrilling moving pictures of crime.

"He is not abnormal in this liking. Every boy of his age is interested in pictures of crime and in crime stories, but they should not be allowed to feed their minds on such poisonous food.

"Every boy is just about the same until the crisis comes, and into every boy's life at least one temptation does come. It is easy to be honest until tempted. The mothers of this country should so train their sons that they will be ready to resist that temptation when it comes."

MRS. FRANZEN AND AUTHER ARE AGAIN ARRESTED

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Pierre Paul Auther, the "love bandit" and "Spanish grandee" of Highland Park, Ill., who at the point of a revolver robbed Phillip M. Franzen of his wife a month ago, was arrested in Milwaukee tonight in company with Mrs. Franzen.

The arrest was made after Detective Sergeants Moran and English of the local police department had investigated the relations of Auther and Mrs. Franzen at the Dexter house, a family hotel. They had registered as Mr and Mrs. P. C. Weber, the police say. When taken to a cell Auther refused to make any comment, while Mrs. Franzen begged for "another chance."

The two figured in a sensational elopement to St. Louis. Upon their return Franzen dropped all charges against Auther. Mrs. Franzen, however, assumed the rôle of a love martyr and announced that she would leave her husband, who lives in Madison.

Fell from Tree; Gets Big Verdict from Farmer

Paris, Ill., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—The Indstrial Court of Illinois has handed down a decision giving Edward Gill $4,507.94 and a pension of $26 per month for an indefinite term. This is the largest award ever given in southeastern Illinois. Nearly a year ago Gill was employed to trim trees for Samuel Perkins, a farmer. The man fell from a tree and was crippled for life.

NABS EX-CONVICT AFTER 2 CHASES IN LOOP STREETS

John Meehan, who gives his address as 315 South Michigan avenue—a stretch of Grant park lawn adjacent to the Art institute— was captured after two chases by the police yesterday.

Traffic Policeman Otto H. Voight was directing traffic at State and Madison streets when two young men rushed up and pointed to Meehan.

"That fellow just robbed an old man on a street car," said one of them. "We followed him."

Meehan dashed west in Madison street when he saw Voight coming. The policeman commandeered a passing automobile and overtook him. As they were about to enter the police station, Meehan jerked away and ran through several streets before he was cornered in a Randolph street barber shop. It was found he had served fourteen years in a Canadian penitentiary.

REDOUBLE HUNT FOR 'PIKER' MAIL TRAIN ROBBERS

Although a final check of the loot obtained by the robbers who, on Friday morning, held up passenger train No. 10 on the Alton railroad disclosed a loss of only a gold filled watch and a $5 bill, postal inspectors yesterday redoubled their search for the robbers.

"It makes no difference how small or large an amount was taken," said Rush D. Simmons, chief postal inspector. "The penalty is just as large for a $10 theft as for $500,000. Every effort will be made to arrest and punish those responsible."

Youth Confesses Share in $8,600 Pay Roll Theft

Harry Rogers, 2827 Warren avenue, 19 year old son of a west side automobile dealer, confessed last night, after being arrested, that he was one of three men who on Thursday morning held up L. E. Plomgren, paymaster of the Western Newspaper Union, ... South Desplaines street, and robbed him of the company's ... Rogers gave the police the names of his accomplices and they are expected to be in custody today.

Rogers confessed having taken part in more than twenty recent holdups.

4 HURT, 3 MAY DIE, AS 2 AUTOS HIT STREET CAR

Suspect One Motor in Crash Is Robbers'.

Four men were injured, three of whom may die, in an accident at Nineteenth street and Western avenue shortly before midnight last night when two automobiles and a street car crashed into each other. One of the automobiles is believed to be a bandit car.

One of the injured men was shot through the arm. The driver of one of the autos, a taxi, is missing. The other automobile was found to have been stolen Friday from Morris Olstein, 1552 South St. Louis avenue.

The man shot is Lyle Lieck, 3233 Jackson boulevard. He suffered a fractured skull, as did his companion, Roy Johnson, 2400 South Halsted street. A third man whose skull was fractured was taken to the county hospital unconscious. His name was not obtained.

The fourth man, John Goldman, 1353 South Miller avenue, was cut by glass. He was standing on the front of the Ashland avenue street car which crashed into the two machines.

Both automobiles were traveling at high speed, witnesses say. It is believed the taxicab was pursuing the other car. The police think a bullet struck the arm of the driver of the pursued auto, causing him to lose control of it.

U. S. ENGINEERS RECOMMEND P. O. FOR ENGLEWOOD

The establishment of a branch post office in Englewood and the use of the Chicago tunnel system for the transportation of parcel post mail have been recommended to the joint congressional commission on postal service by engineers employed to survey the situation here.

It was stated that the use of existing tunnels would expedite transportation and cause a saving annually of more than $200,000. The engineers also asserted that building of a branch in Englewood would expedite one-fourth of Chicago's mail by from three to twenty-four hours and save $60,000 annually in motor vehicle service.

Senator Townsend of Michigan, chairman of the commission, in submitting the report of its activities to the senate, embodied the recommendations but said no action had been taken.

Officials stated that the plans for the Englewood station were simply a further carrying out of the general plan for Chicago's postal system. No plan as to the size of the station has been announced, but postal officials here were of the opinion that at least a $2,000,000 structure would be necessary.

SHOWER OF $50 BILLS LEADS TO DOZEN ARRESTS

Gang Operates at Madison and Halsted.

Everyone was doing a big business around Halsted and Madison streets last night. Strangers were breaking $50 bills with the nonchalance of oil magnates, rounding up the "transient workers" of the west side and plying them with drinks. And every drink was paid for with a nice, crisp $50 bill.

Then the police of the Desplaines street station appeared on the scene in scores and business stopped with the same suddenness with which it had begun. Twelve men were rounded up as counterfeiters and their pockets yielded $10,000 in spurious $50 bills.

Many Bills Changed.

Great excitement reigned from Madison street south to the "Ghetto." Saloonmen, druggists, and merchants turned out the contents of their tills and many of them found that they had been victimized by the counterfeiters, who had let loose of many of the large bills.

The first arrest was made in the saloon of Harry Barnum, at 820 West Van Buren street. Barnum found that a man who was liberally buying drinks for the house had a pocket full of the bills. He became suspicious. He called the Desplaines street police and Capt. Max Danner and Lieut. Daniel Lynch started to scour the district with all the available men. The man arrested at Barnum's saloon was found to have $1,000 in $50 bills and a spurious $1,000 bill. He gave the name of William Doyle, 65 years old, of 618 West Sixty-first street. He is believed to be the ringleader of the gang.

Fight in Bank.

About this time Edward J. Lawler, cashier for the Midcity bank at Halsted and Madison streets, was scrutinizing a $50 bill a man had passed through the cage for change. After questioning the man he tried to detain him and a fight ensued.

The man, who gave his name as James Roach of 219 South Halsted street, was overpowered. Then two other men sauntered into the bank and tried to pass "fifties." They, too, were captured by the cashier. They gave the names of Albert Smith and George Miller, both of 119 South Peoria street.

The others arrested were John Stepe, 34 years old, no address; William Collins, 119 South Peoria street; Edward Duckrat, 1105 Monroe street, Joseph Winn, John McCormick, 428 South Halsted street; and three others, who would not give their names. The men had $750 in real money in their pockets.

Some of the men when questioned told that they had been handed the bills by a tall, shaggy bearded man, poorly clad, who offered them a commission. He followed them until he witnessed their arrest, then disappeared. Others told of having been given the bills by two well dressed men, who also are said to have followed them from saloon to saloon and in several instances "cashed in" before the police arrived.

Police Kept Busy.

A raid was made on 119 South Peoria street, but nothing was found. The district was kept filled with policemen and the numerous complaints were carefully listed. An effort is being made to find the printing plant and headquarters for the gang.

The men will be turned over to the government officials today, Capt. Danner said, and all who have recently received suspicious $50 bills are asked to call the federal building and try to identify the men.

CROWE SLEUTHS ARREST FIFTY IN GAMBLING RAIDS

Detectives from State's Attorney Crowe's office, in charge of Sergt. William Baldwin, last night raided several gambling house. They arrested fifty men and seized a large quantity of betting sheets and gaming paraphernalia. Among the places raided were the following:

McGarry's cigar store, southwest corner Clark and South Water streets. Seven men and McGarry were taken. McGarry was indicted on a gambling charge several weeks ago.

Saloon and restaurant, northwest corner Wells and Van Buren streets. Fifteen men were taken. Henry Bock was arrested as the keeper.

Saloon of Finnegan & Shannon, Root street and Emerald avenue. Twenty men were taken into custody.

Manor hotel, 12 West Van Buren street, where three were arrested.

While the raids were in progress Jacob Abrahams of 164 West Ontario street, walked into Mr. Crowe's office and complained to Chief Investigator Ben Newmark, that he had been "taken" for $600 in a stud poker game in the basement poolroom of George Stephan, 704 North Clark street. Detectives raided the place, arrested Stephan, and booked him as the keeper of a gambling house.

Four men and two women were arrested by Chicago avenue police in the rooming house of Mrs. Jennie Phale, 703 North Wells street.

BARI PROVINCE NEAR CIVIL WAR, IS ROME REPORT

ROME, Feb. 26.—The situation in the province of Bari is very grave as a result of the clashes between Socialists and members of the Fascisti, or extreme Nationalist party. The struggle is assuming a dangerous aspect, says a dispatch from Bari to the ministerialist newspaper Tempo today. The general strike proclaimed by the Socialists has extended to many communes.

The town of Minervino Murge has civil war, according to the dispatch, and armed bands overrun the country side causing bloody encounters. At Terlizzi, Putignano, and Noci, when the Socialists attempted to storm an agrarian

At Conversano a dozen were wounded soldiers.

At Conevrsano a dozen were wounded, Lieut. Calcaterra fatally.

"The situation in Bari is not entirely the fault of the peasants," says the Tempo, "but is largely due to the refusal of the land owners to make promised concessions following the war.

THE FLIGHT AND CAPTURE OF $772,000

The machine, purchased with the proceeds from one of the stolen bonds, broke down in front of a farmhouse near Naperville, and Dalton was forced to se ek other means of transportation. The farmer refused to keep him over night.

"IT WAS EASY," YOUTH BOASTS OF BIG ROBBERY

the loop with all those bonds in the satchel.

Then I made up my mind to go through with it. I walked over to Martens & Co. and asked them to buy the bond. I told them I had saved it up and needed the money now and asked them to cash it.

They asked me a lot of questions, but I didn't have any real trouble. They counted opt $437 in currency and I turned over the bond. There was no suspicion that there was anything wrong. I was watching them closely and was ready to run, but I didn't have to.

Concludes to Go South.

After I got the cash I felt better. I started to figure on the route for my getaway. It was cold that day and I wanted to get south.

I never have been down in the southern states and it looked like a good place to go.

I went over to the automobile sales place where I was the night before and bought the car. I didn't get a new one because I wanted to avoid suspicion.

They showed me how to run the car and after an hour I struck out, going first to Naperville.

After I got there I went to a hotel. I went to bed early and slept soundly. Nobody bothered me—nobody asked me any questions.

On to Aurora.

Friday morning I ate breakfast at a restaurant there and walked over to the interurban line station. I bought a ticket for Aurora. I walked around there for a while and then went to Joliet.

Then I got to thinking that perhaps I was a little too close to Chicago for comfort. I went over to the station and purchased a ticket for Dwight, the end of the line for the little stub train that was the next one to go out.

I walked in the car and sat down. In front of me a man was reading a paper. On the front page, right hand column, was one of my pictures.

That was the greatest shock that I'd had. It was the first time I'd really realized just what I had done. I almost ran up to the newsboy at the head of the train to get a copy.

I sat down and read it. And I began to see that I was in pretty bad. However, I knew I was in for it, and decided to keep on trusting to luck not to get caught.

Buys Ticket to Bloomington.

I didn't leave the depot at Dwight—just bought a ticket for Bloomington. When I got there I took a bus to the biggest hotel there. It was 9:15 in the evening when I got into the hotel. The lobby looked fine, but I figured out that perhaps it was a little too stylish for me and might attract attention to me, so I went out, walked around the block and came to a rooming house, where I spent the night.

I woke up this morning without any appetite, although I had a good night's rest. I went to a restaurant and tried to eat, but somehow my thoughts always turned back to Chicago—and my mother.

Everybody a Detective.

I was nervous, too. I fancied every one I saw was a detective. The day before I had thought that two men I saw on the platform at Dwight were dicks, but I wasn't sure. From that time every person I saw was a policeman to me. I was scared. I wished I hadn't taken the bonds. In fact I thought I would send all the bonds back to the bank but about $20,000 worth. If I was lucky I would travel a while and see the world.

I didn't dare to take a train from Bloomington, so I grabbed my satchel and walked out of town.

About five miles out a man came up behind me in an automobile and asked if I wanted a lift. I thanked him and climbed in. We talked about everything under the sun almost except the robbery. I could see him looking at me every once in a while rather peculiarly, and I thought perhaps I had given myself away. It was the pictures in the newspapers, though, I guess.

First Subject of Suspicion.

I found out afterward that this man, who I now know was Mr. Dennis of Bloomington, told Draper, the man who arrested me, that there was something wrong with me and that he had better keep an eye on me.

When we got to Heyworth Dennis told me that was as far as he was going. I thanked him again and left the machine. Just across the street was a restaurant. I had a little lunch and then I saw a pool table in the same room and finally got into a game with one of the boys. We played for perhaps an hour.

The farmer boys down there are not slow at the game and time passed quickly. Then Draper came in.

I noticed him come into the hall several times and look me over. I also saw that he had a Chicago paper with him and looked first at me and then at the paper. I knew at once that it was all off. However, I did not try to get away, but kept on at the game and wondered why they did not come and get me.

By this time I was rather wishing they would take me, as I was getting so rattled I was willing to give myself up and take my medicine. Finally Draper came in again with his father and the two men told me that I was under arrest.

Knew He Was the Real Thing.

He wore a big star and I knew that he was the real thing. I asked him to let me finish the game, but he refused. I then went along with him. He took me to his house. I guess that the calaboose in Heyworth is not much of a jail and perhaps they were afraid that I would get away. There wasn't any danger. I was through and willing to get back to Chicago and take my medicine. They certainly treated me fine at Heyworth. I had a real country dinner, and the best was none too good for me. The house was surrounded by curious people all day, and I enjoyed the excitement my arrest had caused.

I don't know what they'll do with me. But I can say this—I'm through. I'll plead guilty and take my punishment. I've never been in trouble before and never thought about doing a dishonorable thing. I've the finest kind of a mother, and I know this has broken her heart.

I'd like to go in the army or the navy, if they'd let me. I know it would make a man out of me—that would be lots better than what I am now.

Wanted to Be a Lawyer.

I wanted to be a lawyer, but now I am a criminal. I have been studying geometry, English, and Latin at the Y. M. C. A. I took my studies there after going to work for the bank. I had previously been in high school, four months at Austin High. There isn't much chance of my becoming a lawyer now. If I have to go to Pontiac I guess I'll study to be an electrician if they'll let me.

I just finished reading Ivanhoe and liked it fine, but Kipling is my favorite author. Everybody asks me if I ran with a tough crowd, read trash stories and go to movie thrillers.

Well, I didn't get this robbery inspiration from anything like that. Outside of my school books I haven't read much the last year. I am not a movie fan, but like Mary Pickford's pictures. I like to play pool. They have a table at the bank and I sometimes play at the Y. M. C. A. I have never been inside a public dance hall.

This is the first wrong move of any consequence that I have ever made. I am making a clean confession, as truthful as when I went to St. Mel's church three weeks ago to confess to the priest there. I hate to drag my family or any of my friends into this by even mentioning them.

American Army Service Doesn't Make Jap Citizen

Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 26.—Service in the United States army does not entitle an alien otherwise ineligible to citizenship to become naturalized, the Third District Court of Appeals held here today. The decision was in the case of Ichizo Zato, a Japanese, who sought to register as a voter. He had been admitted to citizenship in Hawaii after service in the army.

WIFE'S SUICIDE EFFORT BRINGS MARITAL PEACE

Kalamazoo, Mich., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Mr. and Mrs. Edward Raymond of Chicago are going to try it over again. The young couple left Kalamazoo today for Chicago after Mrs. Raymond had fully recovered from the carbolic acid burns which she inflicted following a quarrel here several days ago. The couple had been estranged since last summer, and Mrs. Raymond followed her husband to Kalamazoo to effect a reconciliation.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 26.—Michigan experienced its first severe blizzard of the winter today. Starting late last night and continuing throughout the day, the snow tonight had reached a depth of eight to twelve inches.

What's World Coming To? Zion's Chief Tastes Beer

Zion City, Ill., Feb. 26.—Theodore Becker, chief of police here and a member of the Christian Catholic Apostolic church in Zion, tasted beer today for the first time in twenty-three years.

"I had to taste it in order to test it," he explained. "In my opinion it contained more than ½ of 1 per cent alcohol."

The beer, according to the chief, was found in the home of R. McComsay.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 26.

Army and navy appropriation bills carrying approximately $840,000,000 are in danger of entanglement in the legislative log jam in the closing days of the congress.

The state department is trying to run to earth a gang of passport swindlers who are selling forged passports and American visés to undesirable aliens.

The house and senate today agreed to the conference report on the Dillingham immigration bill and it now goes to the president.

State department officials denied today reports that Ambassador Geddes of Great Britain is undertaking to mediate the dispute between United States and Japan over the island of Yap.

The house approved the conference report on the emergency agricultural tariff bill and the senate will take action on Monday.

Herbert Hoover, who will be the new secretary of commerce, held a conference with Secretary of Commerce Alexander.

President Wilson signed the Winslow bill making available to the railroads $370,000,000 in payments from the government guarantee fund.

Two Year Prison Terms for Marines After Raid

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—The United States marines, who recently raided a newspaper office at Managua, Nicaragua, have been found guilty by court martial and have been given sentences of two years' imprisonment and dishonorable discharge, the navy department was informed tonight in a message from Rear Admiral Henry F. Bryan. The men all pleaded guilty.

CANAL 'BALKANS' WAR MAY HIT ENTIRE ISTHMUS

Colombians Clamor for Costa Rican Strife.

PANAMA, Feb. 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—Hostilities between Panama and Costa Rica showed possibilities this afternoon of developing into a conflict involving all of central America and Colombia.

Leading Colombians, residing in Panama, have sent a wireless message to Bogota asking the Colombian government to furnish them with arms so they may enlist against Costa Rica.

They also ask the Colombian government what action it is willing to take officially to protect Panama against Costa Rica, which is a member of the recently formed union of central American states. The other members are Guatemala, Salvador, and Honduras.

Panama is ready to declare war on Costa Rica, and rival forces have clashed near Coto, on the Pacific coast of the Panaman-Costa Rican frontier.

President Belisario Porras of Panama has signed the war proclamation and is awaiting action by the national assembly, which he expects will vote for war and will grant necessary credits.

In Doubt About Arms.

It has been the popular belief that the United States representatives here held thousands of rifles turned over under the Hay-Varilla treaty and that the volunteers rushing to e. t would be armed with these weapons. At the American legation it was said, however, that some of these rifles had been returned to the Panaman government and that more than 1,500 others had been sold.

The Panaman government wants U. S. war materials in lieu of these.

Officials of the Canal zone and of the American legation are without instructions from Washington. A conference was to be held this afternoon between President Porras, William Jennings Price, United States minister, and Col. Jay J. Morrow, acting canal governor, but it was postponed until Monday.

The Rival Claims.

Costa Rica has taken territory claimed by it under the arbitration decision of Chief Justice White of the United States Supreme court. The United States has guaranteed the territorial integrity of Panama and the Panaman government claims the disputed land under a decision given by President Loubet of France.

It is known the Sinclair Oil interests have been conducting drilling operations in the same general locality where concessions have been granted to a British corporation by the Costa Rica government.

Hope to Avert War.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—Officials of the state department tonight began consideration of steps to take in case it should be necessary to attempt to avert war between Panama and Costa Rica. The disposition is to let the Harding administration handle the situation.

Benjamin Franklin Invented Bifocals

When Franklin reached the time of life when he found he needed one pair of glasses for reading and another for distance, he had both pairs of lenses made, sawed them in two lengthwise, put the reading-half lenses in the lower part of the frames and the distance-half lenses in the upper, and had the first bifocal (double vision) glasses ever made.

Kryptok Glasses, the invisible bifocals, are the most modern development of the bifocal idea. We endorse and guarantee Kryptoks, as supplied at the Almer Coe Stores.

At your wish these beautiful lenses will be shown and demonstrated.

IRISH ARMY TO ADOPT RULE OF BRITISH FORCE

Enemy to Be Shot for Carrying Arms.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Documents captured at the Irish republican headquarters in Dublin, which tell of plans decided upon at a meeting held in Cork, were made public today. They include the following suggestions by Irish army leaders:

"In areas where hostages are carried in enemy lorries or otherwise, members of enemy forces, whether armed or unarmed, to be shot on sight.

"Following the enemy's proclamation that our troops are to be shot if found armed, the enemy is to be similarly dealt with by our troops."

"Ask general headquarters to decide what punishment shall be meted out to deserters.

"Suggest that general headquarters publicly declare our troops in active service.

"Ask general headquarters to issue a list of offenses which will incur capital punishment.

Food from America.

"Point out to general headquarters that a food ship has arrived from America and that we consider it advisable to get a shipment for our flying columns in this way.

"Also do the utmost to get the Cork relief fund from America extended to all parts of Ireland, so that unemployment will be relieved and help be extended to uninsured owners of property destroyed by the enemy."

Further records showed that the general staff decided to "make all roads impassable for the enemy" by exploding mines in them and ordering the county councils to make no repairs.

"Snipe all enemy outposts one night a week and constantly during the day," one document said."

VILLAGE WIPED OUT

BY JOHN LESTER.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

DUBLIN, Feb. 26.—Ballylongford, a prosperous little village in the north of County Kerry, has been entirely wiped out by crown forces, who burned seventeen shops out of twenty and the village creamery. Machine gun fire of the British swept the village street, and this, with the shouting of the incendiaries, caused terror in the district, and women and children fled from their homes in night attire. The place is now deserted.

The number of creameries destroyed by the British in Ireland now totals fifty-one. Houses and shops demolished in Donegal by crown forces total fifty-two. About forty others were damaged. Four shops and a creamery were destroyed at Mount Charles, County Donegal, by crown forces.

TELLS OF IRISH PLAN.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—Circumstances surrounding the "murder of defenseless Irish citizens by the constabulary and military" from Jan. 1 to Feb. 21 are contained in a list printed by the Sinn Fein Bulletin today.

Eight of those killed, according to the list, were boys under 17 and five were men over 50. Twenty-eight cases are described as deliberate assassinations. Details are given to show that most of the men were shot for attempting to evade arrest or refusing to halt.

With reference to two men who were killed on Feb. 20, the paper says they were savagely beaten at Dublin Castle, taken to Clontirk Park, where tins were placed over their heads, and shot at close range.

The Bulletin also gives signed statements of prisoners awaiting trial in the Wexford military barracks, in which they declare they have been tortured for refusing to work.

SOCIETY'S MAT SHOW YIELDS CHARITY $23,741

Mrs. Marshall Field, Maj. Frederic McLaughlin and Harold E. Foreman, promoters of the charity wrestling contests, last night issued the following statement:

"Audit of our books shows a net cash profit of $23,741.26 was realized from the charity wrestling contests at the Coliseum on Washington's birthday anniversary. This gives the three beneficiaries—St. Vincent's Orphan asylum, the Home for Destitute Crippled Children and the Country Home for Convalescent Children—$7,913.75 each.

"We take this opportunity of expressing our appreciation of the public support accorded this project, a support that made it possible to execute the plans successfully in less than thirty days.

"We acknowledge with gratitude the inestimable services rendered by Harry M. Grabiner, business manager of the White Sox, who generously gave us his time and took charge of the issuing and sale of tickets, and by Joseph M. Coffey, official matchmaker, to whose experience and ability both I and the public owe the splendid wrestling matches furnished on that occasion.

"Both of these gentlemen were most generous to the cause of the crippled children, donating their time and ability.

"These sums will mean many added comforts for the helpless and crippled children, a thought which should be pleasing to all."

Singers Honor Johnson on Departure for Europe

New York, Feb. 26.—Herbert M. Johnson, former director of the Chicago Opera company, and his wife were given a spirited bon voyage by a score of members of the company on their departure for the Mediterranean in the steamship Canopic. The opera singers showered the stateroom with flowers and fruit, and presented Mr. Johnson with a gold jewelled cigarette case containing a watch. He declined to discuss reports that he would bring back an Italian Opera company next season

The program will be given by both the students and their friends from the foreign communities of the city for the benefit of the International and Cosmopolitan clubs. There will be English, Swedish, Bohemian, Filipino, and American folk dancing, and a playlet, "Our Neighbors," will be presented by the Bohemian Girls' club. The Morris dancer will be Miss Dora Kirchenbaum, chairman of the program committee. Harry Shulman is general director.

FARMER'S CHICKS SOON MAY BRING PEACE TO ERIN

Raided Henhouse Stirs British Commons.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Feb. 26.—A cabinet crisis so acute as to endanger the life of the British coalition government has been caused by Mrs. Charles' chickens.

Moreover, these chickens may accomplish the housecleaning of Ireland which the strongest politicians of England have failed to bring about. Mrs. Charles and her husband live on their farm near Trim, Ireland. On Feb. 9 thirty black and tans raided the farm for arms and found none, but they carried off the chickens, some whisky, silver, and much other loot.

Expelled Offenders.

Gen. Crozier, commandant of the black and tans, heard of the looting and expelled thirty offenders, who then appealed to Gen. Tudor.

British officials allege that Gen. Crozier really was responsible for lack of discipline in his command and was about to be relieved and that he took this opportunity to resign and attack his superior officers.

If this is so, he has been very successful for his actions have brought the whole Irish situation into sharp focus and may give Prime Minister Lloyd George the opportunity, for which he is said to have been looking, for disowning those responsible for the dragooning of Ireland and instituting a more gentle regime.

To Be Debated Tuesday.

The whole matter is to be debated in the house of commons next Tuesday.

The London Times today contains long letters from Lord Bryce and Lord Gladstone denouncing the régime of repression in Ireland and calling for a change of policy at least for the sake of the British reputation abroad, particularly in America.

IRISH REPUBLIC FOES ALSO U. S. FOES, WOLFE SAYS

Richard C. Wolfe, chairman of the commission on Irish independence, spoke yesterday at the weekly luncheon of the Irish Fellowship club at the Hotel La Salle.

"The enemies of the Irish republic are the enemies of the American republic," he said. "The money and business of the country are tied up in the hands of a few, who most assuredly are enemies of democracy and of the American republic."

He advocated public ownership of public utilities and passage of an inheritance law, saying this is the only way to remove unrest.

Judge Fixes Whisky Prices—For Hospitals

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 26.—Good whisky was quoted in Philadelphia yesterday at a little more than 4 cents a drink. A barrel of it could be bought for $120 and a gallon for $3. Pure alcohol brought 40 cents a gallon. Judge J. Whitaker Thompson, in Federal District court, fixed the price. The whisky was allotted to hospitals in Philadelphia, Norristown and Reading, Pa.

CHICAGO MEDICS STUDY HOSPITALS IN BUENOS AIRES

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 26.—Drs. Thomas J. Watkins and Franklin H. Martin of Chicago have arrived here to study Argentine hospitals and to establish closer relations between the United States and South American medical professions. The latter aim will be aided through the extension of fellowships to South American medical students to the American College of Surgeons at Chicago, whereof thirty-five have already been awarded.

Dr. Martin said the average South American surgeon, because of his knowledge of several languages, his international education, and his professional information, was far in advance of the average American surgeon. He said that one reason for establishing closer relations was that many North American doctors wish to come to South America to study South American professional methods.

PUBLICITY ENDS REVOLT PLAN OF KAISER'S FRIENDS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 26.—Although there is considerable running to cover as a result of the recent exposure of revolutionary plotting by Hugo Stinnes' newspaper, the Allgemeine Zeitung, it is becoming more and more evident that the right wing monarchist crowd planned a revolution should Germany's counter proposals at the London conference fail to save the country from what is considered industrial ruin.

Evidence has been found of numerous meetings attended by officers in Bavaria and Berlin, where the revolution was discussed. Care was taken that not a word should be written. All business was transacted by courier. So far no political leaders, either Bavarian or Prussian, have been implicated.

It is generally admitted that the exposure made by Stinnes' organ absolutely smashed preparations for a coup d'etat.

Mrs. Chamberlin's Body Cremated; Cult Case Ends

The body of Mrs. Nancy Marie Chamberlin, 81 years old, 1547 East Fifty-seventh street, was cremated Friday night at Montrose cemetery at the request of her grandson, Frederick Townsend of Grand Rapids, Mich.

Mrs. Chamberlin was the mother of Mrs. Achsah Townsend and the grandmother of Marian Townsend, whose strange cult beliefs prompted them to bury her in the back yard of their studio home when she died last June. The body was exhumed recently when Mrs. Chamberlin's unexplained disappearance caused an inquiry.

British Miners Must Sign New Pay Contracts

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Coal mine owners have decided to give a two weeks' notice of the termination of the contract with the miners. This means the miners will be obliged to make new contracts without government intervention. It also means the end of war time wages.

2 BILLION MARKS YEARLY GERMANY OFFERS, REPORT

Wants Nations to Buy Teuton Bonds.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Feb. 26.—Following Foreign Minister Simon's conference with reichstag party leaders before leaving for London, I am enabled from reliable unofficial sources to obtain a forecast of the German counter proposals which will be made regarding reparations. The most surprising part of the memorandum, which the experts at the conference drew up, is that no definite sum is mentioned.

Various Sums Named.

Until today various sums have been named, ranging from 30,000,000,000 [about $7,500,000,000] to 100,000,000,000 gold marks [$25,000,000,000]. Certain points in the counter proposals, as now obtainable, follow:

One, a delay of six months is asked in which entente and German experts will discuss a definite sum in accordance with the procedure fixed by the Versailles treaty, and not by the Paris conference.

Two, Germany will pay 2,000,000,000 gold marks [$500,000,000] annually, beginning at once, which will be a guarantee of Germany's good faith.

Offer of German Bonds.

Three, the entente will be offered bonds entitling the nations to share in Germany's industry. The amount of the bonds have not been determined, but the maximum must not exceed one-third the value of the whole German industry.

Fourth—Germany will ask that the indemnity be set at certain equal sums payable annually, instead of lumping the sum, on which interest would be compounded for many years. In accordance with the fourth point, Germany hopes the payments will be eased, just as Germany's indemnity against France enabled a quick and easy settlement. The Germans figure that the Paris conference considered from 42,000,000,000 to 50,000,000,000 gold marks complete indemnity, which, with compounded interest, would become more than 200,000,000,000 gold marks. The Germans are seeking to avert paying the interest.

Third Point "Brilliant."

The German experts with whom I have spoken believe that the third point is the most brilliant in the counter proposals. However, this point has caused a bitter dispute among industrialists and economists. One group has rejected it as being impracticable, while another, headed by Walter Rathenau, seconds the program. Opponents of the proposal declare that the signing away of a third of German industry goes beyond the economic capacity of nations.

The government has assured the public that the delegation cannot definitely settle the indemnity. Dr. Simons is the only cabinet minister going to London. The delegation must bring the agreement to Germany for discussion by the whole cabinet.

GREECE TO O. K. TREATY

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The probable ratification of the Sevres treaty by the constituent assembly at Athens is Greece's reply to the supreme council's demand that she promise to abide by the results of the investigation of a commission in Smyrna and Thrace and to surrender those provinces to Turkey if the investigators should so recommend.

Speaking for Premier Kalogeropoulos, who is ill in bed, suffering from influenza, his secretary, M. Caftanzoglu, this afternoon said he had just received coded dispatches from Athens that the assembly would ratify the treaty.

Greece Is Defiant.

M. Caftanzoglu declared that Greece would maintain Smyrna as long as she has a drachma, regardless of whether the allies helped financially and despite any economic blockade which they might institute.

The advance guard of the German delegation arrived at the Hotel Savoy this afternoon and began installing filing cabinets, typewriters and other office fixtures. Their diplomatic baggage, which was sealed, was not opened by the customs authorities.

A group of the secretaries spent the afternoon visiting the spots in London which had been hit by bombs from Zeppelins and aeroplanes. They were astounded to find so little evidence of damage.

HEAR ARMENIA'S PLEA.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—The hearing to both the Armenians and the Turks was given by a committee of the supreme council, which went into the future of Turkish Armenia and Kurdistan. The Armenians, in presenting their case, based it upon the treaty of Sevres, and expressed confidence that their full independence would be recognized.

The Turks, it is understood, asked guarantees for the safety of minorities in the district along the Turkish-Persian frontier.

LORD MILNER SCORES COUP DE COEUR; WEDS LADY EDWARD CECIL

LORD MILNER. LADY MILNER.
[Central News Photo.]

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Viscount Milner, the recently retired secretary of state for the colonies, was married today to Lady Edward Cecil, widow of Col. Lord Edward Cecil.

The marriage occurred at St. James' church, Paddington.

The wedding came as a surprise to social circles, nothing having been given out in advance regarding it.

Lord Milner's bride is Violet Georgianna, daughter of the late Admiral Frederick Augustus Maxse. She married in 1894 Col. Lord Edward Herbert Gascoyne-Cecil, fourth son of the third marquis of Salisbury, and brother of Lord Robert and Lord Hugh Cecil, and of the Bishop of Exter. Lord Edward Cecil fought with distinction in numerous of the Egyptian and African campaigns and in 1912 was appointed financial adviser to the Egyptian government. He died in 1918.

Dry Swiss Lakes Reveal Ages Old Dwellings

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1921.]

GENEVA, Feb. 26.—The extraordinary drought in Switzerland, which has continued since last September, has lowered the lake waters so much that archaeologists are engaged in examining the interesting old lacustrine or pile dwellings dating back to the stone age for which the Swiss lakes are noted.

Many persons have volunteered to help excavating for remains of these ancient dwellings, which, according to Dr. Keller, chief Swiss authority on the subject, ceased to be inhabited about the first century of the Christian era.

Steamer traffic is at a standstill due to the low waters.

British Railways Earn $64,105,000 During 1919

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The Ministry of Transportation report, just issued, states that the gross earnings of the railways in the United Kingdom during 1919 were £199,879,000 (normally about $999,395,000), the expenditures £187,058,000 ($935,290,000), and the net receipts £12,821,000 ($64,105,000).

REVOLT GRIPS HALF OF RUSSIA; WORKMEN RISING

Rule of Reds Attacked, Washington Hears.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—Hunger and increasing distrust of the Bolshevik régime have caused peasant uprisings in about half the provinces of Soviet Russia, according to reports to the state department today. The uprisings are spreading in the Ural, the Ukraine and the central provinces, the reports added.

A general strike has been threatened in Petrograd, where demands for greater freedom for labor, cessation of the food requisitions on the railways and highways and less rigid trade restrictions have been made by the workmen, the report said.

For New Polish War.

In a speech said to have the approval of all the Russian generals present, War Minister Trotzky declared the disastrous economic and domestic situation was forcing Russia to continue war and that an army of 2,000,000 men is needed.

"Peace must be signed as late as possible with Poland, so that we may gain time," he was quoted as saying. "When we are ready we shall find a pretext, even if peace is signed, to attack her."

Germany Munitions Source.

"Our relations with Germany," Trotzky continued, "must be maintained at all costs. She is our best munition provider.

"Do not let us excite Japan, which is becoming a menace to America, and which, if it allies itself to Germany, as, after all, would be natural, might be of great help to us, with the latter, in our war in the near east."

MUTINY AT KRONSTADT.

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Details of the recent mutiny of soviet sailors at Kronstadt, says the Central News' Helsingfors correspondent today, lead to the belief that the crews of the soviet battleship Andrie Pervosvanni, the battle cruiser Petropavlovsk, the cruisers Rossiya, Admiral Makaroff, Oleg and Aurora and several gunboats took part in the revolt and murdered several commissaries.

Soviet troops sent against the mutineers were unable to cope with them, the correspondent declares, and the government is trying to reach a peaceable agreement with the seamen.

Reds Fire on Strikers.

RIGA, Letvia, Feb. 26.—Artillery and machine gun firing in Nanovolkov, a suburb of Moscow, in connection with the strike begun Thursday by 14,000 employés of the government works and various industries, is reported in a dispatch from Moscow today.

Chinese Bankers Loan Big Fund to Build Mint

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

SHANGHAI, Feb. 26.—A Chinese banking group, or internal consortium, has advanced a loan of $2,500,000 to the government for the construction of a mint at Shanghai. This loan is significant since the building of a mint is the first step toward stabilizing the currency of the nation. It is also the third loan made within the last two months for constructive purposes by the native banking group. Many of the prime movers in the group are Chinese educated in America.

6 Escaped Soldiers Picked Up in Small Boat at Sea

MANILA, P. I., Feb. 26.—Six American soldiers, believed to have escaped a week ago from Fort Wint, near here, have been picked up at sea in a small boat and taken by steamer to Miri, in Sarawak, British North Borneo, according to cable advices. They will be returned here.

1921 Will Reward FIGHTERS

BUSINESS MEN OPPOSE LEVY ON EXCESS PROFITS

Tax Retards Progress of Readjustment.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Organized business, as represented by nearly 2,000 associations in the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, overwhelmingly favors repeal of the excess profits tax, but is unable to agree on a substitute therefor.

In a referendum, the results of which were made public by the chamber today, the organization rejected a sales tax, increase of income taxes, and a tax on undistributed earnings, and approved only an excise tax, which would not produce sufficient revenue as a substitute for the excess profits tax.

Against Profits Tax.

In the chamber's referendum system a two-thirds vote is necessary to carry. The propositions submitted and the vote of the organizations on each follow:

"1. The excess profits tax should be repealed. For, 1,718; against, 44. Carried.

"2. Revenues now derived from the excess profits tax should be obtained mainly from taxes on incomes. For, 671; against, 1,004. Not carried.

"3. There should be excise taxes upon some articles of wide use, but not of first necessity. For, 1,217; against, 504. Carried.

"4. Should a sales tax be levied instead of the taxes mentioned in propositions 2 and 3? For, 704; against, 855. Not carried.

"5. Should a sales tax be levied in addition to such taxes as are mentioned in propositions 2 and 3? For, 763; against, 894. Not carried.

Type of Sales Tax.

"6. Members voting in favor of question 4 or question 5 are requested to indicate the type of sales tax they advocate:

"[a] A general turnover tax. For, 511.

"[b] A limited turnover tax. For, 180.

"[c] A retail sales tax. For, 541.

"7. There should be a moderate and graduated undistributed earnings tax on corporations. For, 640; against, 1,063. Not carried.

"8. Each individual stockholder of a corporation should pay his own normal tax. For, 693; against, 975. Not carried.

"9. Income from any new issues of securities which may lawfully be made subject to federal tax should be taxable. For, 1,386; against, 275. Carried.

"10. American residents resident abroad should be exempt from the American tax upon incomes derived abroad and not remitted to the United States. For, 1,252; against, 456. Carried.

On Capital Assets.

"11. Profits arising from sales of capital assets should be allocated over the period in which earned and taxed at the rates for the several years in the period. For, 1,411; against, 243. Carried.

"12. An exchange of property of a like or similar nature should be considered merely as a replacement. For, 1,547; against, 142. Carried.

"13. Net losses and inventory losses in any taxable year should cause redetermination of taxes on income of the preceding year. For, 1,350; against, 328. Carried.

"14. Ascertainment by the government of any tax based on income should precede payment. For, 1,215; against, 479. Carried.

"15. Administration of income taxation should be decentralized. For, 1,321; against, 390. Carried.

Retards Readjustment.

"The vote makes it clear that business men are united in their view that the excess profits tax hampers business operations and retards the progress of readjustment," says the chamber.

The vote against the sales tax is significant in view of the strong agitation that has been going on throughout the country for some form of this kind of levy. Arguments for the tax, as contained in the referendum, held that difficulties of administration of the tax would not be so numerous as in administration of the excess profits tax; that it would have great practical value in that the business man would know exactly what he must turn over to the government, and that under it fewer persons would escape taxation. Objections pointed out were that a turnover tax would be extremely difficult of administration and that it would be pyramided; that it would work to the advantage of larger industrial establishments and that it would be unfair to persons at the bottom of the economic scale on whom it would fall disproportionately heavier than on those who enjoy a wider margin between income and necessary expenditures, and finally, that there were legal difficulties in the way.

"Easy to Escape from Jail," Says Recaptured Boy

Earl McMahon, 19 years old, 1648 Arcade place, one of five youths who escaped from the "bull pen" of the Boys' court several days ago, was captured in a raid upon a house at 1261 West Washington boulevard Friday night.

"It was easy," said he of the escape. "The door was open, and we just walked out. It was the easiest escape from jail that I ever heard of."

McMahon was first captured after a revolver battle by Policeman George Hespen, who found him with two companions attempting to rob a drug store at Twenty-first and Robey streets.

Auto Owners Must Also Be Biographers of Car

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 26.—Every automobile owner would be required to obtain from the secretary of state a "certificate of ownership" showing the history of his machine from the time it came from the factory, in order to obtain an automobile license in Michigan under a bill introduced by Representative Byrum, Leslie.

FOUR EVANSTON HOMES ROBBED; LOOT IS $10,000

Silverware, Wines, Rugs, and Tires Stolen.

Loot worth approximately $10,000 was obtained by burglars who early yesterday visited the fashionable district in Evanston and robbed four homes, according to reports received by Evanston police. They left no clews. The following homes were entered:

Gilbert Rech, 1415 Chicago avenue, assistant treasurer of the Harris Trust and Savings bank; loot, $5,000.

R. H. Aishton, 1710 Wesley avenue, former president of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad; loot, $3,000.

A. H. Wilhoft, 2537 Ashland avenue, insurance agent; loot, $800.

G. N. Neis, 1633 Lincoln street; loss $700.

Pry Open Windows.

Entrance was gained at each of the homes by prying open a window in the rear of the house, and the authorities are of the belief that the same gang committed all four burglaries.

At the Rech home the burglars ransacked the house, but carried away only silverware. At the Wilhoft home the burglars obtained rugs and silverware.

Caretaker Late in Reporting.

The burglary at the Aishton and Neis homes was not reported until late yesterday afternoon. The Aishton family is in California and a caretaker is in charge. When he entered the house yesterday morning he found the place ransacked.

The caretaker notified R. A. Aishton, 610 Forest avenue, son of R. H. Aishton, who made a thorough investigation of the house. He found five automobile cord tires missing from the garage, considerable silverware removed from the cabinets, and a large quantity of wines gone.

Silverware worth $75 in addition to other articles of value were missing from the Neis home.

U. S. Slacker Safe in Germany

GROVER C. BERGDOLL. ISAAC STECHER.

Two Americans are still in a German jail as a result of the unsuccessful attempt to kidnap Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, the draft dodger, at Eberbach, Baden, last month.

Bergdoll was convicted and sentenced for five years in the penitentiary. His lawyers got him released from the Fort Jay military prison last May to recover money he claimed to have buried in the mountains near Philadelphia. By getting his guards drunk he managed to escape. He and his chauffeur, Isaac Stecher, made their way to Germany by shipping from Canada.

Charles Neaf and Frank Zimmer of Denver, Colo., of the intelligence section of the American army of occupation, tried to kidnap Bergdoll at Eberbach, but failed and were arrested.

WIFE DIES SO HE MAY MARRY GIRL AND ESCAPE CELL

"Bill Kind to Me; Let Him Give Her Baby a Name."

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 26.—Mrs. Ethel Younger ended her life today so that her husband, William F. Younger, could escape the penitentiary and marry a girl who had preferred a charge against him, according to a letter she wrote during her last conscious hour.

The letter, addressed to friends, says: "With me gone, my Bill can marry the girl and they can have their little baby and he won't have to go to the penitentiary.

"I simply cannot stand that. I could not have Billy locked up for five or ten years. He was good to me. He was just as nice as could be. I loved him so much and he acted the same to me. I have no complaint.

"He gave me all his money and was awful good, so I still love him and this is the only way I can help him. He must marry her and it will save him from jail. Why, I couldn't sleep nights if I thought he was in jail."

Younger, who was arrested, denied the girl's charge.

MISS ALLEN WED TO BRITISH WAR VETERAN IN N. Y.

New York, Feb. 26.—[Special.]—The wedding of Miss Beatrice Van Fleet Allen, daughter of the late Dr. Charles W. Allen of this city, to Maj. Charles N. Draper of London took place this afternoon in St. Thomas' church.

Miss Allen is well known to New York society, particularly in artistic circles, for her ability as a sculptress. During the war she served as a Red Cross nurse at Brest. Her mother was Grace Boardman of Boston, a noted beauty.

Maj. Draper fought during the first part of the war in France, and during the last two and a half years under Gen. Allenby in Mesopotamia. He owns a fine old place in Bebbington, Chelsea, but the young couple expect to settle in India, where Mr. Draper will carry on a branch of the steel industry, in which he is interested.

NEUTRALITY BAR TO LEAGUE ARMY IN SWITZERLAND

Council Told of Stand on Vilna Force.

PARIS, Feb. 26.—[By the Associated Press.]—The council of the league of nations switched back today to the program of the first day and heard Dr. Alphonse Durant, the Swiss minister to France, on his country's refusal of the right of way to the league's international army across Switzerland. Dr. Durant based his argument on Swiss neutrality.

Leon Bourgeois, president of the council, replying expressed deep regret that before refusing the Swiss government had not conferred with the council. It would have been found, he said, that conditions were such that a negative reply was unnecessary.

Refuses Danzig Request.

M. Bourgeois then reverted to the request of the free city of Danzig for authorization to manufacture 50,000 rifles for the Peruvian government. The council approved the recommendation by Viscount Ishii, Japan, that the request be refused.

The council also approved the terms of a communique intended to clear up rumors that the reply to the American note on mandates had been referred to Mr. Balfour. The general terms of the reply, it was explained, had been considered in the council, but Mr. Balfour had been asked to make a draft only because he was more familiar with the subject than the other members.

To Consider Reply.

This draft, when completed, will be discussed again by the council, probably on Monday. The communique reads:

"In order to set at rest certain rumors as to the reply of the council to the American note on mandates, it may be stated that the council has not yet formally considered the terms of the reply. A preliminary discussion took place several days ago, when it was decided that the general lines brought out should be put together in a preliminary draft to be prepared by Mr. Balfour. This preliminary draft will be discussed by the council early next week."

SERBIAN BISHOP COMES TO PLEAD CHILDREN'S CAUSE

Bishop Nicholai Velimirovic of the Serbian Orthodox church will arrive in Chicago tomorrow to plead the cause of Serbian children. The Chicago committee of the Serbian Child Welfare association, of which Mrs. Augustus A. Carpenter is chairman, has issued invitations for a meeting at the Drake on Tuesday at 4 o'clock. Bishop Nicholai will speak.

BISHOP NICHOLAI VELIMIROVIC.

The child welfare work in Serbia has been carried on entirely through national and private agencies, with the active cooperation of the Red Cross, and the relief institutions which have been built up in this way must have the support of those agencies for at least a year, until the government is able to take them over.

Others on the Chicago committee are Dr. Samuel J. Walker, Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick, Mrs. Russell Tyson, Mrs. Tracy C. Drake, Arthur Aldis, and Miss Helen Gilbert.

CHEMICAL WAR NEXT, VIEW OF GERMAN EXPERT

Dr. Poppenberg Gives "Tip" to America.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Feb. 26.—Dr. Otto Poppenberg, the "Ludendorff of chemistry," the man who organized Germany for war, shell expert, and generally acknowledged the first in German industry, left Berlin today for America. In an exclusive interview for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE he said he intends to study American business organization and trade possibilities, unemployment in the United States, and efficiency.

It was under Dr. Poppenberg that Germany developed gas warfare and artificial smoke.

"The next war will be a chemical industrial war," Dr. Poppenberg said. "The victorious nation will be the one which holds the largest stocks of raw materials, especially chemicals. However, I am opposed to manufacturing new devices now, as it is absolutely impossible for a nation during peace time to perfect engines of destruction and keep them secret.

"Just today I learned the Japanese have perfected a light artillery shell containing poison gas superior to anything known. I am certain Japan has merely obtained the last German wartime secret which it hadn't an opportunity to make practical before the armistice was signed.

"However, it will be impossible for Japan to keep the secret long, despite its intensified campaign against spies."

MRS. BRAUN, LOSER OF $7,000 GEMS, MERCIFUL TO 2

William G. Nelson, chauffeur of the taxicab in which Mrs. George Braun of 1221 Astor street left jewelry valued at $7,000 last week, and Martin Mathiesen of 1330 Monticello avenue, who is said to have helped Nelson take the jewels from their settings and sell them, were put on probation for a year yesterday when they appeared before Judge Howard Hayes to answer charges of larceny.

Eight jewelers charged with receiving the stolen property received a continuance to March 8. The jewelers are: Fred Leichnert, 3029 North Clark street; William Forstrom, 3303 North Clark street; Walter Heurich, 3057 Lincoln avenue; Mrs. Augusta Heurich, 2138 Belmont avenue; O. R. Hellwig, 2116 West North avenue; Harry Scharowitz, 238 North Cicero avenue; Abraham and Max Bernstein, 5 South Wabash avenue; and Olaf Johnson, 3523 West Chicago avenue.

Mrs. Braun told Judge Hayes that, since Nelson had no previous criminal record and she had left the jewelry in the taxicab, she wished to forego prosecution. When the judge asked $1,000 bonds from Nelson to assure his appearance as a witness at the trial of the jewelers, it was supplied by George Braun, husband of Mrs. Braun.

VALLEY ASSOCIATION MEETS.

Routine business was discussed at the regular monthly meeting of the Mississippi Valley association at the Congress hotel yesterday afternoon. Seventy-five members were present.

CHILD, 10, SEES KILLING OF MAN FREED AS SLAYER

Shots from an Auto Fell Victim.

Ten year old Gertrude Janis was on the way to her home at 1233 Gilpin place shortly before 7 o'clock last night when she saw an automobile slow down near the corner and turn south in Lytle street. She saw a man and a woman in the car. As it turned the corner five shots were fired by one of the occupants and a man crumpled up in the gutter.

The girl could not tell whether the man had been hurled from the machine or had been on the sidewalk at the time of the attack. The automobile narrowly escaped striking her as it speeded south in Lytle street. The child attempted to read its license number, but the driver turned the tail light off and on several times as he sped away.

Acquitted of Murder.

Gertrude ran to the Columbus extension hospital, but by the time a doctor had reached the scene the victim was dead. There were four bullet wounds in his body, identified as that of Gaetano Esposito of 606 South May street, who was acquitted six weeks ago by a jury in Judge Pam's court of the murder of Joseph McArdle.

Election cards of Ald. Johnny Powers were found in Esposito's pockets. The fact that he was carrying a loaded revolver at the time of his death led the police to believe he may have been killed as a result of the political feud in the Nineteenth ward. It was rumored Esposito was a distant relative of "Diamond Joe" Esposito, Republican ward committeeman.

McArdle, a printer, who lived at 1064 West Polk street, was shot at the entrance of Roscoe Gordon's saloon at Harrison and May streets, on the morning of Nov. 16, 1919. He and John McNamara, 3153 West Monroe street, had been drinking in the saloon with several women.

Flees to New Jersey.

Esposito fled to Bayonne, N. J., where he was arrested in February of last year. He was brought back to Chicago by Detective Sergeant Philip Carroll.

"I killed McArdle," Esposito confessed at the time, "because he and some others in the saloon were making fun of me. 'Let's get that wop,' one of them said, and McArdle followed me out with a knife in his hand. He called me names and threatened to stab me and I shot him."

"Esposito's life was threatened several times while he was in the county jail," said Carroll. "There have been several attempts to 'get him' since he was acquitted. About ten days ago several shots were fired at him through a window of his home."

CAPITAL GIVES UP HOPE OF HILARITY AT INAUGURATION

Simplicity Is Keynote of March 4 Program.

(BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.)

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Washington is looking forward with resignation, if not with approval, to an inaugural ceremony of a simplicity beyond that which has characterized any March 4 in the memory of the oldest inhabitant.

Only two familiar features remain—Mr. Harding will take the oath on the east front of the capitol, and he will drive up Pennsylvania avenue as the president elect and back again as president.

The inaugural parade, it appears, will consist of the presidential party and a cavalry escort from Fort Myer, the presence of the cavalry being in the nature of a last minute concession on the part of Mr. Harding.

Wilson Eager to Take Part.

President Wilson wishes to conform to custom, and also to consult in every way the wishes of Mr. Harding, but his part probably will depend, so far as the drive is concerned, on the state of the weather and his health.

Mr. Harding has already made known, in reply to a query from the White House, that his first luncheon in the executive mansion will be strictly a family affair, and that he will not afterward review any parade of any kind.

Neither the president nor Mrs. Harding will attend the charity ball the night of March 4. Official society, however, including members of the outgoing and incoming administrations, the former playing host to the latter, will turn out in force for the ball, to be the most brilliant of the season.

Diplomats to Attend.

The diplomatic corps will be in evidence at the inaugural ceremonies at the capitol and at the ball.

Although cards instead of engraved invitations will be issued, the diplomats and the members of their families would be given places as usual on the capitol steps.

Diplomats will be seated in the senate, and the ladies in the gallery for the inauguration of the vice president, the envoys gathering as usual in the marble room and being escorted to the chamber in order of precedence.

At the end of this ceremony, the members of the corps will proceed to the places reserved for them on the steps of the east front, where they will be joined by their families to witness the inauguration and hear the inaugural address.

Crippled and blinded soldiers will have places of honor in the only reserved section before the inaugural stand.

Snow and rain for inaugural week are forecast for the week of March 4.

THEY LIKE OUR SCHOOLS

(TRIBUNE Photo.)

THE Chinese educational commission from Klangsu province is in Chicago inspecting its school system, especially the schools devoted to the deaf, dumb, and blind and the parental schools.

"Chinese schools teach traditional and classical subjects almost entirely, which is one of the things we must remedy," said Herman Chan En Lui, secretary of the commission. "Everything is practical here. You have dealt with many problems in a satisfying manner. An example is your penny lunch system.

"In China only one-third of the children are attending school. We lack facilities to accommodate all, but we are progressing rapidly.

"We have abolished the old Chinese alphabet of more than 1,000 characters and now have a system of fifty-two letters. Any one can learn our language in a short time."

The commission is composed of six educators, two of whom are presidents of Chinese universities.

BORAH FOR BILL TO CURB 'ABUSE OF AUTHORITY'

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—A bill providing immediate removal from office of any officer, agent, or employe of the United States in the civil, military, or naval service who unlawfully interferes with the civil rights of citizens or persons within the United States was introduced in the senate today by Senator Borah.

It is an outgrowth of the recent Red raids conducted by the department of justice by direction of Attorney General Palmer.

Drastic punishment provided includes a fine of $10,000, imprisonment for not more than five years, or both, and the right reserved to the person maltreated or his house or office searched without proper warrant, or denied lawful freedom of speech, to sue for personal damages, $500 being the least sum which can be recovered.

The Idaho senator charged there is an increasing disregard for the great civil guarantees of the constitution and men in authority, officers and their agents, have made arrests without warrant, broken into private dwellings without authority, and practiced brutality toward citizens guilty of no offense."

WILSON SIGNS RAILROAD FUND; LABOR LOSES

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Issuance of certificates for partial payments to railroads, aggregating approximately $340,000,000, will be started at once by the interstate commerce commission as the result of President Wilson's approval today of the Winslow partial payment bill.

Railroad and other organized labor, which urged the president to veto the measure, were vetoed instead by the president. This was the second time in the last few weeks that the president had gone counter to the appeals of railroad labor, the first being when he was asked to intervene in the case before the United States railroad labor board.

Although the treasury department may not have on hand sufficient money to meet the demands of the certificates which will be issued by the commission it may issue evidences of indebtedness and obtain the necessary funds. It was not regarded as probable, however, that the certificates would be sent to the treasury in "bunches." There are some railroad companies to which the commission may issue certificates at once.

$500,000,000 DUE MARCH 15 FROM INCOME TAXES

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—At least $500,000,000 in income and profits taxes is expected by the treasury when the next installment comes due on March 15, or approximately $300,000,000 less than March of last year, it was said tonight.

Failing prices, wage cuts, business losses, and other factors will affect the returns, the officials said.

On the same date, approximately $500,000,000 in treasury certificates of indebtedness will mature. It is planned to leave a safe margin on the side of the money receivable, and officials asserted there were no indications that the plan would not work out as usual.

U. S. AND ALLIES MUST DISPOSE OF PROBLEM OF YAP

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—The question of Yap is one of mediation between America and the allies, it was declared authoritatively at the state department today in contradiction of published reports that Sir Auckland Geddes, British ambassador, had been instructed to mediate between the United States and Japan in the cables dispute and the controversy over Yap.

State department officials previously asserted that the controversy was chiefly between Great Britain and France on one side and the United States on the other, the British and French governments having assumed that the United States had withdrawn from the decision of the question and abandoned the reservations made by President Wilson at the peace conference.

This government, it was stated, had heard of no offer of mediation, and it was strongly intimated that none was expected.

Can't Agree on Referee, Texas Duelists Stop Checks!

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—The Texas $1,000 check duelists—Congressman Hatton W. Sumners and Thomas L. Blanton—have reached an impasse. Neither will accept the referees proposed by the other to decide an issue of veracity. The duel has been called off by Sumners without the spilling of blood or money.

VAST FRAUDS IN PASSPORTS FOR AMERICA BARED

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Undesirable and dangerous aliens, armed with fraudulent passports, continue to seek entry into America, according to state department reports showing that operations of passport swindlers in Europe are carried on all over the continent.

Consular officers, officials say, have discovered organized gangs printing and selling false passports and counterfeit American visés. These are grabbed up by undesirable and dangerous aliens seeking to spread propaganda in this country.

The state department is spreading a worldwide net for the perpetrators of these frauds. Two days ago an official passport checker in New York captured seventeen aliens endeavoring to enter on false documents. Of these eight came from Poland, seven from Italy, one from Greece and one from England.

Consular officers in Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Austria, France, Italy, Greece, and Germany, under state department orders, have been engaged for nearly two months in successfully investigating this serious effort to evade American immigration laws.

DENBY HEAD OF NAVY; T. R. JR. TO BE HIS ASSISTANT

Harding Gives Selection to Newspaper Men.

Mr. Harding left. "It is because I always have loved the navy. I was named after an uncle who was a fleet surgeon and who died in the line of duty. My great-uncle commanded a mosquito fleet during the civil war.

"My father was a colonel in the civil war and my grandfather was Graham M. Fitch, who served one term as senator from Indiana. He was a Democrat and was appointed minister to China by Mr. Cleveland in 1884. I was 15 and went along, remaining there nine years. I learned to speak Chinese a little.

"In 1898 I went out with the Michigan naval militia and served as third class gunner's mate on the Yosemite during the blockade. We had one good battle, for one morning we caught a Spanish auxiliary cruiser trying to sneak out of San Juan harbor and destroyed it. I remember Capt. Sigsbee megaphoning us from his ship as he left us on blockade: 'You are in grave danger.'"

Wine vs. Responsibilities.

Asked if he intended to continue the Daniels policy of treatment of men, Mr. Denby said he did not know.

He declared Mr. Daniels had done right in abolishing the wine mess.

"The enlisted men were not allowed to drink," he said. "While I would not like to suggest that officers are not capable of exercising greater care, yet their responsibilities are so tremendous that I think it unfair to have this temptation. I think, however, that the majority of the officers of the navy are now of this opinion."

He discussed the character of enlisted men, quoting the Kipling verse to the effect that the men in barracks are not plaster saints and can't be expected to be.

Proves Navy Is Spotless.

As an incident of how he felt about the navy he related that he was in Panama in 1908 and was questioned about our navy by two Englishmen on the porch of a hotel.

"'The trouble with the American navy is that it is dirty,' one of the Englishmen said to me. I was amazed and replied, 'Sir, you have touched upon the cardinal virtue of the American navy—cleanliness—and I will prove it to you.

"'Out in the harbor the Albany is lying. It has been there nine months, and you know what that means to a ship in tropical waters. I will take you on board without any notice to Capt. Mayo and will show you the cleanest ship you ever saw.'

"Well, these Englishmen took me up and we went out. They were astonished at the cleanliness. They could have eaten dinner off the deck. They apologized."

He spoke again of the "magnificent traditions" of the navy and how it would live in every man in the service and make misconduct impossible. He showed immense enthusiasm for his job.

Mr. Denby received a message of congratulation from Secretary Daniels and replied this afternon as follows:

"Have read in the press with great pleasure your kind reference to me. Please accept my cordial thanks. I shall see you in Washington in a day or two, I hope."

Mr. Harding refused to say anything about labor or treasury.

HOUSE APPROVES DILLINGHAM BILL; UP TO PRESIDENT

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Legislation restricting immigration was almost assured today. The house approved, 294 to 40, the conference report on the Dillingham bill. Inasmuch as the conferees accepted the percentage scheme in the senate bill, this action meant that the bill will go to the president, who, it is now believed, will sign it.

Representatives Sabath of Illinois and Siegel of New York fought it. Representative Johnson of Washington led the fight for the bill. The bill restricts immigration from April 1, 1921, to July 1, 1922, to 3 per cent of the number of each nationality in the United States according to the 1910 census.

HOOVER LOOKS OVER THE SHOP; HAS FOE IN REED

Confers with Present Secretary of Commerce.

(BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.)

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Herbert Hoover, who is to be the secretary of commerce in Mr. Harding's cabinet, came to Washington today to look over his job.

Upon arrival from New York he went directly to the department, where he conferred with Secretary Alexander for more than an hour. The present secretary told Mr. Hoover that he could have the keys and go as far as he liked in surveying the premises, but the future secretary contented himself with talking things over.

Mr. Hoover would not discuss details of his ideas for rejuvenating the department of commerce but he made it clear in a brief talk with newspaper men that he expects to develop the domestic trade promotion phase of its activities more than has been done heretofore.

Will Detail His Plans.

Mr. Hoover goes back to New York tomorrow but will return to Washington later in the week to consult further with Secretary Alexander and with department bureau chiefs. After a conference with Mr. Harding on March 3 or 4, Mr. Hoover expects to issue a statement outlining his views for broadening the department. Mr. Hoover said he had made no request of the president elect that the shipping board be transferred to his jurisdiction or that other radical changes in organization requiring legislation be made at once, indicating that he has no desire to start any strife between the departments.

Whether he can enlarge the field of activity of the department of commerce, even without annexing any new bureaus, or going outside its present statutory powers, without friction with other cabinet members is considered a question.

Reed Is Hoover's Foe.

Senator James Reed, Democrat, of Missouri, today sent a letter to President Elect Harding, objecting to the appointment of Mr. Hoover as secretary of commerce.

FALLING OFF IN SIZE OF HERDS ANNOYS PACKERS

Meat Animals Show the Greatest Decrease.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

The meat industry is bending a wrinkled brow over the reduction in American flocks and herds. On Jan. 1 nearly 10,000,000 fewer head of live stock were on farms in the United States than one year before, according to the government bureau of crop estimates. The greatest decrease was in meat animals. Horses fell off 600,000 head, or about 3 per cent; mules diminished 42,000, or less than 1 per cent; milk cows decreased 298,000, or 1.3 per cent. But other cattle, the beef producing kind, decreased 1,880,000, or 4.2 per cent below 1920. Swine decreased 5,078,000 head, or 7.1 per cent, and the sheep flocks fell off 2,047,000 head, or 4.3 per cent.

Still Prices Decrease.

Here's an interesting chain of circumstances: fewer animals are on the farms and fewer are coming to market; high cost of feed led to curtailed production, yet despite the great drop in supply the demand for animal products has dropped much faster and the result has been not only a decrease in prices but a precipitate drop.

"The foreign demand for beef disappeared in 1919, when England and Europe had ships available to get cheaper beef from South America instead of relying on this country as they had to during the war," says Swift & Co.

"Exports of beef from the United States during 1920 have been insignificant. Likewise, the foreign demand for our pork products has declined, for the simple reason that European countires have not been able to pay for the products they would like to buy. This is reflected in the fall in exchange rates in European countries. American exports of pork products for the first nine months of 1920 were 51 per cent less in quantity and 61 per cent less in value than for the same period in 1919."

Domestic Demand Falls.

On the heels of a vanishing foreign demand, too, came a declining domestic consumption. The "buyers' strike" hit meatstuffs as well as dry goods and clothing, and now the industrial depression has reduced the purchasing power of households and demand is still much below ordinary and the food purveyors are shouting louder than ever the slogan "Eat More Meat." Animal by-products, too, such as hides and wool, hit the slide, and this also operated to cut live stock values.

All told, the government figures that the value of live stock on the farms during the year declined $2,271,576,000, or 26.7 per cent. It fell from a total of $8,507,145,000 on Jan. 1, 1920, to $6,235,569,000 on Jan. 1, 1921.

"This decline," says the government report, "is partly due to the reduction in numbers, but more to the lower value per head." The figures seem to be somewhat different from those in the January report of the department of agriculture, which said the value of animals and animal products in 1920 was only $237,000,000 below the 1919 total.

Herds Values Fall.

On Jan. 1 last the average farm value of beef cattle was $31.41 a head, as against $43.22 for 1920. The average for the five year period, 1911-15, is given at $26.41. Milk cows declined from $85.11 a head in 1920 to $63.97 in 1921. The average for the 1911-15 period was $46.77. Sheep fell from $10.52 a head in 1920 to $6.41 in 1921. Still they are more than 60 per cent above the 1911-15 average, which was $3.96.

Swine fell from $19.01 a head on Jan. 1, 1920, to $12.99 on Jan. 1, 1921. The present value is about 37 per cent higher than for the 1911-15 period, which was on an average $9.48.

As to the remaining size of the herds, despite the reduction they indicate no real lack of supplies. There are 12 per cent fewer sheep than in the five year pre-war period 1911-15 and 2½ per cent fewer horses. But there are 12 per cent more milk cows, 15 per cent more other cattle, 5½ per cent more swine, and 14 per cent more mules.

"BETTER PORK CHOPS"

Left to right—Thomas W. Hart, country life director of rural schools; Howard Koclyn, Francis X. Fisher, Raymond Ritter, Frank Binder, and Seth Shepard, country life director.

PIGS may be pigs most of the time, but in the minds of the pupils of the Cook county rural schools pigs may sometimes be pure Berkshire hogs, the equivalent of dollars.

Six pupils of the school have organized the Pure Bred Pig club and before next summer is over expect to be enriched by several hundred dollars each. To become members, pupils must own at least one pedigreed and registered Berkshire hog.

The charter members are Howard Koclyn, Wheeling township; Francis X. Fisher, Norwood township; Daymond Ritter, Northfield township, Frank Binder, Leyden township; and Florence and Marcella Kodin, Northfield township. Twenty five others have aiso joined.

TARIFF BILL IS THROUGH HOUSE; UP TO SENATE

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—By a comfortable majority, but without quite enough votes to insure its passage over a presidential veto, the emergency agricultural tariff bill conference report was approved, 205 to 107, today in the house.

Senator Penrose made an attempt to bring it up in the senate, but finally agreed to defer action until Monday. No difficulty is anticipated in putting it through the senate and the bill may reach President Wilson by Tuesday.

Representative Rainey, Illinois, Democrat, led the opposition, denouncing the high duties and declaring it would increase the cost of living.

INDIAN CLUBS WEAPONS OF BOY BURGLAR BAND

Four boys, who used Indian clubs stolen from the Skinner school as weapons and an ordinary steel file as their "kit" of burglar tools, were captured yesterday morning as they were about to commit their sixth burglary. Steven Kerkis, 35 years old of 1161 West Harrison street, accused by the police of being the "Fagin" of the gang, was taken later.

The four boys are:

Edward O'Riley, 19 years old, 512 South California avenue.

Silvester Genoe, 19 years old, 1152 West Harrison street.

Michael Orrico, 17 years old, 719 South Claremont avenue.

John Avanalist, 18 years old, 808 South Loomis street.

The five boys were arrested in the act of trussing up the watchman of the Illinois Linen Supply company at 1646 Arcade place after they had knocked him down with Indian clubs.

INVESTIGATE FIRE THAT DESTROYED COEY BALLOON

An investigation is being made of the fire which early yesterday morning destroyed the private airdrome of C. A. Coey and the balloon, "The Chicago." The airdome was located on Ninety-fifth street in the town of Worth. With "The Chicago," the "Little Chicago," its namesake, was also destroyed. In the larger balloon Mr. and Mrs. Coey took their honeymoon in 1909.

BOOZE BONANZA TOPPLES; HELD AS EMBEZZLER

Roseate pictures of a quick fortune in whisky landed Delbert L. Bowen in a police cell in New Orleans on charges of embezzlement. Bowen was formerly a bond salesman for the L. C. Brown company, brokers, in the Tacoma building. Until his disappearance on Nov. 13 last he lived at 111 East Ohio street. He is alleged to have left his employers poorer by $4,000 when he departed.

Bowen's troubles are said to have their seat in a whisky deal gone wrong. According to his former employer, L. C. Brown, he took upwards of $4,000 in a few weeks' time, staked it all in one joust with the eighteenth amendment, and was forced to make a retaway when the government officials stepped in and frustrated the deal.

Finds It Cost Money.

Mr. Brown indignantly told the story yesterday when he had appealed to the state's attorney's office and the police to make arrangements to bring Bowen back to Chicago. But Mr. Brown found he would have to furnish the police money for expenses to bring Bowen back.

"It seems to me that this is injust," said Brown. "What have we state and city authorities for if it isn't to bring criminals back to justice? Why should a private citizen have to supply money which is supposedly supplied by the taxpayers?

"Bowen started to work for me in January, 1920. He was an excellent salesman—a $10,000 a year man. He could have made more money being honest than he did by being crooked."

How He Got the Cash.

Bowen, according to Mr. Brown, accomplished his defalcations by collecting money from stockholders of the Coöperative Society of America, for whom Brown has sold stock, and by turning in worthless personal checks for payments. He also dipped his hand into the office cash drawer, Brown said.

"I understand he got mixed up in a whisky deal. As I get it, he intended to make good all his defalcations and a fat profit from the proceeds of his deal. But before the deal could be consummated the government stepped in and grabbed the whisky. Whether this is true or not I don't know, but that is my information."

W. S. O'Day of the Mooney & Boland Detective agency said Bowen was arrested through the efforts of New Orleans correspondents of the agency.

K. C. SECRETARY URGES ORDER TO AID IN RELIEF

A call to Knights of Columbus to help the campaign for relief for the sufferers of Ireland and central Europe as well as the starving all over the world was issued by Supreme Secretary William J. McGinley while in Chicago yesterday. He was here attending a conference with the directors and supervisors of the free night schools for former service men and women in the central west.

"The Knights of Columbus as citizens of this great republic, to which the destitute and [illegible] of all the world are looking for aid, are of course at one with all our citizens, united heart and hand in backing up all these movements for relief," he said.

CO-EDS TO LEARN STAGE SECRETS OF FACE PAINT

How to rouge, to paint, to apply a dash of color to the eyebrows, and other secrets of stage makeup will be studied by the Prentice Players, a dramatic organization of Northwestern university students, it was announced yesterday. Miss Natalie Purcell, recently elected secretary, said facial makeup will be studied by the co-eds and men students. Demonstrations by Chicago stage celebrities are planned.

Estranged Wife Ends Life by Drinking Disinfectant

Mrs. Pearl Chamberlain, 23 years old, 4148 South Campbell avenue, ended her life last night by drinking lysol. She had been estranged from her husband, according to a statement made to Brighton Park police by her sister, Miss Minnie Flucard, 4841 West Lake street.

HYDE PARK GIRLS TO HAVE SOCIAL CENTER OF OWN

Women representing twelve Hyde Park churches have undertaken to establish a social and recreational center for girls on East Fifty-fifth street, action to that effect having been taken at a meeting called Wednesday by Dr. Sarah Hobson of the Hyde Park Congregational church.

Since the Hyde Park community center was given over to the Boys' Junior Republic, the girls have been deprived of a place where they could conduct social affairs. Several attempts have been made to meet the need and the women who had sponsored these plans were included in Dr. Hobson's committee, which comprises a representative of St. Thomas' parish; Mrs. Alexander Hodgett, chairman of the Sixth ward civic league; Mrs. Paul H. Seymour of the Girl Reserves of the Y. W. C. A., and Miss Sue Weddell, Metropolitan girls' work secretary of the Y. W. C. A.

A suitable room has been obtained temporarily, and the Y. W. C. A. will furnish a secretary to preside over it. The Hyde Park Council of Churches will ask the Y. W. C. A. to take over the enterprise at the end of five months. An invitation of the Eleanor club to use its gymnasium and hall one evening each week has been accepted. The new center is to be opened early next month.

Resists 2 Holdup Men; Gets Bullet in His Knee

Antoine Wualskis, 35 years old, 4612 South Wood street, was wounded in his right knee last night by one of two robbers who held him up in front of 4619 South Hermitage avenue when he resisted them.

DRY CHIEF CALLS ALL HIS AIDS FOR DRIVE IN CHICAGO

Alarmed by the large quantities of alcohol diverted to illegal channels by unscrupulous manufacturers of "easy to take" medicines, Ralph W. Stone, federal prohibition director, announced yesterday that every inspector in his district had been ordered to report for duty in Chicago.

They will be ordered to check up on the 300 manufacturers of patent medicines who are allowed to withdraw alcohol for commercial purposes. Thousands of gallons of nonbeverage alcohol are said to be bootlegged to saloons monthly.

This crew will work independently of the flying squadron of special investigators detailed to the Chicago district by Washington authorities.

Recommendations for the revoking of all permits held by manufacturers whose products are used for beverage purposes will be made to Washington by Mr. Stone.

"Very little bonded whisky is reaching Chicago," Mr. Stone said. "Practically all the alcoholic beverages sold in saloons are derived from patent medicines or from alcohol sold illegally. If it were not for home made alcoholic products, Chicago would be dry."

CABLE'S ANNUAL GRAND OPERA SALE

107 PIANOS At Sharply Reduced Prices

Here are 107 extra special bargains—the cream of our Annual Grand Opera Sale offerings.

There are not, we venture to say, 107 pianos anywhere in the city that can match these in quality value.

Most of these instruments have been used during the winter musical season by members of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, or by other professional musicians for concerts, recitals, rehearsals and practice work.

The careful use of these better grade pianos by skilled musicians has not detracted from their value in any way. On the contrary, their value to their future owner may be greater by reason of the fact that each piano was chosen and used by one of this country's notable artists.

Every one of these pianos is in excellent condition. Many cannot be told from brand new. By making your selection here and now, you will save from $75 to $175.

This is the piano-buying event of the year—the piano opportunity you have been waiting for. Do not delay your choosing—there will be hundreds of eager buyers quick to respond to this money-saving offering.

$8,000,000 BOND VOTE SETS SOME NEW PRECEDENTS

Breaks 8 Years' Record by Its Size.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

The unofficial totals of the election commissioners' canvass show that the $8,000,000 bond issue was approved last Tuesday by a majority of 13,177 votes. The summarized figures are as follows:

	Yes.	No.
Men	139,686	123,843
Women	48,205	50,871
Totals	187,891	174,714

It will be noticed that the women disapproved of the bond issue by a majority of 2,666 votes, while the men favored it with a majority of 15,843.

Strange Feature of Vote.

But a more remarkable feature of the returns is that more persons in each of six wards voted upon the bond issue than for aldermanic candidates for an aggregate of 5,331. The vote for alderman and on the bond issue in those wards follows:

Ward.	Aldermanic.	Bond.
6	10,640	11,053
8	6,649	6,650
17	5,263	5,727
31	7,991	9,329
33	11,387	12,912
35	10,284	11,775
Totals	52,124	57,455

Some New Precedents.

In all except the Sixth there was only a nominal or no contest for alderman, and in the Sixth the election returns disclose no evidence that the city administration was opposed to the return of Ald. Eaton to the city council. In the other five wards it was known before the election that the Lundin-Thompson machine would not oppose the aldermen who were seeking re-election. The vote on the bond issue in these wards, in comparison with the vote for aldermanic candidates, probably sets a new precedent.

Another precedent, about which there can be little question, also from this election. The total vote on the bond issue was 96.5 per cent of the aggregate votes for all aldermanic candidates, the bond total being 362,605 votes and the aldermanic 375,652—a difference of only 13,047. Such a high percentage was not found in an examination of the records for eight years back.

Hurried the Canvass.

The canvass was speedy.

"I have attempted to give the public the official figures in as short a time as possible," said Chief Clerk Lohman of the board, "and will in all probability be able to have the proclamation ready for Monday at 11 o'clock.

"The various organizations which were opposed to the bond issue were represented during the canvass by Mr. Blackwood of the Citizens' association, and, of course, various candidates were also represented by their watchers."

The Bond Issue Vote.

The vote for and against the bond issue by wards is as follows:

Ward.	Yes—Men.	Yes—Women.	No—Men.	No—Women.
1	5,477	897	734	154
2	5,136	2,336	966	362

A FORT DEARBORN RELIC

Portion of old Fort Dearborn ferry walk uncovered 17 feet below street level yesterday at south end of "link" bridge.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

WHAT is believed to have been a portion of the old cobblestone walk that led from Fort Dearborn to a ferry was uncovered yesterday by a steam shovel on the west side of the south end of the new boulevard link bridge. The Great Lakes Dredge and Dock company has been excavating near the site of the old fort to prepare the ground for construction of the foundation of a plaza. The old walk was discovered seventeen feet below the street level. The only part that remains intact is about two yards long and a yard wide.

MAN, WIFE, WAR, GIRL, LOVE, BABY, ADIEUX, INSANITY

New York, Feb. 26.—[Special.]—The story of a wife who forgave her husband, adopted the child of her husband and a pretty French girl he met in France, and his insanity later over loss of the baby, was told in a Newark, N. J., court today.

Mrs. Louise E. MacNichol applied for guardianship over her husband, Kenneth H. MacNichol, short story writer and world war veteran. She testified her husband is in the Belle Mead, N. J., government sanitarium.

MacNichol met the girl, Leone Winckel, in August, 1918. Returning the following June, he told all to Mrs. MacNichol. They sent for the girl and her baby and in Baltimore obtained adoption papers last March.

Homesick, Leone reutrned to France. She wrote she was unhappy. MacNichol sent the baby. Its departure broke his heart.

Mrs. MacNichol was granted the order of guardianship.

WRIT FAILS TO FREE SUSPECT IN MAGNUS ROBBERY

Edward Touhy, 19 years old, a suspect seized in connection with the John Magnus & Co. robbery, yesterday was ordered remanded to the custody of the sheriff by Judge Oscar Hebel. A writ of habeas corpus was dismissed by the judge.

Touhy was arrested last Thursday following a chase of several blocks. He was in an automobile driven by Edward Prichason, 19 years old. In the rear seat were found three automobile license numbers, one from New York, another from New Jersey, and a third from Illinois. Touhy has been partly identified by a watchman employed by the Magnus company as one of the men who robbed the place.

Attorney John M. Lonergan, who represented Touhy, declared the police had made no identification of him and were holding him without any charge being placed against him. It was shown, however, that Touhy was wanted by the sheriff for bond forfeiture.

Vienna, for First Time, Is Without Bohemian Beer

VIENNA, Feb. 26.—For the first time since the discovery of the beverage this city is without Bohemian beer. Its import was prohibited in November in the effort to restore the exchange value of the crown, and the supply on hand is exhausted.

INSTITUTIONS OF STATE NEED CASH TO KEEP GOING

Money in Treasury; Budget Is Held Up.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Illinois state charitable, penal, and reformatory institutions are facing a financial crisis. The high cost of living, speeding along at about the same rate as of two years ago, is held to be responsible solely for the extraordinary situation. There is plenty of cash in the treasury. Millions of dollars are on hand. The necessary legislation to authorize its expenditure is what is now required.

Blaming Lowden.

Senator Barr's bill, appropriating $2,250,000 to meet the critical condition of affairs in the penitentiaries, hospitals, and schools, is now pending on second reading in the senate. It undoubtedly will have the support of Gov. Small's administration, but the attempt is being made, apparently, to "hang something" on the Lowden administration in connection with the efficiency bill.

Figures show that Gov. Lowden left no "debt" for Gov. Small's administration to pay. "Senator Kessinger has deliberately misrepresented the situation or is badly misinformed," was the comment today of a man close to the former governor.

Why Appropriation Is Needed.

"Appropriations for the operation of the state institutions made two years ago, were made upon the bases of costs of commodities existing at that time. Prices of everything which the state purchases have increased. In some instances this increase amounted to over 200 per cent.

"Therefore it will be necessary for the legislature to provide a deficiency appropriation to cover the amounts needed until July 1. For operation there will be needed $2,125,000; for salaries and wages, $100,000."

PRODUCTION OF SOFT COAL AGAIN SHOWS DECLINE

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—There was another decline in bituminous coal production in the week ending Feb. 19. Production fell below the level of 1919.

Production was 7,472,000 tons, a decrease of 395,000 tons, 5 per cent below the preceding week. In the corresponding week of 1919 the output was 7,722,000 tons. Before the decline started in December production had been maintained on a level above 12,000,000 tons for several weeks.

The anthracite mines continued to work close to capacity. The production during the week was 2,010,000 tons.

ARMY AND NAVY BILLS BLOCKED BY GENERAL ROW

Due to Differences in House and Senate.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Both the army and the navy bills, carrying approximately $840,000,000 for the national defense, were thrown into jeopardy and may fail to pass at the present session of congress as a result of the legislative jam which took a turn for the worse.

The senate passed the army bill tonight, but the danger to the measure's passage lies in opposition that may develop in conference and in action on a conference report.

It follows that the whole question of determining the size of the army and navy for the coming year may be left to the congress under the new administration. Although leaders are making every effort to get both bills passed, some senators believe no harm would result if the two measures, involving important matters of national defense policy, go over to the next session.

Pin Hopes on Harding.

They are confident that President Elect Harding will side with the senate in its efforts to save both the army and the navy from the injuries which it is feared will result from the reductions voted by the house.

Furthermore, some of them believe it might be well to consider the size of the army and navy in connection with the new administration's foreign policy, especially in view of the fact that the appropriations will not be needed until July 1.

The army bill collided headon today with the resolution to repeal wartime legislation. Senator Wadsworth, New York, chairman military affairs committee, told the senate that there was "grave danger that the army bill could not pass at all" and that its chances would be reduced to zero if the resolution repealing wartime legislation were given the right of way.

Borah Wants His Way.

Senator Borah, Idaho, threatened to filibuster against the army bill unless an agreement were reached for prompt action on the resolution. He said the necessity for quick action on this measure was imperative, while no injury would be done if the army bill went over until July 1. Wadsworth finally had his way and the army bill was taken up.

The sundry civil bill, which carries appropriations amounting to about $176,000,000 for soldiers' relief of various kinds, also is caught in a bad jam.

By a vote of 40 to 31, the senate today insisted on retaining the amendment providing $10,000,000 for the Muscle Shoals dam. The house has twice rejected this. Senator Lenroot, Wisconsin, warned the senate that insistence on the Muscle Shoals appropriation would kill the bill.

POLICE REFUSE TO SHUT CABARET; DEATH FOLLOWS

Farwell Reveals Warning Given Mayor.

Lawless conditions at the Little Bohemia saloon and cabaret, 1722 South Loomis street, which led up to the killing of Timothy W. Mulvihill, a former policeman, there Thursday night, had been called repeatedly to the attention of the authorities since early in November, it was revealed yesterday by Arthur Burrage Farwell, president of the Chicago Law and Order league.

Mr. Farwell made public a number of letters which he had written to Mayor Thompson and Chief of Police Fitzmorris demanding that the place be closed. The saloon was closed by Chief Fitzmorris on Friday, the day after the shooting, when it was "discovered" the place had been operating without license since Jan. 1. Mr. Farwell claims he informed the authorities of this fact some time ago and made other complaints to which both the mayor and the chief turned a deaf ear.

Tells of Letter.

On Nov. 5 Mr. Farwell sent a letter to Chief John J. Garrity by Mrs. Cunat, wife of Dr. Edward Cunat of 1714 South Loomis street. A front window of Dr. Cunat's home had been smashed on election night by a man who threatened to put a bomb under the house if "he did not stop reporting" the cabaret.

On Nov. 22 another letter was sent to Chief Fitzmorris stating an investigator had purchased whisky in the saloon and inclosing an affidavit stating that the proprietors of the place were Terry Dugan and Frank Lake. It was Lake who shot Mulvihill. The affidavit reads in part:

"The license is taken out in the name of Frank Lake and reads: 'Not a residential neighborhood, dry cabaret, taken for two months.' The cabaret opened Oct. 2, 1920, and the next license would be issued again to another man for two months, and so on, it seems. The first night the cabaret opened the bartender was shot in the arm. Any one who goes there should be on the lookout for guns."

Valley Gang Accused.

The investigator declared there were several partners in the place, some of whom belonged to the notorious "Valley gang." Another letter was written to Chief Fitzmorris on Nov. 26 stating the place was being kept open from 9 o'clock one morning to 6 o'clock the next. Mr. Farwell asked that the license which expired on Dec. 2 be not repewed.

Dr. Cunat, who is chairman of a committee of fifteen of the Southwest Side Business Men and Merchants' association, attempted to obtain an interview with Mayor Thompson, the correspondence shows, through Tom Curran, saloonkeeper and ward committeeman.

Curran is alleged to have said: "Don't embarrass the mayor until after election."

After election Dr. Cunat was unable to find Curran in on numerous visits.

Police Powerless, They Say.

"Dr. Cunat," reads a letter from Mr. Farwell to the mayor and the chief, "told me that he notified the Maxwell street station and spoke to Lieut. Fleming and that Lieut. Fleming said to him, in substance, 'The police can do nothing. There is one higher up.' He said they had arrested Lake four times and each time the city prosecuting attorney at the Maxwell street court had nonsuited the cases. Lieut. Fleming also said: 'This place has given us more trouble than any other place in our district and we wish you could do something.'

Home Is Bombed.

"In about eight days the threat that was made to bomb Dr. Cunat's house was carried out. This occurred last Saturday morning about 4:20 o'clock.

"I am informed that on Feb. 6, 1921, Sunday morning, as many people were coming from church, about five shots were fired by a mob that came out of Little Bohemia; that on Wednesday, Feb. 16, about twent shots inside the building were heard about 3 o'clock in the morning; on Feb. 23 the cabaret was going with music at 2 o'clock in the morning."

Chief Denies Report.

Mr. Farwell, in his letter, claims he visited Chief Fitzmorris on Jan. 21 with Miss Hattie Sattler and that the chief said: "As long as the government allows intoxicating liquor to be shipped into Chicago, I will not mop it up." Chief Fitzmorris denied making the statement, but Mr. Farwell and Miss Sattler have signed an affidavit that such a statement was made.

Chief Fitzmorris, in closing the saloon, said he had asked Lieut. Michael Golden of the Maxwell street police station for an explanation as to why the place was permitted to run without a license.

ELOPE TO CHURCH, MARRY; PARENTS FORGIVE THEM

MRS. PHILLIP F. HARPER. (Walinger Photo.)

The parents of Miss Ailsia L. McElroy, 19 year old schoolgirl of Wilmette, and Phillip Francis Harper, son of a Chicago broker, are not mad at all. Although the young couple were secretly married last Sunday when they "went to church" at St. Francis Xavier, the parents of both sanctioned the marriage yesterday when they found it out.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. McElroy of Wilmette gave a wedding breakfast yesterday, while the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Harper of 6821 Sheridan road, will entertain today.

Mrs. Harper is a graduate of St. Mary's at Notre Dame, and is now studying in a Wilmette school. Her parents say she will have to finish her course before she takes up her domestic duties.

NEW RED PLOT IN SPAIN.

MADRID, Feb. 26.—Documents giving details of a new terrorist plot in Spain were discovered by police officials when they raided a secret meeting of Syndicalists at Lazarenas, near Gilbao, last night. Fifteen persons were placed under arrest.

COURT'S WRIT OPENS DOORS OF COLOSIMO'S

Decision Will Affect Other Places.

Way was paved yesterday by a court decision for the immediate reopening of Colosimo's restaurant at 2126 South Wabash avenue and of other resorts closed by Mayor Thompson just before last fall election. Judge Denis E. Sullivan of the Superior court issued an injunction restraining the mayor and other city officials from interfering with the operation of Colosimo's, and at the same time handed down a decision denying the city's power to license restaurants.

This decision not only permits places which have been closed by the exercise of the police powers of the city to reopen, but also may cost the city $140,000 annually in revenue. This is the amount derived from the restaurant licenses at present.

City Plans Fight.

Assistant Corporation Counsel B. A. Cronson, who represented the city in the case before Judge Sullivan, made immediate preparations to carry the case to the Supreme court.

"We intend to make a finish fight," he said. "If the ruling is correct the city has been issuing a great many illegal licenses."

In the bill for injunction filed in behalf of Michael Potson and Rocco de Stefano, the administrators of the Colosimo estate, it was alleged that the city's charter does not authorize the licensing of restaurants. It was set forth in the bill filed through Attorney Louis Jacobson that Mayor Thompson told the administrators if they attempted to open the restaurant by law he would close it by force.

Attorney Jacobson pointed out to the court that the city assumed the authority to license restaurants in an ordinance passed in 1911.

Extract from Decision.

Judge Sullivan in his decision said:

"It is argued by the city that a court of chancery will not enjoin the prosecution of a criminal or a quasi-criminal statute or ordinance. This is true, but in this case it is shown that the mayor is not trying to enforce any ordinance, and, in fact, the complaint is made that the complainants are not arrested, and, hence, have no opportunity of being taken to any law court where the validity of this ordinance might be tested."

BEG YOUR PARDON

In the rotogravure section today reference is made to Miss Georgette Cohan. Since the section went to press she has become Mrs. J. William Souther.

On Feb. 21 THE TRIBUNE carried an item from its Buenos Aires correspondent to the effect that negotiations were under way there toward agreement by the Munson and Ward steamship lines to stay out of the Cuban and Porto Rican trade. C. B. Kellogg of New York, freight traffic manager of the Munson Steamship line, says he knows of no such arrangement and declares that neither line would step out of the Cuban business.

TRIANGLE LEADS TO DEATH; HUNT CHICAGO WOMAN

Elgin, Ill., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—The body of Walter Forbish, 30 years old, a carpenter of Harvard, a town thirty-eight miles south of here, was found near the outskirts of that town early today. He is believed to have been slain in a love quarrel which involves a Chicago woman and a Harvard man.

Forbish had been shot through the heart. Money was found in his pockets and the police have eliminated robbery as a motive.

The man was last seen last night with a woman who arrived on the 9:40 Chicago train. She is said to have visited the town often and Forbish, an unmarried man, was enamored of her. Recently she is said to have rejected him for another man.

When last seen the two were quarreling. The other man is believed to have seen them together.

Chief of Police William Nolan has already arrested three members of an Italian family who live in a box car near the scene of the murder. They are believed to have been witnesses of the affair.

The man sought is Tony Maribelli. Since the shooting he has not been seen.

Deputy Sheriff Charles Wandrack left tonight for Chicago with the address of the woman. The Chicago police have been asked to search for Maribelli.

AURORA HUSBAND DEFENDS NAME OF WOUNDED WIFE

Aurora, Ill., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Mrs. Ethel Sylvester, who was shot by Carl Stenike, who killed himself, is making a desperate fight for her life. She is wounded in three places, and her chances for recovery are believed slight. R. L. Turner, a grocer, who was with Mrs. Sylvester when she was shot, and who was struck by two stray bullets, is on the road to recovery, physicians say.

The husband of the wounded woman denied that Mrs. Sylvester had been friendly with Stenike. He said: "Stenike pursued her. My wife would have nothing to do with him and he shot her. She is good and true."

In his letter to the husband Stenike declared that he had bought Mrs. Sylvester a fur coat and other things and she had then turned him down for another man.

Judge Delays Ruling on Tammany Chief's Tax Case

New York, Feb. 26.—Justice Robert F. Wagner of the Supreme court today reserved decision on the motion to dismiss indictments against Charles F. Murphy, Tammany Hall leader, and other defendants, charged with conspiring to defraud the federal government of large sums of income taxes.

REINBERG ESTATE NEAR $1,000,000, FAMILY FIGURES

Will Gives Property to the Widow and Sisters.

Estimates made yesterday by the family of Peter Reinberg, late president of the board of commissioners of Cook county, and his attorney, Joseph E. Fitch, place the value of his estate as close to $1,000,000.

The will, distributing the entire estate among those who survive him, will be filed tomorrow in the Probate court. The beneficiaries will be his widow, Mrs. Mary Reinberg, 5643 Sheridan road, a brother, five sisters, and an adopted son.

Mr. Reinberg, according to his family and friends, gave large sums to charity during his life. Hardly a week passed, it is said, that he did not answer the plea of some institution or of individuals. This, it is pointed out, explains the absence of charitable bequests.

The widow will receive almost half of the estate, it is said. She assumes title to the Sheridan road home through joint tenancy.

Greenhouses of Big Value.

A rough estimate of the value of the personal property places its value at $400,000. Among the valuable pieces of real estate are his greenhouses. It is said that his business in flowers ranked among the largest of the country. Under a plan, said to have been approved by Mr. Reinberg, the greenhouse business will remain in the family.

Adopted Son Gets $50,000.

The adopted son, Charles Reinberg, who is also a grand nephew, is provided with a trust of $50,000. He is 16 years old. It is stipulated that the fund be created out of the proceeds of the first sales of the real property. The young man is a student at St. Thomas college, St. Paul, Minn.

The relatives, aside from the wife and son, who share in the estate are: Mrs. Margaret Weiland, wife of Matthew Weiland of Evanston; Mrs. Mary Zender, widow, 1516 Thorndale avenue; Mrs. Catherine Smith, widow, Rogers Park; Mrs. Annie Hoffman; George Reinberg, and Mrs. Helen Zender, wife of Adam Zender of Rogers Park.

Mrs. Mary Zender is the mother of Henry Zender, superintendent of public service of Cook county.

ARREST DENTIST FOR ABDUCTING 16 YEAR OLD GIRL

DR. F. A. LAUZER.
[Russell Photo.]

Dr. Frederick A. Lauzer, who formerly had a dental office in Chicago, was arrested in Minneapolis yesterday and held to the grand jury in $3,000 bonds on a charge of having abducted a 16 year old Chicago girl whom he had lured to his office through advertisements inserted in the newspapers.

He is accused of having been implicated in white slavery plots through which nearly 500 girls have been turned over to a commercialized vice ring.

Letters seized in his Minneapolis office show that scores of girls, who answered his ads, were asked to disrobe and submit to being photographed in "art" poses. It is claimed the dentist operated in connection with white slave gangs here and in Milwaukee. He graduated from the Chicago Dental college, Harrison and Wood streets, in 1919.

EXEMPT UNIONS FROM TRUST LAW, LABOR'S DEMAND

A. F. of L. to Introduce Bill in Next Congress.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—The American Federation of Labor through its representatives will introduce at the next session of congress a bill providing for the exemption of labor unions from prosecution under "all anti-combination and so-called conspiracy laws," Matthew Woll, vice president of the federation, announced tonight.

The announcement came after a meeting of the executive council of the federation at which the indictment at Indianapolis of officials of the United Mine Workers of America under the anti-trust laws was discussed.

"Shackled" at Present.

Mr. Woll said that because of hearings on jurisdictional disputes the council had delayed final action, but that the whole subject would be taken up next week and "a policy defined."

"The action of the government in prosecuting the mineworkers' officials," said Mr. Woll, "is accumulated evidence of the necessity of labor pressing its program to attempt by legislation to be freed from the shackles of the anti-trust law."

Should labor be unsuccessful in getting exemption, he added, another bill will be ready calling for the repeal of "all anti-trust laws."

Building Trades Keep Wages Up.

The executive council will make plans, it was stated, to bring these proposed bills to the attention of all labor organizations in the United States. Each labor union will enlist public support and bring all possible pressure upon representatives in congress.

INDUSTRIAL WAVES

DETROIT, Mich.—The Cadillac company announced that 1,000 more employés would be taken on March 1.

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—The working force of the central region of the Pennsylvania railroad system will be further reduced. Operation of the Pittsburgh terminal as a separate organization is to be discontinued.

READING, Pa.—The Reading Iron company, operating five plants in Reading and four in other Pennsylvania towns, announced a cut in prices of $8 to $10 per ton in tubular products, effective March 1.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich.—The Grand Trunk shops here will reopen Tuesday with a force of 525 men.

FORT WORTH, Tex.—The Chevrolet Motor Company of Texas announced that production would be resumed at its southwestern factory on a steady daily basis March 1.

E. H. GARY SAYS FEDERAL BOARD APPROVED PRICES

New York, Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of directors of the United States Steel corporation today refused to comment in detail on the letter mailed to him by John Skelton Williams, controller of the currency. The letter charged steel prices were excessive and resulted in enormous profits.

"I do not care to comment," Mr. Gary said, "on Mr. Williams' letter except to say that the prices of the United States Steel corporation were those approved by the industrial board after all facts and figures were ascertained. That approval was made in March of 1919. Mr. Williams is familiar with all those facts."

Wall street men said all things taken into consideration, the corporation virtually had lowered prices, as a result of the fact that an increase of approximately $25,000,000 in the annual cost of labor through wage increases in the early part of 1920 and later on the increase in freight rates which was absorbed without reflection in quotations for steel products.

FOOD RESEARCH LABORATORY TO OPEN ON JULY 1

New York, Feb. 26.—The Carnegie corporation of New York tonight announced it had entered into an agreement with Leland Stanford Jr. University of California by which a food research institute is to be established at the university for the intensive study of the problems of the production, distribution and consumption of food.

The corporation expressed hope that the new organization will be in time known as the Hoover institute. The institute was first suggested by Herbert Hoover.

The institute will begin work July 1. The corporation will provide $700,000 for its support for ten years.

Need for continual research work in problems arising after food has left the farmers' hands was emphasized by experience during the war, it was explained, when the study of food supply was necessary to obtain maximum efficiency in the nutrition of the nations involved.

During the war much of the previous data regarding food was found to be inaccurate.

WHY IS IT?
(A Question and an Answer)

We are often asked: "Why is it that your food portions and quality match up in every detail with the service in the best restaurants and hotels in the country and yet your prices are low?"

The North American Restaurant is conducted exclusively by restaurant and hotel men whose practical experience has been obtained in catering to the requirements of the most fastidious patrons of restaurants and hotels.

A restaurant owner, on an investigating tour, after ordering and eating the above dish said, "You are losing money at the price." Certainly, because he could only figure what it would cost him to serve the same thing. And he, in figuring his price, had to add the cost of service to the price of the food.

The North American Restaurant gives you wonderful food values like this because useless frills have been eliminated. You serve yourself and pay nothing for service. You pay only for the food you eat. And there are no waiters standing around to be tipped.

No matter when you dine here—for breakfast, lunch, dinner, during the afternoon or after the theatre—you get food which can't be beaten anywhere at prices which would have been considered reasonable even before the war.

For lunch we suggest a great big portion of Chicken a la King at 50 cents: Or a big portion of delicious Chicken Salad for 50 cents:

If you are real hungry at dinner time you can't beat the great big juicy Tenderloin Steak we serve for 75 cents: Or the whole breast of a milk-fed Chicken (all white meat) for 65 cents.

After the theatre for 50 cents Roast Ham with champagne sauce—or a Club Sandwich for 50 cents—or half a cold Lobster for 45 cents. You can't find more sensible prices anywhere. And you can't beat the food no matter what you pay.

Every portion we serve is a big generous one—often ample for two people. And every hour of the day or night we have ready for you seventeen different kinds of salad and seventeen kinds of pie. Is it any wonder that the North American is famous?

TIGHTEN BATTLE LINES, OFFICIALS' PLEA TO TENANTS

League Fights Mystery "Foe Propaganda."

"Fight together," the old battle cry of the Chicago Tenants' Protective league, was voiced yesterday in a new way.

At a meeting at the Illinois Athletic club officials of the league decided to advise all "fighting tenants" to band together in their respective apartments and districts and, as far as possible, employ the same attorneys in resisting the ouster suits of landlords.

By this means, they pointed out, the tenants would not only save attorney fees but also be in a position to give impetus to the "rent strike" and keep in closer touch with the legal authorities employed by the league.

Fights Mysterious Propaganda.

E. A. Potter, general manager of the league, began a campaign during the day to combat mysterious propaganda which has been sent around during the last few days, ostensibly from the tenants' league.

One of the circulars, it was found, had been mailed to Chief Justice Olson of the Municipal court. In this particular circular—printed on plain writing paper instead of print paper—the tenants were advised to "use violence, if necessary," a thing, according to Mr. Potter, that has never been advocated by the league.

"Some one is trying to injure us by proposing a sort of fight the average tenant will not participate in," he declared.

Ruling in the Case.

While at first glance the decision of the judges on the precedence to be given forcible detainer cases in the Municipal court calenders appears to be a victory for the property owners, a study of it will show that such is not the case, according to officers of the league.

The rule now reads:

"The trial judge has the power under rule 3 to consider, in setting down the case (forcible detainer and other summary proceedings) for trial, the state of the business of the court and the rights of the litigants, and the trial judge will proceed to exercise a sound discretion in setting the case for trial according to its exigencies."

According to J. R. Patterson, president of the league, there is nothing in this rule that makes it mandatory to rush a forcible detainer case to trial, especially if the judge has reason to believe it involves a case of profiteering on the part of some landlord.

HI RENT'S FOES

State Senator Sponsoring Rental Bill and Secretary of Tenants' League.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

SENATOR HAROLD C. KESSINGER of Aurora, author of the Illinois enabling act which, if passed, will allow any city to fix rents, announced yesterday that several hundred tenants and attorneys would appear before the public utilities committee in the state senate chambers on March 16. The fate of the Kessinger bill is in the hands of the committee.

Attorneys for the tenants argue that a dwelling is a public utility, and, as such, rentals therefor may be fixed by municipalities. If the bill is passed, city councils will be vested with police power to compel landlords to abide by rentals fixed by city commissions.

Senator Kessinger, J. R. Patterson, president of the tenants' association, and A. E. Jessurun, secretary, will speak tomorrow night before meetings of tenants at the Ogden school, 9 West Chestnut street, and the Le Moyne school, 845 Waveland avenue.

Two Die in Airplane's Fall at Rockaway

Rockaway, N. Y., Feb. 26.—An air pocket encountered at an altitude of 500 feet, which threw their seaplane into a tailspin and sent it crashing to the ground before it could be brought under control again, is believed to have been responsible for the death of Lieut. Harold T. Stevens, U. S. N., and Chief Machinists' Mate Eugene Lindsay, while making a routine flight over the naval air station here this afternoon. Lindsay's home was in San Francisco.

PLAN TO ENJOIN LIFTING OF BAN ON WOOD HOMES

City Urged to Put O. K. on "Hollow Walls."

The proposed suspension of the fire ordinances with a view to permitting construction of wooden houses within the present fire limits will be met with injunction suits backed by real estate organizations, material men and architects, it was learned yesterday.

At the same time Ald. Kostner, chairman of the council buildings committee, which is considering the request of the building trades members that the ban on wooden buildings be lifted, received from the Illinois Society of Architects three pages of suggestions as to how the building code may be revised to cut down the cost of fireproof construction.

"I am advised by some of the best lawyers in the city that the suspension of the fire limits would be illegal," said F. E. Davidson, president of the society. "It would force up the insurance rates on fireproof property already built under the protection of the present ordinances by increasing the fire hazard on such property.

City Liable for Damages.

"The building commissioner and the city itself would be liable for damages by the owners of fireproof property in affected districts. Commissioner of Buildings Bostrom, I am informed, admits that the plan is illegal. There will be plenty of lawsuits if the plan is tried."

Building tradesmen and lumber dealers have flooded the building committee with petitions, signed by 4,000 names, requesting that the ban be lifted to permit quick, cheap construction and to give employment to carpenters, masons and other tradesmen.

Recommend Concrete Blocks.

Among the suggestions of the architects is one that cinder concrete blocks and other concrete blocks used extensively in the reconstruction of homes at Halifax, N. S., following the disaster there, be permitted in Chicago.

Another is that hollow brick walls—two walls made of bricks on edge with an air space between—be permitted in Chicago and a third suggestion is that in the construction of homes with less than 1,200 square feet of floor area, the use of wooden studding covered on the outside with steel fabric and three coats of cement plaster be permitted.

"The hollow brick wall can be built at one-third the cost of the solid wall and is being used extensively in home building in Paterson, N. J., and Los Angeles, Cal.," Mr. Davidson said.

JAILED FOR ANNOYING GIRL.

Robert Sparmackor, 35 years old, of 2250 South Kildare avenue was sentenced by Judge Holdom to sixty days in the house of correction and fined $200 yesterday for annoying 10 year old Julia Bannes of 3425 West Fifteenth street while they sat next to each other in the Circle theater, at 3241 West Twelfth street, last June.

FOR many years we have been trying to do one thing—to lead the people of this community to believe that when they get any merchandise from this store they can be absolutely sure of the good quality.

We have succeeded pretty well in this; "Scholle quality" is a standard term today in the minds of our public. It isn't so much the prices; they're always low enough for good quality. All you need to do is to look around a little, and you'll discover how low they really are.

And because we pledge ourselves on the excellence of our goods, we don't expect our customer to keep anything he buys here, as soon as he discovers that, for any reason, he doesn't want it. If the article you buy should prove to be not as good as you thought it—we're not infallible—that proves that it's not as good as we thought it. We want it back for our own sake as much as for yours.

But we go further than that. If the article, being as good as we both think it is, doesn't exactly "fit" your home, or your taste, we want that back, too. Dissatisfaction in the mind of a customer is almost as bad for both of us as some inferiority in the goods.

We are mentioning here a number of very excellent things at prices that give you more value for the money than ever before. Some are special purchases, bought from the factory a few days ago at very great advantage. We doubt if such values will be seen again for some time.

28 SUBURB HOMES MADE HAPPY BY 28 VIENNA MAIDS

Girls Reach Here After Troubles Galore.

Twenty-eight wilted, but not disspirited Viennese young women arrived in Chicago yesterday morning shortly after 2 o'clock to begin their new life as domestics in the households of wealthy residents of the suburbs. They comprise the first group to arrive this year from Austria to take household employment.

Mrs. Walter E. Dellers of River Forest, originator of the scheme of bringing girls from her native land to American homes, was notified of the girls' expected arrival yesterday only a few hours before their train pulled in. Hurried telephone calls to homes throughout the suburbs from Glencoe to Berwyn mobilized sixteen of the women who had furnished funds to bring the girls here. They met the Vienna party at the station.

Last of Girls Claimed.

The twelve unclaimed girls were taken home by Mrs. Dellers and fed and given a place to sleep until later in the day, when the other employers were notified and the girls were taken away.

Mrs. Mary Kovitch, who had charge of the Vienna party, was taken ill in Boston and was forced to go to a hospital. The boat line then took charge of the girls.

The blue eyed fräuleins had a hard trip across the ocean and they brought tales of intense misery in their homeland. Miss Annie Leitich, formerly a school teacher in Vienna, kept a sketchy diary of her trip, in which she told of hardships cheerfully endured because the girls had been "through the school of the war."

"Much Rough Weather."

"We started from Vienna three weeks ago," her diary reads. "We are only twenty-eight because we could not get any fit accommodations for more on the steamer. For the same reason we had to travel steerage and we had no agreeable passage. Much rough weather. But we Viennese girls are accustomed to be content with little. We have been taught that faculty in the utterly hard school of the war.

"Three thousand applied to come with us, but they could not be taken.

"Things are indeed hard in Vienna. Middle class people, having lost their savings in the war and the breakdown of the old Austro-Hungarian crowd, cannot live on their earnings. They have either to sink into poverty or to engage in criminal transactions.

Luggage Stolen, Claim.

"Bad luck struck our little party when we reached Boston. Mrs. Kovitch became ill. On account of conditions in the steerage, where we had to ride, we were forced to go to government places and be bathed and disinfected. We had to leave our baggage on the steamer. It had been brought out on the docks while we were in the disinfecting place and much had been stolen.

"Some of the girls had used their last money to buy clothing, so that we would not get here destitute, and most of this was gone. We were a miserable picture, sitting around Mrs. Kovitch and weeping.

"Suddenly four men pushed us aside and took Mrs. Kovitch away on a stretcher."

TO TRY BIG TIM NEXT WEDNESDAY ON OLD CHARGE

Big Tim Murphy, who only last week disposed of an assault case in the Municipal court, will be placed on trial before Judge Kersten in the Criminal court on Wednesday on a charge of receiving a stolen automobile. The indictment on which Murphy is to be tried is one several years old. It was not tried under the Hoyne administration because of the fact that Murphy was indicted in the Maurice Enright killing. The case has been shifted from courtroom to courtroom and finally has landed in Judge Kersten's court.

State's Attorney R. E. Crowe, when informed of the case pending against Murphy, ordered it tried as soon as possible and assigned Robert W. Daniels to prosecute the case.

He ordered his assistant to make every effort to force the case to trial and consent to no more continuances. The charge against Murphy is that he was found in possession of a stolen automobile of Dr. James Scherer of Meridian street, Indianapolis, Sept. 30, 1919.

The car, a Stutz roadster, was found in Murphy's possession on Oct. 4, and bore a license plate which had been stolen from the automobile of Robert Day of 4246 Sheridan road several days before. Murphy at the time of his indictment on this charge said that he purchased the automobile in a legitimate way.

Unknown Wag Sends New Broom to White House

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Some one sent a big broom, carefully wrapped in canvas, to the White House today. It was consigned to President Elect Harding.

"I hope dat broom don't raise much dust," said William Pannell, who has been the executive office janitor ever since McKinley's time.

CROWE'S AID TO ASK REMOVAL OF PUBLIC GUARDIAN

Mrs. Spencer Says "Only Did My Duty."

Charges that Mrs. Mary Belle Spencer, public guardian of Cook county, intimidated witnesses yesterday while she was defending Max Klyczk, 18 year old Chicago Heights youth, will be filed with Gov. Len Small by Assistant State's Attorney Chas. C. Roe, according to a statement by Mr. Roe last night.

MRS. MARY BELLE SPENCER.

According to witnesses, the youth wore a red mask and brandished a revolver, when he attacked girls. Klyczk was convicted and will be sentenced next Saturday.

Mr. Roe said in Judge William Dever's court, where the boy was tried, that he will petition Gov. Small to remove Mrs. Spencer from public office.

Ridiculed by Mrs. Spencer.

Mrs. Spencer ridiculed the statement when she was interviewed last night.

"It is positively silly," she said. "No one stands in better with Bob Crowe, the state's attorney, than I do. I was doing my duty in seeing that the immature boy received justice when tried on a charge of attacking a little girl and the judge complimented me on the splendid way in which I handled the case.

"You will be doing a serious injury to this immature boy and to my reputation as a public officer and a lawyer if you publish any of this controversy," Mrs. Spencer excitedly added.

Several Chicago Heights residents appeared in court when Klyczk was tried on a charge of assaulting 12 year old Alice Parker, daughter of Frank E. Parker, wealthy resident of the suburb. Funds obtained by public subscription were used to retain Attorney Howard P. Roe to assist Prosecutor Roe.

Two Girls Intimidated, He Says.

"We have information that Mrs. Spencer told Ruth Gerlach, 11 years old, and her sister, June, if they testified about the time this young man attacked them they might be sent to jail," said Assistant State's Attorney Roe. "Mrs. Spencer visited Mrs. Maybelle Taylor of Chicago Heights, who was recently attacked by Klyczk, and begged her to refuse to tell the court of her experience."

The man is a former patient of the psychopathic hospital, but was released several months ago.

ASK DEATH DRIVER'S ARREST.

At an inquest over Peter Lepke, 889 Sedgwick street, killed Feb. 6 when struck by an automobile at Niles, Deputy Coroner Peter Seese recommended yesterday the police arrest the driven and held him to the grand jury. No trace of the driver has been found by the police.

The Semi-Annual Sale

A Reduction Unequaled in Our History! Never Before Have We Marked Down Our Prices So Completely. Furniture, Curtains, Rugs Included

We cannot continue to sell on any such basis as we are now doing.

There has been a drop in the manufacturing costs, but it is overshadowed by the tremendous reductions we are taking.

It is a situation without precedent; an opportunity to buy at sacrifice prices that are not in the least warranted by costs of manufacture or the state of the market.

Rugs

With the additional reductions made for our Semi-Annual Sale many rugs in one of the nation's largest collections of Orientals are submitted for your approval at prices half of what they were last December.

These at half price are listed below as well as others at attractive, though not so great, reductions:—

Extra Heavy Chinese
In blue, rose and taupes.

$180 4x7, $90
$500 8x10, $250 $690 9x12, $345

We offer the highest grade of carpets and chenille rugs at especially low prices.

Curtains

During our Semi-Annual Sale our stock of Spring Curtains and fabrics is radically reduced in price for those who wish to do their Summer refurnishing early.

A New Purchase at Half-Price

8-Piece Dining Set, $398 Reduced from $800

The set includes a 66-inch sideboard, oblong dining table, 8-ft. extension; 5 side chairs and one arm chair. With 72-inch sideboard the same combination is $413, reduced from $828. $154 serving table to match, $77. $232 china cabinet, $116.

It is a design of great beauty and refinement, showing at its best the Heppelwhite influence on the furniture made for leading Colonial homes. It comes in mahogany of splendid figure.

These two sets come from a maker of the better kind of furniture. They are beautifully designed, built for generations of service and finely finished.

They were produced last season and were successful at their regular prices, which were low enough to appeal to a multitude of people.

The manufacturer made a lot more of them. Now the most exceptional circumstances force an immediate sale. Half price is the result. It is an opportunity not to be overlooked.

8-Piece Dining Set, $288 Reduced from $575

The set includes a 66-inch sideboard, oblong dining table, 8-ft. extension; 5 side chairs, 1 arm chair. With 72-inch sideboard the same combination is $318, reduced from $635. $110 serving table to match, $55. $172 china cabinet, $86.

The designer has shown admirable skill in his handling of graceful and sturdy motifs of the Queen Anne period, always good in the dining room. It comes in walnut or mahogany.

Cane-Paneled Sofa
$139
Reduced from $240

Mahogany frame, 3 spring cushions, 2 pillows, bolster. Velour or damask covering.

$120 Arm Chair to Match, $74

A Selection of Covers at Proportionate Prices

Because of a special condition existing in the manufacturing field, we were able to secure these sofas at a very great reduction.

Designed in the Queen Anne style and well made of the best cane and mahogany, they present an unusual opportunity. This sofa while being solidly constructed is slight of line and aptly suited for the modern apartment in which economy of space is so essential.

We are able to furnish it in different coverings at varying prices, all similarly reduced.

Wabash Avenue and Washington Street

EASTERN STATES MAY ENTER ON 'ELECTRIC ERA'

Congress May "Harness Mines and Rivers."

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—Unified development of electricity, supplied from both water power and steam driven machinery, to effect an annual saving of about 25,000,000 tons of coal, run 12,000 miles of railroad, light cities, run street cars, factories, and mines, is urged in a report covering the area from Boston to Washington, submitted to President Wilson by Secretary of the Interior Payne.

The report, which deals with progress obtained in an inquiry by the United States geological survey, looks as far forward as 1930 when that area will require 48,000,000,000 kilowatt hours of electric power. Of that total the super-power system, urged in the report, would supply 36,000,000,000 kilowatt hours.

Means Concerted Action.

Through the concerted development of water power from the St. Lawrence, Raquette, Delaware, Susquehanna, Potomac rivers and streams in the Adirondacks, it is estimated that 12,000,000,000 kilowatt hours could be produced. "This fact," the report says, "therefore forces the conclusion that most careful consideration must be given to the development of power from coal."

The means for making this project effective, the report says, should be the authorization by congress of a corporation, with right of eminent domain. Subject to state authority in each case, a "super power" company is suggested, with nonpar stock as its only form of security, with vested rights of existing power companies protected through their subscription to the "super power" stock, pro rata "upon capacity demand and load factors." The stock then, it is suggested, could be offered by customer companies for public subscription.

Big Savings Claimed.

Financial feasibility of the idea is urged by the report on the following estimates:

Electrification of 12,000 miles of railway at gross cost of $800,000,000, reduced to $650,000,000 by salvage of steam locomotives, while yearly savings on coal and maintenance "would return approximately 14 per cent on the investment."

Incomplete data on 50,000 power using plants indicates saving of 6,000,000 to 8,000,000 tons of coal a year.

Electrification of hard coal mines to save 6,500,000 tons of coal yearly.

Public utilities to be saved 4,000,000 tons of coal annually at average cost of $3.50 a ton.

Limitation of Earnings.

The report urges limitations of earnings of "super power" corporation stock, on a basis of a fair division between the investing public and consumers and distribution of excess earnings to customer companies as well as to stockholders.

"The prime object of the 'super power plan,'" Mr. Payne said, "is a larger supply of cheaper power. The super power survey looks to the full utilization of all resources and conservation of the country's fuel can be attained only with the aid of large capital investment.

"Neither the nation, by coal conservation, nor the individual consumer, by lower prices, can profit by the project, however sound its engineering and economic phases, unless the conditions of financing are sufficiently attractive to warrant the use of the country's financial resources."

Any action, of course, would devolve on the new administration.

BANK OF KINDNESS

Draw Check on It for the Unfortunate.

BY REV. G. A. MAC WHORTER.

Between $60,000 and $70,000 has been raised for relieving the starving children and women of Russia. One relief committeeman contributed a consignment of supplies, another a shipment of shoes at a meeting of the Russian relief team captains last week. The campaign will close on Tuesday with a luncheon at the Palmer house, when all receipts will be turned in and reports made.

MISS MARION SCOTT

During the last week Mrs. Jacob Baur, Miss Alice Thompson, Miss Marion Scott, and George B. Molyneaux, have been speaking in Wheaton, Aurora, Elgin, and other surrounding towns for the Russian relief fund.

The Celtic Cross association of Chicago has sent $500 to aid the sick and helpless women and children of Cork, Ireland, in response to a plea made by Sister St. Sulpice, superior of the Bon Secour Nursing Sisters' hospital, which is in need of funds to meet the calls made upon its free bed service. Recent fires have resulted in an increase of flu cases brought on by exposure. The Bon Secour sisters are well known in the United States, having a hospital in Baltimore, a home for crippled children in Philadelphia, and nursing centers in Washington and Detroit. Arrangements are under way to establish a branch of the community in Chicago. The Rev. A. M. Griffin, O. S. M., of Our Lady of Sorrows church, is interested in the project, and gifts for the sisters may be sent to him, or through the Bank of Kindness.

Judge Barasa Will Try to Americanize Italians

Judge Barasa will devote two or three nights a week to Americanization work among the Italians of Chicago, he announced yesterday. He will begin Feb. 28 to teach a class in the clubrooms of the United Italian Benevolent association, 645 North Clark street. Associated with the benevolent association in the work is the United American association.

ARMY TRAINING FOR CIVILIANS MAY GET A TEST

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—The first step toward establishment of a nation-wide system for military training of civilians is contained in the army appropriation bill, under consideration in the senate today. Its reception by the house may constitute a test of American sentiment toward universal training.

If this section of the bill is retained, nine civilian training camps will be opened this summer. One million dollars has been appropriated with the idea that this sum will maintain 10,000 men in the nine camps for thirty days.

"It is the Plattsburg idea enacted into law," Senator Wadsworth told the United Press today. "If the plan meets with favor, we hope to increase year by year by the number of men who may be accommodated in the camps. Whether it will lead to a form of universal training will depend upon the way the public receives the innovation."

AMERICAN LEGION NOTES

James G. Brophy post invites all legionnaires and ex-service men to attend a stag and vaudeville show in their new quarters at 4041 West Madison street, tomorrow night.

A number of large meetings will be held here to open the statewide membership campaign of the American Legion. Department Commander William R. McCauley, Department Adjutant William Q. Setliffe, and Roger V. Flory, chairman of the membership campaign, will address each meeting. On Tuesday, March 1, Oak Park and Forest Park posts will be visited. March 2 a noon luncheon will be held at Central Y. M. C. A. by the Naval post. On March 3 north side posts will stage a large massmeeting and athletic carnival at Sixth Regiment armory, Broadway and Thorndale. This meeting will be conducted for the benefit of North Shore, Rogers Park, Lincoln Park, Lake View, Ravenswood, Lafayette, and North Side posts. On March 4 the Legionnaires club, which consists of sixteen downtown posts, will receive the department commander and his staff at their headquarters in the City club.

Butler Brothers post will meet Thursday night at 426 West Randolph street. The usual supper will be followed by a short business meeting.

First Tank Corps post will hold a mystery meeting and entertainment Thursday night in room 1124, County building.

Ravenswood post will meet Tuesday night at 8:15 o'clock at Lasker's hall, 4717 Lincoln avenue.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Sergt. Charles Hinman, who was wounded at Cambrai and has just convalesced sufficiently to return to Chicago, will be presented with a medal at the quarterly reunion of ex-service men this evening at the First Presbyterian church, Forty-first and Grand boulevard. There are 265 names on the honor roll of the church.

FIRST INFANTRY TO FEDERALIZE SIX COMPANIES

On Tuesday, March 1, the 1st infantry, commanded by Lieut. Col. F. M. Allen in the absence of Col. Anson L. Bolte, will muster six companies into the federal service. Lieut. Col. William H. Patterson, U. S. A., will inspect the 400 men for the federal government and Col. James Royane, on duty with the national guard in Illinois, will inspect the men for the state. Two machine gun companies—Company D and Company H—will be included among the companies federalized at this time.

The six companies, with their commanding officers, are: Company A, Capt. W. A. Heptig; Company D, Capt. Daniel Cottle; Company G, Capt. R. L. Magers; Company H, Capt. George Robinson; Company J, Capt. Paul Baumeister; Company K, Capt. Henry Turner. The exercises next Tuesday will begin at 8 o'clock and will be held at the 1st infantry armory, Michigan avenue and Sixteenth street.

(A Business Editorial)

THE UNWRITTEN LEGEND

The people who buy and the merchants who sell ought to be close, trustworthy friends. They should be mutually helpful. The ideal retailer buys what the consumer needs. The consumer is the arbiter. His will, and that alone, is final. The retailer buys that he may sell and thereby make a living. The people buy to live.

There should be the utmost frankness, kindliness and confidence between them.

Deception, misrepresentation, should be taboo. The best success for both is based on the truth.

High priced shoddy, sold as "all wool and a yard wide," is never a bargain for either. The chief loser in the end is the seller. Each depends on the other, therefore honesty is the best policy. When from experience each trusts the other, then and then only business friendship arises which lasts through life. The unwritten legend over every store should be: "He who enters here is welcome, is told the truth, and, buying or not, is satisfied."

NEW WOMAN IN CONGRESS TALKS OF SHORT SKIRT

Not So Much Worse than Old Long Ones.

Atlantic City, N. J., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Miss Alice Robertson, new congresswoman from Oklahoma, cafeteria proprietress, and school teacher, is not sure that the nation is ready for a federal department of education with a cabinet officer. At the session of one of the groups of the National Education association last night Miss Robertson spoke to several thousand educators.

"I do not feel that enough deliberation has been given to the subject of a federal department of education as yet," said Miss Robertson. "This does not mean that I am opposed to such a thing or even that I will not vote for it. I am not in congress yet and therefore not in a position to talk definitely about these things."

"Miss Alice," as she is familiarly known in Oklahoma, says that a woman can do anything she sets out to do if "she keeps her mouth shut and her ears open."

She Is a Conservative.

Defining the position she will take in congress, she said:

"I would rather be like a humble little light that shines a long distance across the prairies than a bright sky rocket that flashes in midair for a few seconds and then falls to earth with a dull thud. If people think that I am going to do something sensational, they're mistaken. I am a conservative. The platform upon which I was elected is: 'I am a Christian; I am an American; I am a Republican.'"

Discussing woman's dress, she said:

"I do not believe that the modern short skirts, if they do not go to extremes, are much worse than the prudish long skirts of the mid-Victorian period that were held so high when crossing the street."

Why Girls Paint and Powder.

Mothers are responsible for much of the epidemic of "China noses" and painted faces among school girls, the convention was told by Mary H. Johnson of the Washington Irving High school, New York.

"What can you expect of the girls when they see their mothers setting the style in them?" she said.

"It is easy to get the girls to stop these atrocities," continued Miss Johnson. "When under a plan of student government it is shown that the majority of girls paint and powder, their moral suasion soon puts a stop to its use as a 'fad.' The common sense of the majority of girls is against the use of powder and paint.

"It is an attempt to be stylish. I do not think the average girl does it to attract attention. At the Washington Irving High school it is reported that the student council has abolished paint and powder and also placed the ban on sweaters without a blouse beneath, and transparent shirtwaists."

Atlantic Hotel Clerk Dies of Taxi Injuries

John Hagen, chief clerk in the Atlantic hotel, died in St. Luke's hospital late yesterday afternoon of internal injuries received Feb. 13 when he was struck by a Checker taxicab at Forty-seventh street and Grand boulevard. According to R. C. Roesseler, proprietor and manager of the hotel, Hagen had been employed there a year and a half. His parents live at New Castle, Pa. Two sisters arrived here yesterday, having heard of their brother's critical condition.

Jewish Educator Dies After New York Attack

New York, Feb. 26.—Dr. Wilfred Phineas Kotkov, Jewish educator, who was attacked and injured by highwaymen early Thursday morning, died here today without regaining consciousness. He was a professor of philosophy and the Talmud in the Jewish Theological seminary here. The police are holding four men, who are alleged to have confessed.

Woman Who Took Arsenic Poison Dies at Hospital

Despondency over ill health is believed to have led Mrs. Ada McCord, 33 years old, of 6512 Rhodes avenue to commit suicide in her home by swallowing a quantity of arsenic poison. She died yesterday at St. Bernard's hospital. Samuel C. McCord, the widower, told the Gran Crossing police that Friday when he went home for dinner he found his wife dying.

Second Attempt to Kill Self by Gas Succeeds

John Burlis, 35 years old, of 1215 Marion court, a tailor, was found dead, asphyxiated by gas, yesterday. Anton Moleko, who occupies an adjoining apartment, told the police that Burlis tried to commit suicide six months ago, using gas.

Drops Dead in Loop Moving Picture Theater

B. J. Morris, 50 years old, of 5 East Ontario street, a freight representative for the Pennsylvania Railroad company, was looking at a motion picture in the Cozy theater, 42 South Clark street, yesterday, when he suddenly dropped dead in his seat.

SECRET BRIDE

Stage Star Married Last Friday to Son of Noted Artist.

MRS. LYLE ALBRIGHT.
[Moffett Photo.]

Miss Marjory Davis, the actress, and Lyle Albright, advertising manager of the Illinois Manufacturing company, and son of Adam Emory Albright, noted artist, were secretly married last Friday at the Ravenswood Congregational church, it became known yesterday.

The romance began a few years ago when Mrs. Albright outtalked her husband in a high school oratorical society and won first prize.

While employed as a buyer for Marshall Field and company, Miss Davis took part in one of the plays written by Mrs. Arthur Aldis of Lake Forest. Mrs. Aldis was so impressed with the girl's ability that she introduced her to Oliver Morosco, theatrical producer, who gave her a tryout. She soon became one of his stars, playing the leading rôle in "Over There," "She Walked in Her Sleep," and other successes. She is a daughter of Former Deputy Coroner Samuel L. Davis.

15 BROKERS FACE ARREST; $250,000 U. S. TAX UNPAID

Fifteen members of the Chicago stock exchange and Board of Trade face prison terms and fines ranging from $1,000 to $10,000 on charges of embezzling government funds, unless prompt payment of $250,000 in stamp taxes is made Monday, according to Harry W. Mager, collector of internal revenue. Mr. Mager announced yesterday that he would ask Commissioner Mason to issue warrants unless payment is made.

Failure to file the regular monthly return of stock transactions and to pay the internal revenue stamp tax of 2 cents on each $100 transaction on the Board of Trade caused the order.

In most cases, Mr. Mager said, the money had been collected and held by the delinquents instead of being turned over to the government.

The alleged delinquencies run back in most cases only a month or two. In only two instances do they go back as far as Dec. 1 last. They run all the way from $15,000 to $50,000 for each delinquent.

Mr. Mager declared he was through granting clemency to delinquents.

"In the past we have dropped the prosecution of cases when the taxes and all delinquencies were paid," he said, "even though in some cases payment was not made until after warrants were issued.

"It does not pay. We found the ones we let off merely let it be spread around that this office was 'easy.' From now on every man arrested will be prosecuted to the limit of the law, regardless of whether he pays his taxes or not."

A penalty of six months in jail and a $1,000 fine is the maximum for failure to pay the stamp tax. Failure to file carries a maximum fine of $10,000.

Make your home a musical home

Though a room may not in itself possess an atmosphere of distinction, the touch of refinement can be obtained. Sometimes one beautiful object may be the reason. Such an object is

The Lyon & Healy Apartment Grand Piano

In the visible evidences of genuine homelike customs it achieves a wholly delightful result. It adds the final touch to the home through its presence and through the refining charm and pleasures of music.

Of beautiful design and workmanship, it is a high development in pianoforte construction. The voice is surpassingly rich in depth. With the slightest touch upon the keys the tone arises sweet and clear. This is only possible because of the considerate attention given to the most minute of details which enter into a perfect whole.

Our Display is Markedly Noteworthy in the Savings it Offers to Seekers of Good Pianos

Used pianos have been modernized by us and are offered at a fraction of original costs. Pianos, taken in exchange, are being disposed of at clearance figures.

A Six Month's Trial!

We are also featuring the rental of a new piano for six months with the understanding that if you buy it, this rental money will be credited on your purchase. The plan which will be gladly explained in detail amounts to this, get your piano now, and make your final decision later.

Reduction in Price of Every Piano Made by Us

This action will be full of significance to those who now may obtain a good piano at a figure much less than has been possible for a long time. Yet there has not been the slightest impairment of that standard of excellence which has carried our pianos all over the civilized globe. The price reductions vary from $50 to $215.

Furthermore, Pianola-Pianos and Aeolian Player-Pianos in a number of styles are now being sold by us at radically lower figures. Also we have a number of very fine used Steinway pianos at very attractive prices.

TERMS

While all our prices are based on cash, reasonable expectations of deferred payments will not be disappointed. You can secure for your home a piano, that will give a whole life-time of satisfaction, on monthly installments so small that you will hardly miss the payments. A short period, and then the piano will be yours.

JOIE RAY, I. A. C. STAR, COLLAPSES IN RACE

MAROON AND PURPLE TEAMS DROP BASKETBALL GAMES

MOGULS LEARN GAME MUST RUN ON LEGAL BASIS

Forced to Appeal to Civil Law They Belittle.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Promoters of professional baseball used to boast they could run their own business and enforce their own laws without any aid from the courts and that any time the interpreters of civil law tackled a baseball problem there was sure to be a miscarriage of justice. They have learned that it was an empty boast.

I. E. [Sy] SANBORN. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Today baseball is in the hands of the courts and asking aid from lawmakers. The national commission, formerly composed of "practical baseball men," has been replaced by a judge on the federal bench as supreme commissioner and by a lawyer as secretary and treasurer—neither of them practical baseball men. The new national agreement was drafted by lawyers, and, previous to the consummation, all sides to the controversy, which nearly ended in a diamond war, were represented by attorneys during their sessions.

Need Aid in Gambling War.

It was necessary for the Cook county grand jury to tackle the gambling scandals last fall to produce any results, although the club owners involved spent good money trying to ferret out the truth. And, in order properly to punish the players involved by the confessions of three of the Black Sox clan, it is necessary to depend on the courts.

Aid is being sought from the state legislatures and even from congress to curb the gambling evil by the enactment of laws extending the penalty for bribery to cover the baseball profession. Uniform statutes making it a felony, punishable by imprisonment, are being sought in all states in the country to help the promoters handle the situation that their own shortsightedness and commercial blindness allowed to exist.

An Abject Confession.

No more abject confession of their own inability to govern themselves and their affairs can be imagined than that made by the backers of baseball in the last six months. Their proud citadel, impregnable to crooks, according to their boast, proved as formidable to the gamblers as a soft and tender sirloin steak, and no more so. The promoters, who were a law unto themselves and chesty about that fact, found themselves unable to enforce their own laws or to protect themselves from foes, either outside or inside their breastworks. So they yelled for help, and found it only in the courts which they had belittled.

What will be the result remains to be seen. The first few weeks of the coming season will give an indication of the attitude of the rooters toward the new deal. Already the teams are beginning to mobilize for the campaign, and still the scandals of 1919 and 1920 have not been cleaned up.

Swift Action Demanded.

The law is notoriously slow. Sport of any kind demands swift action and quick decisions. The umpire who allowed pitcher and batsman to argue with him and time to file briefs after every ball pitched would need an airship to escape. This is as true in baseball today as always.

FRAZEE DECLARES HE'LL MAKE WAR UPON GAMBLERS

Boston, Mass., Feb. 26.—War on gamblers was declared by Harry H. Frazee, president of the Boston Americans, today. He said every effort would be made to break up the gambling gangs that have appeared at local baseball parks from time to time. Private detectives will be posted at the gates to prevent known professional gamblers from entering the grounds. Legislation against gambling on games also will be sought.

CUBANS TO PLAY BASEBALL HERE

Bill Niesen, veteran semi-pro magnate and boss of the Pyotts, returned home last night after spending the winter in Cuba.

While on the island Niesen made arrangements for an all-star Cuban team to visit Chicago for a series of games beginning early in May. The Cubans will play all the local park teams.

One Addition to Umpires' Staff in National League

New York, Feb. 26.—With one addition the staff of umpires in the National league next season will be the same as served through the last campaign, President John W. Heydler announced tonight.

Umpire Harrison, woh at present is convalescing at Saranac Lake, N. Y., from two operations, will be carried on the reserve list until he is able to return to duty.

In the Wake of the News

SPONSORS OF RACING.

RACING should not come back to Illinois until it is properly sponsored. Proper sponsors cannot be secured until there is a racing law. Everyone knows that any interdicted sport or business is backed only by those willing to take a chance with the law, and that does not mean the best element of society.

When a revival of racing, with equestrian polo attachment, was projected in Chicago two years ago, the most prominent men in our business and social life were enrolled as members of a country club to be built on the north shore with a membership fee of either $2,000 or $5,000, as found necessary.

Then someone happened to mention to the tentative president that he might be arrested as a result of a raid against a "nuisance" or "common gambling house," possible under present laws, and you could not see him for dust.

Nor does one blame a citizen for not wishing to submit his family to such notoriety, even if he himself were willing to "stand the legal gaff," or, what is almost as bad, attempted "holdups" by petty politicians, always attempted if the sport is without the law.

In our opinion, State Senator Denvir's racing bill would solve the problem, and Chicago would have a jockey club of national reputation at once

MARKET LETTER.

A SECONDARY business depression, in conjunction with distressing annual reports by several large corporations, mildly parachuted stock prices during the week.

In the process holders have been seared in Roebuck, warded off Montgomery, and stuck in Piggly Wiggly, while the ticker abbrevation of "agwi" for Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies has been changed to "agoni." Rubbers also were mired, and water added nothing to the troubled oils in Mexico.

Meantime rights in Southern Pacific, Reading, and Texas Oil looked more like wrongs.

Stocks can go lower, but we do not think they will go very far that way unless business revival, now generally accepted as delayed, holds back longer than expected.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Wisconsin defeated the University of Chicago five in a fast game tonight by 25 to 19. The contest was close until the latter part of the last period, but at no time were the Badgers threatened with defeat.

FORWARD TAYLOR. [Wisconsin.]

The game started off with a rush, Wisconsin scoring the first basket, with the Maroons a close second. Practically all the shooting was at long distance, resulting in an excess of wild throws from midfloor. The Badgers ended the first half with a score of 14 to 7 in their favor. Taylor scored three baskets and three free throws for the Badgers.

The second half was a repetition of the first, Chicago being powerless to stage a comeback against the close guarding of Williams and Frogner. The Badger short pass worked to perfection, the Maroon guards finding themselves at a loss to find the ball.

Birkhoff tried most of Chicago's shots, but it was evidently an off night, for he usually went wide of the mark. McIntosh was high scorer for the Badgers and worked at his center position in brilliant fashion.

The entire Wisconsin team showed a remarkable reversal of form since the demonstration against the Purple team last week. Lineup:

Purdue, 24; Purple, 15

Purdue's fast coming five earned a merited Big Ten victory against the Purple in Northwestern university gymnasium, 24 to 15, before 3,500 basketball followers last night. The Boilermakers' scoring machine was built around Capt. Don White, who registered sixteen points, swishing ten foul tosses through the hoops in sixteen tries.

Northwestern exhibited its best basket ball of the whole season in the first half, working the ball skillfully and checking scoring attempts just as cleverly. White started his team in the lead with a basket shortly after the whistle, and by completing five out of seven free throws, was mainly responsible for Purdue's lead of 11 to 9 at half time.

White started a flurry of Purdue baskets in the second half, and the Boilermakers shot into a safe lead. Northwestern's efforts sagging after its crack guard, McKenzie, sustained an injury to one eye. Lineup:

Michigan, 24; Illinois, 18

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Michigan defeated Illinois tonight, 24 to 18, in one of the roughest games played on the Wolverine court this season. Twenty-four personal fouls were called, twelve on each team. Sabo for Illinois and Miller for Michigan were banished from the game.

The foul shooting of Karpus was largely responsible for the Michigan victory. Carney played the last ten minutes and scored two field baskets, while Capt. Vail led the Illinois attack with eight free throws and one field basket.

The game was bitterly fought throughout, personal clashes among the players being frequent. Lineup:

Bloomington, Ind., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Iowa took Indiana to a cleaning, 26 to 17, before a crowd of 4,500 tonight. The Hoosier quintet failed to get a basket in the first half which ended 16 to 3. In the second session the Crimson outplayed the Hawkeyes and nearly tied the score, but close guarding prevented the Indian five from any close-in shots. Lineup:

THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT

BROKEN ARM 'NOTHING' TO COLLEGE SKIER, WHO LEAPS TO 2D LAURELS

MONTREAL, Quebec, Feb. 26.—Breaking an arm in practice this morning, F. Carlton of Dartmouth college nevertheless jumped 68 feet in the international intercollegiate ski jumping competition this afternoon and, with 243 points, finished second to R. Whittal of McGill university, who had 259 points.

Carlton's best jump was only five feet shorter than the victor's. Cheers broke from the spectators when, thinking the plucky New Englander out of the running, they saw him speeding down to the takeoff with his arm in splints.

PILOT EVERS' SON PULLS A STUNT TO EXCITE CUBS

Williams, Ariz., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Jack Evers, the 11-year-old son of Manager Evers, and himself part owner of the Albany ball club, furnished the first excitement on the Cub trip when the train paused at Las Vegas, N. M., for a few minutes. Jack got off to buy a box of candy. When the train prepared to start he couldn't be found, but soon showed up, much to his parents' relief. He had boarded the train up ahead, being afraid he might miss it if he tried for a car further back.

Training starts at Catalina Monday morning with an hour's warmup. In the afternoon there will be an hour and a half walk over the mountains. The two-meal-a-day edict won't go into effect until the team reaches Pasadena.

Evers is delighted with the pitching squad and says he will be disappointed if three or four don't make good. He says it is his first training trip where there has been no evidence of booze.

GRIFFITH PAYS YANKEES $30,000 FOR FRANK BAKER

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 26.—Just before leaving Cincinnati tonight Miller Huggins, manager of the Yankees, accepted an offer of $30,000 from Clark Griffith of the Washington club for the release of Frank Baker, formerly known as the "home run king." Baker did not play last season on account of the death of his wife.

Huggins made several attempts to sign Baker for this season, but has been unable to do so, and finally wired Griffith his acceptance of Baker's release and to sign Baker if the latter would agree to play ball. Baker has tentatively indicated a willingness to play again.

Huggins went to Hot Springs to straighten out matters with Pitcher Carl Mays, who is in training there, but has not signed his contract. He expects to come to terms without much delay.

WINKLER HEADS LOCAL SHOOTERS FOR 1920 SEASON

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

With an average of better than 95 per cent, A. H. Winkler topped all Chicago trapshooting amateur experts for the season of 1920, according to the official list of averages published by the American Trapshooting association.

A. H. WINKLER. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

During the year Winkler shot at 2,685 targets in registered tourneys and was credited with 2,558 broken targets. Not only did Winkler lead the local shots but he was second high in the state. Mark Arie of Champaign, who won individual honors at the Olympic games, led all state amateurs with a percentage of .9681.

Mrs. Winkler High for State.

While Winkler took the men's honors, his wife, Mrs. A. H. Winkler, was high woman shot in the city and state. She shot at 2,985 targets for an average of .9008. Mrs. Winkler is the former national women's champion and rates among the leading shots in the country.

Second place among Chicago shooters was won by Dave Thomas, one of the most reliable performers in the game. Thomas shot at 3,000 targets during the year and averaged .9420. F. J. Foster is the winner of third place with an average of .9412.

To Be Factors in G. A. H.

This remarkable shooting of local experts plainly shows they will be factors in the Grand American, blue ribbon event of the trapshooting world, to be held at the South Shore Country club in August. The experts miss few opportunities to take part in weekly or monthly shoots of local gun clubs, and should be at their best when the Grand American classic is held.

Following are averages of Chicago shooters who shot at 1,000 or more targets in registered tourneys during 1920 and who averaged 30 per cent or better:

Name.	Targets shot at.	Pct.
A. H. Winkler	2,685	.9527

Student Is First to Die in Palestine Grid Games

LONDON, Feb. 26.—The first man to lose his life in a football game in Palestine was killed in a recent game between students of the Jaffa gymnasium and a team from the Mikvah Israel Agricultural college, says a dispatch from Jerusalem today.

The student, who was a native of Mischa colony, was struck in the chest by the knee of an opposing player and died instantly.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

Today's Question.

Do you think the White Sox will be as popular this year as formerly?

Where Asked.

Wabash avenue and Jackson boulevard.

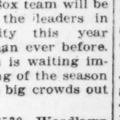
The Answers.

O. H. Sampson, 78 East Jackson boulevard, optician—I think the White Sox will be more popular than ever, due to the splendid and prompt actions of Mr. Comiskey and the sympathy of the fans for the loyal members of the team. Everybody will be pulling for the building up of another Sox machine that will bring home the bacon.

Miss Selma Evans, 1720 Taylor street, stenographer—I do believe the White Sox will be as popular as formerly and more so, because the former "Black Sox" will not be in the lineup. Chicago is a great baseball town and the Sox always have been my favorites. The prompt banning of crooked players from the game will help it all the more.

Robert Fulton Abercrombie, 244 Mary street, Glencoe, manager—I think there will be more interest shown among the fans and the White Sox team will be among the leaders in popularity this year more than ever before. The fan is waiting impatiently for the opening of the season and you'll see the same big crowds out at the park.

Miss Mary Fleig, 6530 Woodlawn avenue, bookkeeper—I think the White Sox will be just as popular this year as in the past. The present team should not be judged from the mistakes of a past one. Kid Gleason will be out there fighting harder than ever with his new material and it won't be long before Commy will have another winner.



J. G. Will, 305 East Fiftieth street, manager—I should say they will be more popular than ever. The sportsmanlike way the disturbance was settled should only stimulate the popularity of the White Sox, in my judgment. I expect the game to be bigger, cleaner, and faster than ever this year. Let's go! Play ball!

GOTHAM SOCIETY TO VIEW BOXING

New York, Feb. 26.—[Special.]—The novelty of boxing as a spectacle subservient to a fashion parade will be witnessed in the Hotel Commodore Tuesday night on the occasion of the International Sporting club's amateur ring tournament. A card of matches between representatives of both arms of Uncle Sam's service has been arranged, topped by a heavyweight battle.

Invitations to I. S. C. members stipulate: "Ladies, evening dress; men, tuxedo."

As an added attraction for the women guests arrangements have been made for a fashion show, immediately following the exchange of hooks, jabs, swings, and uppercuts.

SUNDE TO PLAY LOOKABAUGH IN 3-CUSHION FINAL

BY JOE DAVIS.

At the end of two rounds of play in the finals of the state amateur three cushion championship, Champion George Sunde of Chicago and Earl Lookabaugh, the promising young Rockford player, were left in the running. The disposition of this year's championship medal rests on the outcome of their match tomorrow night.

GEORGE W. SUNDE. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Lookabaugh won both his games in the finals at Mussey's Monroe street room yesterday, finishing with a total of 100, four points ahead of Sunde, who won in the afternoon and lost by four points at night.

Henry and Jensen in Rear.

Thomas E. Henry, north side champion, is third with 87 points, while Otto Jensen is fourth with 79. These last two players will meet tomorrow afternoon, but are too far behind to catch the ultimate winner.

Sunde won the opening game from Jensen, 50 to 37, in ninety-five innings, getting high run of 4. Runs of 3 and 4 in succession gave the champion a lead of 22 to 14 at the twenty-third inning.

Lookabaugh, who has been dubbed the John Layton of the amateur ranks, showed his class by defeating Henry, 50 to 33, in 72 innings, in the second game. Henry led, 18 to 17, and then the Rockford player ran 8, 1, and 2, and kept ahead the rest of the way.

Sunde Beaten by Henry.

In the first of the night games Henry defeated Sunde, 50 to 46, in 127 innings. This was a remarkably close match all the way. With the score tied at 41, Henry then made two threes, a double, and a single, while Sunde was making five points. Each had a high run of four.

Lookabaugh took the final game from Jensen, 50 to 42, in 74 innings. Lookabaugh had a slight lead in the middle stages, but Jensen ran five in the fifty-fifth inning, and was only three points behind. The Rockford player had high run of 4 in the thirty-seventh inning. J. Herbert Lewis was referee.

DEFER SOCCER CUP CONTEST

After consulting officials of the Scullins team of St. Louis, the Bricklayers' club postponed the match in the national championship series scheduled for this afternoon at Thirty-fifth street and Wentworth avenue. The rain and sleet of Friday, followed by frost, left the surface of the field in bad shape so the clubs decided to postpone the game until next Sunday.

Breakdown of Joie Ray, star foot racer of the Illinois A. C. in the one mile, the great running of Arlie Schardt of the C. A. A. in the same event, and the tying of two American records were the features of the twenty-fifth annual set of indoor handicap track and field games of the First Regiment, A. A. last night at the Michigan avenue armory.

ARLIE SCHARDT. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Premier honors went to the C. A. A. team, coached and trained for the first time by Samuel H. Darwent, with a total of 76½ points. The Illinois A. C. squad, handled by Frank Cayou, was second with 51½ points, while Knute Rockne's Notre Dame team landed in third position with 17 markers.

Ray Falls to Track.

Ray's breakdown came on the last lap of the one mile. Shortly after the gun had been fired to denote that one lap remained to be covered Ray led Schardt by a scant two yards. As they approached the second turn, with the Cherny Circle runner closing up the gap, Ray suddenly fell to the track and Schardt barely escaped falling over him.

As Schardt ran on for the remaining distance Ray lay on the track. He was carried to his dressing room, where it was found he had pulled the same tendons which kept him from doing his best running at the Olympic games. The bruised muscles were bandaged and Ray walked with a decided limp as he left the room.

May End Racing Days.

If Ray's injuries are as serious as reported, he may never pull on a spiked shoe again. He is scheduled to meet Cuthill in New York City next Saturday, but Coach Frank Cayou asserted last night that Joie will be kept off the track for the remainder of the indoor season and for the greater part of the outdoor racing year.

Ray's breakdown was not wholly unexpected by close followers of athletics. It was only last Monday he raced Cuthill of the Boston A. A. in the Hub city. He then came home, and on Friday night ran two miles in 9:22 1-5. When he fell last night he was traveling a 4:20 clip. This strain proved too much and plainly showed the human system will stand just so much.

If Ray is unable to race again, he will have the distinction of being the greatest middle distance runner ever developed in the middle west, if not in the country. He has met and defeated the best runners pitted against him in recent years, and has never hesitated to run two or more races in a week.

Credit Goes to Schardt.

Schardt is deserving of great credit for his running. He had an allowance of twenty yards over the Tricolor club flyer, but Ray picked him up shortly after the field was sent away. The pair soon led the field, and then alternated in setting the pace. At the gun lap Ray led, but Schardt was closing fast when the accident happened.

To Frank Loomis, the sterling all around athlete of the C. A. A., went the honor of being the individual star of the games. The Cherry Circle athlete scored 10 points by winning the quarter mile, finishing second in the 40 yard high hurdles and third in the 40 yard low barriers. Harry Goelitz of the I. A. C. and J. Stastny of the Western Electric A. A. tied for second high with 7 points each.

Two Yankee Records Tied.

To Harry Goelitz of the I. A. C. and C. Wynn of Notre Dame went the glory of tying two American records. The former won the 40 yard high hurdles in the record time of :05 2-5, while Wynn tied the mark of :05 for the 40 yard low sticks. Both these marks are held by T. N. Richards, and were made in 1910.

Avery Brundage of the C. A. A., former National A. A. U. all around champion, showed he is far from being an ex-athlete by finishing second in the shotput.

The Cherry Circle team won the one mile open relay in handy fashion from the I. A. C. and Notre Dame, while Loren Murchison of the Tricolor club won the 40 yard dash from scratch.

Deerfield High Winner.

Deerfield Shields carried off honors in the high school events, mainly through the efforts of W. McIlwaine, who won the 40 yard dash and 300 yard run. Deerfield scored 12 points, while University High and Oak Park tied for second place with 8 points each.

The open pole vault event had not been completed at a late hour, but the result had no effect on the final standing of the teams. Summaries:

C. A. A. U. GAMES ON MARCH 26 ON ARMORY FLOOR

Announcement was made yesterday by Charles A. Dean, chairman of the championship committee of the Central A. A. U., that the association indoor track and field championships will be held at the Broadway armory on March 26.

According to Chairman Dean, efforts will be made to obtain entries not only from all universities and colleges in the central district but from every club of note. Unattached athletes will be urged to enter, as will those identified with commercial house clubs.

Entry blanks will be issued the first of the month, and nominations will close with C. A. Dean, 14 East Jackson boulevard, one week before the event is held.

HARVARD MOVE TO BAR MEN FROM OTHER VARSITIES

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—The Harvard Alumni Bulletin has come out in support of the policy of barring any athlete who has represented any other college in intercollegiate athletics, which declares in its article that Prof. Mendell of Yale approved such a policy a few weeks ago.

On the other hand, Maj. Fred W. Moore, graduate treasurer of Harvard athletics, declares there is no need of such action.

He said the one year rule is sufficient and he "saw no reason why the student entering after the freshman year should be discriminated against. Moore is Harvard's representative on the national rules committee.

INDIANS DEPART FOR DALLAS CAMP

Cleveland, O., Feb. 26.—President Jim Dunn was here today to see off the squad of Indians to their spring training camp in Dallas. The Redskins left tonight under the command of Coach Jack McAllister, who will turn them over to Manager Tris Speaker at Dallas.

The squad consists of Pitchers Coveleskie, Uhle, Caldwell, Chalk, Jack Gillis, Nelson Pott, and Ted Oldenwald and Catchers Steve O'Neill and McAllister. Other battery men will go directly from their homes to camp. The second squad departs March 5.

Advance Squad of Tigers Starts for San Antonio

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 26.—The first contingent of the Detroit Americans to depart for the training camp at San Antonio, left tonight. Other players are to join the party en route and the first workout for Tiger battery men will be held Tuesday. The entire squad which will number thirty-one, exclusive of trainers, is expected in camp by the end of next week.

Jennings and 5 Players Arrive at Giants' Camp

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 26.—Hugh Jennings, who will be field leader of the New York Giants, today arrived here with Ryan, Nehf, Benton, Evans, and Winters, to take charge of the fast growing Giant training camp. Twelve Gia[illegible] including Out-Fielder Ross Young and Catcher Frank Snyder of the regulars, were at work this morning. Pleasant weather prevails.

Walkers May Help Macks to Hike from Last Place

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 26.—The Philadelphia Americans, who will play exhibition contests beginning March 1, with the St. Louis and New York Nationals and the New York Yankees, will include three Walkers, Clarence, in left field; Frank, in center, and Johnny behind the bat, a dispatch from the club's spring training camp at Lake Charles, La., said today.

Seven Giants to Make Southward Start Today

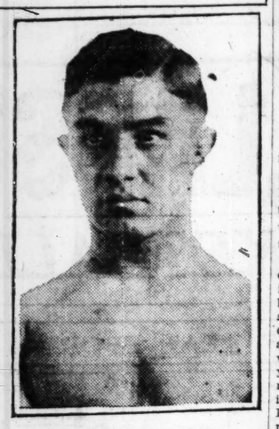
New York, Feb. 26.—[Special.]—En-route to San Antonio, seven Giants will start on an early train tomorrow morning. The only regular is Frank Frisch The others are Pat Shea and Bob Grody, pitchers; Alex Gaston, catcher; Howard Burkett and Leo Kane, infielders, and Ray Bancroft, outfielder.

PEELERS TO TRY COLLEGE FLINGER.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 26.—Ed Dyche of Noble, Colo., who pitched for University of Colorado last year, has been signed by the Minneapolis club.

WILL EXCHANGE WALLOPS

LEW TENDLER.



SAILOR FREEDMAN.

DAZZLING TENDLER AND FREEDMAN SET FOR BOUT TOMORROW

Once more, Lew Tendler, the hard swatting sou'paw from Philadelphia, is in this neck of the woods to dazzle the fistic fans with his rapid-fire punching. Tomorrow night in the ring of the National A. C. in the big Auditorium at Milwaukee Tendler will doff the old bathrobe and get acquainted with Sailor Freedman of Chicago, the personal contact part of which acquaintance may or may not last for a period of ten rounds.

Tendler, who is considered the only boy with a chance of making a hot fight for Champion Benny Leonard, has the Milwaukee mob by the pocketbook, and it is a cinch there won't be any vacant seats when the big business of the evening starts. This goes for Chicago, too, for all the ducats that Promoter Frank Mulkern sent here are pretty certain to be snapped up by friends of Freedman and other fans.

Lew Topheavy Choice.

The information from the Cream City is that Tendler is a somewhat topheavy favorite and last night it was stated that there was little Freedman coin in sight. This is natural in view of Tendler's recent performances in Milwaukee, for Lew gave both the Mitchell boys—Richie and Pinkie—a trimming and handed the same dose to Willie Jackson.

Therefore, if we may judge from such performances, it would appear that Freedman is stepping himself into a mighty tough situation.

Tendler Good Puncher.

Tendler's chance of victory, however, sticks out a bit strongly because of the steam he carries in his southpaw mitten, and the chances are that if there is a knockout the Quaker City boy will be the one to do the shooting.

The Chicago fans will make the trip on two special trains, one running over the Chicago-Milwaukee leaving at 5:45 o'clock and the other the North Shore electric leaving at 5:15 o'clock.

MICHIGAN TRACK MEN OUTCLASS CHICAGO IN DUAL MEET, 63 TO 31

BY ALBON HOLDEN.

Allowing the University of Chicago track team only two first places, the University of Michigan squad walked off with a dual meet in Bartlett gymnasium, piling up a 63 to 31 score.

WALTER K. WESBROOK. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Two new track records were hung up. The runners circled the top of the banked track instead of the more difficult inner course, and both half and quarter mile records went flying over the new measurements. Capt. Butler of the Wolverines did the 440 in :51 1-5, taking over three seconds off the record held on the inner lane by Dismond of Chicago. Bartky of the Maroons hung up a new half mile mark of 1:58 2-5, cutting five seconds from the record made by Davenport of Chicago in 1912.

Bartky, Krogh, and Hall, who took three second places despite a high fever due to a touch of the grip, and Cruickshank, Wesbrook, Standish, Stipe, Walker, Losch, and Sargent were the best of Coach Farrell's Wolverine performers. Summaries:

50 yard dash—Won by Losch, Michigan; Kelley, Michigan, second; Murphy, Chicago, third. Time, :05 4-5.

50 yard high hurdles — Won by Sargent, Michigan; J. Hall, Chicago, second. Time, :07. Cruikshank, Michigan, who finished first, was disqualified.

One mile—Won by Krogh, Chicago; Douglas, Michigan, second; Keenan, Chicago, third. Time, 4:45 1-5.

50 yard low hurdles—Won by Cruikshank, Michigan; J. Hall, Chicago, second; Sargent, Michigan, third. Time, :06 2-5.

Shot put—Won by Stipe, Michigan; Tidey, Michigan, second; McWilliams, Chicago, third. Distance, 41 feet 2¼ inches.

440 yard run—Won by Butler, Michigan; Hall, Chicago, second; Harris, Chicago, third. Time, :51 1-5.

High jump — Won by Walker, Michigan; Schneberger, Chicago, and Platts, Michigan, tied for second. Height, 5 feet 9 inches.

CORNELL TRACK TEAM VICTOR IN EASTERN GAMES

Boston, Mass., Feb. 26.—The Cornell track team won the annual triangular contest with Harvard and Dartmouth at the Mechanics building today with 36 1-5 points. Dartmouth was second with 35 3-5, and Harvard trailed with 26 1-5.

The Ithacans' success was unexpected, as Cornell had little indoor training. The running specialists, who have been the principal factors of strength with Cornell teams for a decade, brought their team victory, as almost two-thirds of Cornell's points were gained in three events, the 600 yard, 1,000 yard, and relay races. Cornell won the last in a fairly close finish, with Capt. Earl J. Thomson of Dartmouth pressing hard in second place.

Thomson Individual Star.

Thomson was the individual star, the Olympic hurdling champion equaling the reputed world record of six seconds for the nonregulation sixty-five high hurdles event, gaining second place in the broad jump, and running as anchor in the relay.

Thomson's Negro teammate, J. A. Shelburne, brought ten points to Dartmouth, dashing in first in the forty yard event and winning the shotput.

Harvard Man Wins Mile.

The only real break in Cornell's running successes was by Capt. D. F. O'Connell of Harvard, who won the mile run in a duel with T. C. McDermott, the Ithacans' long distance leader. The 1,000 yard runs was won by C. C. Carter of Cornell. O'Connell's previous exertions forced him to drop out of the 1,000 yard run.

ILLINOIS TRIMS IOWA ATHLETES IN TRACK MEET

Urbana, Ill., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Illinois defeated Iowa in a dual track meet tonight, 82½ to 21½. The tie race of Allman and Wharton, both of Illinois, in the two mile event resulted in a mark of 9:53 3-5 and threatened Mike Mason's Illinois indoor record of 9:52. H. S. Wallace in the hurdles, Alberts in the high jump, and Yates in the half mile showed well. Summaries:

Pole vault—Hoffman and Bailey, Iowa, and Mathias and Collins, Illinois, tied for first. Height, 11 feet.

75 yard dash—Won by Nagle, Illinois; Rescott, Illinois, second; Wilson, Iowa, third. Time, :08.

75 yard high hurdles—Won by H. S. Wallace, Illinois; Crawford, Iowa, second; Belding, Iowa, third. Time, :10 1-5.

Mile run—Won by Maginnis, Illinois; Patterson, Illinois, second; Wells, Illinois, third. Time, 4:29 1-5.

75 yard low hurdles—Won by H. S. Wallace, Illinois; Belding, Iowa, second; Seiling, Iowa, third. Time, :08 4-5.

Broad jump—Won by Wilson, Iowa; Osborne, Illinois, second; Alberts, Illinois, third. Distance, 22 feet 2¼ inches.

440 yard run—Won by Donohoe, Illinois; Fields, Illinois, second; Schlaprizzi, Illinois, third. Time, :51 1-5.

Shot put—Won by Weiss, Illinois; Cannon, Illinois, second; Slater, Iowa, third. Distance, 42 feet 2 inches.

High jump—Won by Alberts, Illinois; Osborne, Illinois, second; Conn and Hoffman, Iowa, tied for third. Height, 6 feet.

880 yard run—Won by Yates, Illinois; Brown, Illinois, second; Noll, Iowa, third. Time, 1:59 3-5.

Two mile run—Allman and Wharton, Illinois, tied for first; Swanson, Illinois, third. Time, 9:53 3-5.

Relay race—Won by Illinois. Time, 3:30.

MAROONS TAKE DUAL GYM MEET

Urbana, Ill., Feb. 26.—University of Chicago gymnasts won their conference dual meet from Illinois here today, 1,102 points to 923½.

The Maroons won all six events, with Capt. George Seidenback and George Morris as stars. The Illini got two second places through the work of Zeigler, and all the other points were won on fourths, fifths, and sixths.

Illinois won the wrestling, in five divisions, and also took the one fencing match.

Muzzy-Kautz in Prelim to Mitchell-Kansas Mill

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—Jimmy Muzzy of this city today was matched to meet Billy Kautz, Racine, in the semi-final to the Richie Mitchell and Rocky Kansas match here March 9. The advance sale already totals $15,000.

Sutton Victor in Match with Dave McAndless

G. Butler Sutton won his twelve block balk line match from Dave McAndless, 3,600 to 1,961, last night, the players finishing with afternoon and evening blocks at Mussey's Madison street room. Sutton won in the afternoon, 300 to 265, and in the evening, 300 to 275. The winner's grand average was 34½, against McAndless' 18 2-3.

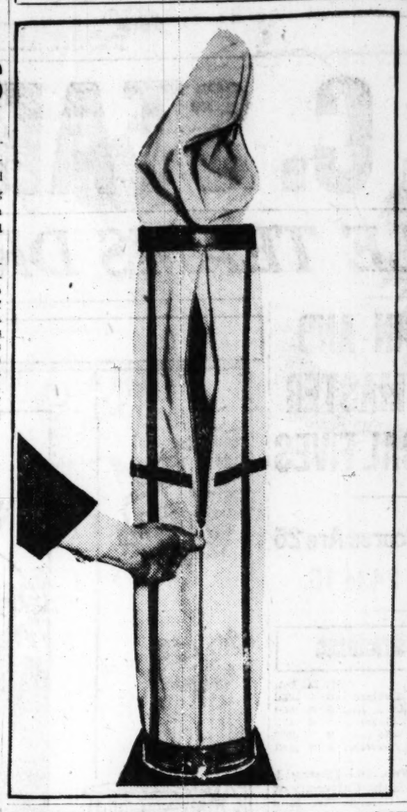
LATEST IN GOLF—A NEW BAG



A NOVELTY in golf bags will be of interest to players. Instead of having to shove clothes and shoes down the mouth of the bag, this device enables the player to open up the bag full length, like a long valise. A similar arrangement permits the golfer to open the ball pocket at full length and pick out any brand of ball desired. The hood is made to fasten in the same way, and in wet weather it is possible to close the top half of the hood and make a cover for the grips of the clubs.

The opening and closing device consists of long metal strips.

On one side there are cups and on the other side balls. When the metal strips are closed by the aid of a small device which is pulled up and down the seam is effectually closed. It takes only an instant to open the seam or to close it.

The metal seam has been used previously on tobacco pouches, but its adaptation to golf bags is new.

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR YANK GOLFERS ABROAD SAY RETURNING 'PROS'

Bob MacDonald of Bob o'Link, Jock Hutchinson of Glen View, Jim Lindsay of Oak Park, and Willie Kidd of Minneapolis, returned yesterday from Scotland.

JOCK HUTCHINSON. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

MacDonald spent most of his vacation in France and played little golf during his short stay in Scotland. Hutchinson played frequently over the St. Andrews course and set a new competitive mark of 70 for the Eden course.

The old St. Andrews course, which is looked upon as the shrine of the game, is in an impoverished condition, according to Jock.

Of the amateurs Jock saw in Scotland, none rate as high as Chick Evans, and he thinks Bobby Jones will have an excellent show in the British amateur event.

Laurie Ayton, the Evanston professional, who also was at St. Andrews, will not return until late next month.

Jim Barnes Wins Pro Meet at Deland, Fla.

Deland, Fla., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—James Barnes of the Pelham Country club, New York, won the annual College Arms Golf club professional tournament here today with 291. Pat O'Hara, who began the day one stroke in front of Barnes, finished second with 297. Wilfred Reed landed third, and Tom Kerrigan of the Siwanoy club, New York, was fourth. Their scores were 301 and 303, respectively.

Rotan Beats Dexter in Houston Golf Meet Final

Houston, Tex., Feb. 26. — George Rotan of Houston for the fourth time was returned winner of the annual invitation golf tournament today when he defeated Charles Dexter of Dallas, 4 and 3, in the 36 hole final.

Cleveland, O., Feb. 26.—Ed ("Strangler") Lewis, champion wrestler, threw Max Orlando, Boston, two straight falls tonight, the first with a headlock in 39:00 and the second with a wristlock and body hold in 1:40.

CIONI WINS ROLLER SKATE RACES.

Rowland Cioni, champion roller skater of Akron, O., won the final series of races at the White City rink last night, defeating Rollie Birckmer of Columbus, O., in three events. Cioni won the half mile in 1:30, the mile in 3:02, and the two mile in 6:10. Cioni has held his title since 1914.

Jones in National A. A. U. Title Swims for Brown U.

Providence, R. I., Feb. 26.—Coach Huggins announced today that Davy Jones, the Chicago lad who has defeated every intercollegiate swimmer he has met this season, would represent Brown university in the National A. A. U. championship swim for the 220 yard title in New York, Monday evening. Jones will also swim in the A. A. U. 100 yard title race at Brookline, Mass., on March 3.

NEBRASKA, 24; COLGATE, 15.

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 26.—Nebraska was victorious in tonight's basketball game with Colgate, winning, 24 to 15.

NOISY PALS SEND KID SKATERS OFF TO GOTHAM RACES

Chicago's schoolboy skating team, which will meet a similar squad in New York City next Saturday, was given a rousing sendoff yesterday when it started on the first lap of its journey. Members of the team and officials who will accompany it to the eastern city were taken from the city hall in automobiles to the La Salle street station, where they left on the Twentieth Century Limited.

JULIAN T. FITZGERALD.

A large crowd gathered at the city hall to wish the boys good luck, but a still larger one was packed in the train shed. This gathering was made up mostly of high school students, who gave their respective yells as the skaters boarded the rattler.

According to present plans, the party will stop off at Cleveland to practice in the indoor rink today. Stops will be made at Pittsburgh and Philadelphia for more practice. New York will be reached on Friday and more practice will be held on the course over which the races will be decided.

Julian T. Fitzgerald, chairman of the mayor's ice skating committee; Walter Wright, secretary of the bureau of small parks; Ald. Sheldon Govier; Herman J. Fischer, assistant superintendent of playgrounds; E. C. Delaporte, athletic director of the public schools athletic league; Coach Jack Davis, and Jack Coath were included in the party which accompanied the skaters. Mayor Thompson and other city officials will leave next week to see the contests.

Chicago Church A. A. to Hold Baseball Meeting

The Church Athletic Association of Chicago, the outgrowth of the Lutheran Baseball league, has taken charge of all athletic activities of Chicago Protestant churches. Baseball plans are in full swing. Membership is limited to forty-eight teams divided into six divisions. A meeting will be held March 3 at 1602 Mallers building and all officers and representatives of teams wishing to join are invited to attend. For particulars call E. P. Meads, Kedzie 6411.

YACHT UNION OF GREAT LAKES IN MEETING HERE

Talk of a race between representative American and Canadian boats in Chicago next summer, election of officers and a general discussion of rules occupied the attention of delegates to the Yacht Racing union of the Great Lakes, who met in annual session at the University club yesterday afternoon.

Commodore Sheldon Clark of the Chicago Yacht club, who headed the Y. R. U. in 1920, relinquished the helm to Commodore George Gooderham of the Royal Canadian Yacht club, Toronto, who was elected president for the ensuing year. J. S. MacMurrny, also of the Royal Canadian Yacht club, was reelected secretary.

Invited to Chicago.

The local delegates extended an invitation to the Canadians to resume competition for the Richardson international trophy by sending a challenger here to meet Chicago's best.

The last race for the cup was held here in 1912, when Patricia of the R. C. Y. C. came down and trimmed the Chicago challenger. According to the deed of gift the next race should have been sailed in Canadian waters, and Fred A. Price and his local crew were en route to Toronto with Valiant to start the series when the war broke out and prevented the race.

Canadians Good Sports.

Under the circumstances and through good sportsmanship, the Canadians made a half promise to waive their rights and come to Chicago either this year or next. The plans assumed promising form yesterday, and as a consequence the two top notch boats of both countries may be seen in action during the summer.

The question of the much discussed Marconi rig was disposed of when the delegates voted to follow the lead of the eastern associations and allow use of the freak equipment. As there are only two Marconi boats on the great lakes, and as both are failures, local men are not much concerned regarding the rig.

CHAMPS GET K. O. SAME AS OTHERS IN RING BATTLES

BY RAY PEARSON.

Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, made this statement to the writer a few days before he stepped into the ring at Toledo and messed up Jess Willard in three rounds, thereby acquiring the crown:

JACK DEMPSEY. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

"I'm human, despite all this superman talk, and I'll have to watch my knitting all the time, for sooner or later some young fellow is likely to come along and crack me on the chin for a knockout. The man hasn't been made who can stand up after a punch lands on the right spot."

Reiterates Remark.

This remark was reiterated only a few days ago by Dempsey, while discussing his rivals in a talk with Robert Edgren on the coast. Perhaps there were those who thought that Dempsey was joshing a bit after what he did to Willard, but he never was more sincere in any remark he ever made than that one concerning the possibilities of the future.

The years of pugilism show many examples of fellows who have been cracked for knockouts by men unquestionably their inferiors in ring skill. We might point to what recently happened to Richie Mitchell, the fine Milwaukee lightweight, in a bout with Rocky Kansas as demonstrating the truth of this statement. Rocky Kansas is a Buffalo boy.

One Punch Enough.

There have been plenty of other examples in the past. For instance, one might go back about a score of years ago and recall that memorable bout between the then famous Kid McCoy and Jack McCormick, which was staged in the Star theater in Chicago. The Kid then classed with the stars of the heavyweight field, and that in spite of the fact he had to give away anywhere from fifteen to thirty-five pounds to land matches. McCormick, an ex-wrestler, didn't begin to look a match with the clever and hard punching McCoy.

But they were matched, and what happened? McCormick crossed a right to McCoy's jaw in the first minute of the first round and the star of the ring fell flat on his back on the canvas. He was out for something more than the required ten seconds.

Yes, brethren, we'd say Dempsey is right. It's a smart thing for one in this fighting game to watch his step, regardless of the caliber of the opposition.

CHAMPION LEONARD'S STYLE IS REMINISCENT OF JOE GANS

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

MANY new timers, and some old timers, have asked me whether or not I would consider Benny Leonard in Joe Gans' class as a lightweight champion.

Right there is room for endless argument. Except in those athletic events where distances and time show exactly what performances are it's almost impossible to compare present champions with former titleholders.

I'll say that Leonard has shown himself easily master of all rivals in his class today and a great lightweight. In many points he is very much like Gans, who is conceded the master boxer of all the great old time lightweights.

Gans Uses K. O. at Start.

Joe Gans started as a knockout artist when he was a small boy working in the fish market at Baltimore. He won his first eight fights with knockouts. He had been fighting over two years when he had his first reverse, being beaten by Del Hawkins—decision, in fifteen rounds. His winning streak started again immediately, and went along smoothly until he was knocked out by George McFadden in 1899. Soon after that he lost to Frank Erne in twelve rounds, the fight being stopped because Gans had a badly cut eye and couldn't see.

Terry McGovern knocked Gans out in two rounds, and years later he lost a fifteen round decision to Sam Langford—then a lightweight. He won fights again until 1908, when Battling Nelson fought him twice, knocking him out in seventeen and twenty-one rounds. At that time Gans was in the decline that ended in his death from tuberculosis a year or so later. Of course, Gans fought hundreds of ring engagements—but Leonard isn't at the end of his fighting career, and may have as long a record if he doesn't retire.

Wins Title in Five Years.

Benny Leonard has been knocked out, too. Benny began boxing at Billy Gibson's old Fairmont A. C. in the Bronx, New York, when he was only 16, and showed such speed that Gibson became his manager and matched him up to the championship in five years.

In his first year of ring work Benny won a lot of fights with knockouts. He was knocked out himself by Joe Shugrue in four rounds. Shugrue was a very fast and clever lightweight. In his second year Benny won only three fights with knockouts, fought many with no decisions, and was knocked out by Frankie Fleming, a first class little Canadian. Two years later Benny stopped being a "feather duster boxer" and began studying the science of winning with a clean K. O., and among the good ones he knocked out were Joe Mandot of New Orleans and Ever Hammer.

One Busy Fighter.

In 1917 Leonard started a whirlwind knockout campaign that won him the lightweight championship, which he still holds. Within ten weeks Leonard knocked out Packey Hommey [nine rounds], Richie Mitchell [seven rounds], Charlie Thomas [six rounds], Eddie Shannon [six rounds], and Lightweight Champion Freddy Welsh [nine rounds].

About this time people began to talk about Benny Leonard as "another Joe Gans." With the confidence of a real champion he went right along knocking out opponents and not picking "soft ones." He knocked out Johnny Nelson and Featherweight Champion Johnny Kilbane, Young Record, Phil Bloom, Eddie Dorsey, and Vic Moran.

About this time Leo Johnson, a splendidly built colored boy and a clever boxer, was called black lightweight champion, and many thought he could beat Leonard. Benny announced that unless he could whip all opponents, regardless of color, he didn't care to call himself champion.

Johnson Looks Good.

He fought Leo in New York less than four months after beating Welsh. As the two faced each other I'll admit that I, for one, wondered if Benny was up against it. The colored boy was better built for fighting—an almost perfect double for Gans himself, easy and smooth in action, wide shouldered, strong, quick, and with the easy, gliding grace of a born boxer. He had the catlike action so often seen in black fighters, who seem bred for the sport. Benny looked a little clumsy in comparison as they sparred for the first opening.

Benny Leonard always has his hair smoothly brushed, and at that time Gibson boasted that no boxer had ever been able to "muss" Benny's hair in the ring—not ever the clever Welsh. So the crowd gasped when Leo calmly reached out in the first mixup and deliberately roughed Benny's down plastered locks with his open hand, grinning as he did so. It was evidently meant to get Benny's goat.

Leo's Mistake Fatal.

It was Leo's fatal mistake. With a sudden flare of fury, Benny leaped at Leo like a wildcat. He swarmed all over the black champion, beating down his guard and hammering him back to the ropes. Crashing blows landed faster than the eye could follow the flying gloves, and within a minute, in the first round, Johnson was helpless, was beaten down, was counted out. He never had a chance to start a blow after he rumpled Benny's hair and grinned at him.

Also Battles Welter.

While Leonard has fought several good fights since the war, knocking out among others of note our old friend Willie Ritchie, former champion and boxing instructor at Camp Lewis, and fighting no decision bouts with Welter Champion Jack Britton and former Welter Champion Ted Lewis, his most notable performance has been the recent knockout of Richie Mitchell.

Like Gans, Leonard is a student of boxing. Gans learned much of his great skill by following Robert Fitzsimmons around the country and watching all of his exhibitions. Gans always said Fitzsimmons was the greatest of all boxers in his time.

Benny Studies Anatomy.

Leonard has studied anatomy to learn the effect of blows, and has picked up and tried all the best combinations used by other boxers. He practices the delivery of a blow thousands of times, until he perfects it in every detail.

Gans could hit equally hard with either hand. So can Leonard. But Benny has even a better left than Gans had. He either lands the knockout or starts his man going with left hand body punches. This was the way he whipped Welsh, robbing him of his speed of foot by hammering lefts into his body and then polishing him off with rights.

Lives Ideal Private Life.

Leonard's private life is ideal. He is a model for any boy. He lives quietly at home with his mother, trains conscientiously, avoids all forms of dissipation, is modest, decent, and as creditable a champion in every way as ever put on a glove.

CENTENNIAL CLUB IN LARGE GAIN AGAINST LOCAL RIFLE RIVALS

The Centennial Rifle club gained 60 points against other local teams engaged in the National Rifle association annual ten match event, and as a result of this increase now holds the lead among the ten local clubs with 132 points. A. J. Huebner of Centennial led the shooters in last week's competition, which concluded the third round of the national shoot with 190 of the possible 200 score.

J. Turner of Centennial was second high among the local contestants with 184, and Mrs. Walter Wolff, shooting as a member of the same club, tied for third with 175. The week's competition was in the standing position. Every week the shooting is conducted in a different position. The club totals and leading individual scores follow:

With the first round of play completed save for a few games in this week's schedule, Augie Kieckhefer continues to set the pace for his rivals in the Chicago Biliard league's fifth annual three cushion competition for the Blake cup.

AUGIE KIECKHEFER. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The southpaw representative of the Recreation room has won twelve straight battles and will finish his first half of the schedule when he meets the runner-up in the race, Joe Capron, on Kieckhefer's home table Friday night.

Augie Playing Scratch.

Augie plays 60 points in the handicap, which is scratch, while the Lefingwell veteran's quota is 52. Capron has annexed nine games in eleven starts, his victory over Charlie Le Gros at the Wilson avenue room on Friday keeping Joe in second position.

Le Gros of the Casino is a bang up third, having won nine contests in twelve times out, while on his heels is Bert Tredick of McGarry's, who boasts ten victories in fourteen starts. Then come Leonard Kenney, Louis Engel, and Sam Walker in the order named, completing the first division.

Steffanson Is Leader.

Carl Steffanson of Reading's room on the northwest side still is at the head of the second division.

Of 182 games in the schedule 86 have been accounted for, with ten carded for this week, as follows:

Monday—Le Gros vs. Jacobs at Schaefer's.
Tuesday—Lundgren vs. Walker at Leflingwell's [Evanston]; Carlin vs. Harris at Haight's; Engel vs. Moreau at Recreation.
Wednesday—Capron vs. Steffanson at Reading's; Kenney vs. Engel at Singer & Spokes.
Thursday—Tredick vs. Dougherty at Hart's; Moreau vs. Carlin at Schueneman's.
Friday—Tredick vs. Capron at Leflingwell's [Wilson avenue]; Le Gros vs. Kieckhefer at Recreation.

OAK PARK FIVES HAND LA GRANGE PAIR OF DEFEATS

Oak Park's heavyweight basketball team cleared its way to the Suburban league championship for another year last night by defeating La Grange, 25 to 20, in a hard fought game at La Grange. In the lightweight encounter the Oak Park quintet won out, 13 to 12, after a fast scoring attack in the final quarter.

Robinson was Oak Park's scoring ace in the heavyweight tilt, sinking five baskets and seven free throws. In the lightweight game, Hahn led the scoring with two baskets and seven free throws. Both games were bitterly contested, both by the players and by the students of both schools who crowded the gym. Heavy lineup:

DE PAUL, 25; LOYOLA, 15.

De Paul academy freshmen defeated the Loyola freshman quintet, 25 to 15, at the Broadway Armory last night. Kirschten led the scoring for De Paul, sinking seven baskets, while McLaney featured for Loyola with four ringers.

WAUKEGAN, 31; BLUE ISLD., 13.

Waukegan heavies trimmed Blue Island, 31 to 13, in a one sided game at Blue Island yesterday.

LYNCH WILLING TO MEET HERMAN IN BOUT FOR TITLE

New York, Feb. 26.—Joe Lynch, who won the world's bantam championship from Pete Herman last December, today sent a message to the New Orleans boxer stating he was ready to make good his promise for an early return bout. Lynch has declined a bout with Roy Moore of St. Paul on St. Patrick's day, giving Herman preference for this date.

Receipts of the Dundee-Jackson contest last night amounted to $50,891, according to figures announced today. The principals drew $11,009 each for the labor. The state got $2,317 and Tex Rickard got most of the rest.

MIDDIES VICTORS IN THREE SPORTS

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 26.—In addition to the Army-Navy basketball game today the big throng of spectators saw the midshipmen boxers defeat Pennsylvania state college and also the wrestlers of the University of West Virginia.

The midshipmen captured the boxing match four bouts to three. Each team was credited with one technical knockout.

Though West Virginia wrestlers proved comparatively easy, Navy taking six out of the seven bouts, giving them a score of 26 to 4, only two of the bouts resulted in falls.

West Point and Annapolis contested in one of the finest exhibitions of basketball ever seen here, the midshipmen winning 45 to 29. This was the second game between the two schools and Navy has won both.

Carpentier's Manager Back in Ring for One Go

New York, Feb. 26.—Francois Descamps, manager of Georges Carpentier, challenger of Jack Dempsey for the world's heavyweight championship, is going to do a little fighting himself.

According to Sporting Life, London, the dapper little manager of the Frenchman is to return to the ring in Paris on March 18 in a big charity show for the families of boxers who fell in the war. His opponent will be Fernand Cuny, well known "professor" and manager of Paris.

Carpentier will act has his manager's manager and second.

Swedish American A. A. to Hold I. G. U. Mat Tourney

Senior wrestling championships of the International Gymnastic union will be conducted by the Swedish American A. A. at its clubhouse, 752 Barry avenue, March 8, 10 and 13. Preliminaries in the 125, 135 and 145 pound classes will be held the first day, and in the 158, 175 and heavyweight divisions the second day. Finals in all classes will be decided March 13. Entries close March 5 with E. Olson, 1526 Melrose street.

Continental-Commercial Bankers Plan Mat Tourney

The Continental and Commercial A. A., composed of employés of that bank, will conduct a closed wrestling tourney March 29, in which senior and junior titles will be decided in all recognized weight classes. Twenty-three already have entered, and 100 amateur grapplers are expected to compete.

MOLINE, 19; GENESEO, 12.

Moline, Ill., Feb. 26.—Moline High school beat Geneseo High school in basketball last night, 19 to 12. Geneseo had defeated every team in this district heretofore, this being the first defeat of the season.

Whiting Owls Slip Defeat to Big Five by 25 to 21

In a hard fought game Whiting Owls defeated the Big Five at Whiting last night, 25 to 21. The Owls led at half time, 19 to 12. The basket shooting of Potter and Mastney was the feature. Lineup:

KENTUCKY DERBY BIG MONEY EVENT; STARS ENTERED

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 26.—When Aristides won the first Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs in 1875 the stake netted his owner $2,850, and the press was loud in its praises of the generosity of the racing association in giving so rich a purse for the encouragement of the breeding of thoroughbred horses. At a recent meeting of the directors of the Kentucky Jockey club Vice President and General Manager M. J. Winn was authorized to add $50,000 to the Kentucky Derby to be run at Churchill Downs on May 7, 1921. The total will reach $60,000—$10,000 being given to the second horse, $5,000 to the third, and $2,000 to the fourth.

In 1889 the historic duel between Spokane and Proctor Knott in the Derby was staged at Churchill Downs for a purse of $4,790. Last year the Derby won by Paul Jones was worth $30,375. The fortune of $60,000 to be given this year has brought praise from turfmen everywhere.

Experts Pick Favorite.

The coming Kentucky Derby promises to surpass in interest any Derby ever run at Churchill Downs. With the entry list announced today experts already are busy picking the favorite and the probable contenders. Naturally, Harry Payne Whitney's Tryster by Peter Pan out of Tryst, who went through the 1920 season without a defeat, is given preference.

There is every reason why this fast, game colt should stand out over whatever field may start, because he met the best of the 2 year olds last year and defeated them with comparative ease. Although in some of his earlier races Tryster had some difficulty in beating Touch-Me-Not in the Juvenile stakes, Kirklevington in the Keene Memorial, St. Michael also giving him a good contest, the colt improved as he went along and in the fall there was no 2 year old in training that could give him an argument.

Other Whitney Nags.

In Mr. Whitney's extensive string there are other Derby possibilities which can be relied on to represent the stable if Tryster does not come up to expectations. Exodus proved his speed and gameness in a rather hard campaign and should develop into a serviceable 3 year old. Having in Regret the only filly that ever won the Kentucky Derby, Mr. Whitney may decide to send Prudery after the rich prize. The daughter of Peter Pan-Polly Flinders was a sweet filly last year, only a shade behind Tryster. She won $25,650.

Speaking of fillies, Careful of the W. J. Salmon stable must be given consideration. She beat the best of both sexes in a strenuous campaign, being first twelve times in seventeen starts, being out of the money only four times. Her winnings totaled $34,383.

A. B. C. PIN MEET OPENS TOMORROW AT BUFFALO, N. Y.

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 26.—The twenty-first annual tournament of the American Bowling congress will open here Monday night with an entry of 934 teams in the five man event. The tournament this year will be the largest ever held. The previous record was one of 900 teams in the tournament at Peoria, Ill., last year. There are 2,127 doubles entries and 4,280 in the singles. The tournament will close March 31.

WOODS and WATERS

By LARRY ST. JOHN

GOSSIP OF THE OUT O' DOORS.

ANOTHER expert muskieteer, E. E. Terrell of Hazelhurst, Wis., has something to say on the question of muskies shedding their teeth. He writes: "I cannot refrain from dipping into this argument about muskies shedding their teeth. I was born and raised in the northern Wisconsin lake region, and have fished muskies for over twenty years, having caught hundreds of them.

LARRY ST. JOHN. (TRIBUNE Photo.)

"Some muskies have sore mouths and loose teeth. I have caught several in that condition, and always in July or August. I have noticed, however, that those with sore mouths and loose or missing teeth are always females, with large heads and frames, but greatly underweight, which leads me to believe the condition is due to old age. I have never caught a small muskie with a sore mouth or loose or missing teeth."

Another veteran, J. W. Keller, Chicago, takes an opposite view. He writes:

"It is true that the gums of some muskellunge are soft, and the teeth loose, but I have never seen a muskie with teeth missing. I think that is what you mean when you say 'shedding.'

"From my experience with muskie fishing, which covers more than twenty years, I believe the sore gum muskie is mostly caught in lakes that have poor circulation.

"Some years back, while fishing in one of Wisconsin's biggest lakes, I found a large muskie floating near the shore. He had been dead only a few hours, so I gaffed him and took him back to camp. The verdict of the camp was that he died of old age.

"I cut off the head and stuck it on a fence post to dry, and had the skeleton of the jaws for a number of years. He had a perfect set of teeth, so that shows, to a certain extent, that old age does not affect the teeth of the muskie. His weight was fifty-two pounds."

ENTRIES POUR IN FOR U. OF C. PREP BASKET TOURNEY

Entries for the third annual University of Chicago national interscholastic championship basketball tournament are pouring into the Midway athletic offices. The series for the prep title of the United States is scheduled for March 10, 11, and 12, but invitations will not be sent until state and sectional tournaments have been completed. It is the plan of the university to allow only the best teams in each section to compete.

Last year sectional champions from Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Ohio, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Louisiana, and Missouri competed, and it is expected that even a wider representation will compete this year. The first meet, held before the war, in the winter of 1917, was a successful experiment, with seven states being represented. Neither of the previous winners will compete this year. Evanston High, 1917 Cook county winner, and Wingate, Ind., the national champions last year, both have been beaten and are not among the sectional champions for 1921.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

BY A. R. METCALFE

ON FORCING DISCARDS.

FORCING discards often accomplishes what seems to be impossible. The remarkable deal which follows occurred in a downtown club during the last week:

THE HANDS.

S—A, Q, J.
H—J, 4.
C—A, 10.
D—J, 10, 8, 5, 4, 2.

S—7, 5, 3, 2.
H—10, 8, 5, 3, 2.
C—4, 2.
D—6, 3.

S—K, 10, 9, 8
H—K, Q, 9, 7.
C—6.
D—A, K, Q, 9.

S—6, 4.
H—A, 6.
C—K, Q, J, 9, 8, 7, 5, 3.
D—7.

THE BIDDING.

Score: 0—0. East dealt and bid one no-trump. South passed, west bid two hearts, north and east passed, south bid three clubs, west and north passed, east bid three hearts, south four clubs, west and north passed, east bid four hearts, south and west passed, north doubled and the bidding closed. North had the original lead.

THE PLAY.

Tricks—	N.	E.	S.	W.
1	AC	6C	3C	2C
2	AS	8S	6S	2S
3	QS	KS	4S	3S
4	H4	HQ	H9	H2
5	HJ	HK	HA	H3
6	10C	H7	KC	4C
7	D2	H9	5C	H10
8	D4	9S	7C	H8
9	D5	10S	8C	H5
10	D8	DQ	D7	D6
11	D10	DA	9C	D3
12	DJ	DK	JC	5S
13	JS	D9	QC	7S

West secured ten tricks.

As a double-dummy proposition, south could easily have made another trick by winning the first round of trumps and returning a trump. But he could not know that north held the jack of hearts, and it was important to keep the lead in dummy.

Also, it was too dangerous for south to risk the lead of a diamond, as west might have the ten of that suit.

After the sixth trick, it seemed that the declarer must lose, as the opponents had their book, and there were only three winning cards in dummy to take care of the four losing cards held by west.

At this stage the expedient of forcing discards came into play, and the declarer led out all his remaining trumps. The discards at tricks seven and eight did no harm to any one, but at trick nine north was sunk. Whatever he discarded dummy kept, and either the ten of spades or nine of diamonds must make.

The result of the deal was remarkable, considering the horrible cards held by the declarer.

Had the no-trump declaration stood, north and south would have secured eleven tricks.

AN UNUSUAL POINT.

An unusual point occurred in the next deal given:

THE HANDS.

S—5.
H—K, 10, 4.
C—10, 9, 8, 6, 3.
D—K, J, 10, 6.

S—5, 2.
H—A, Q, J, 9, 7, 6, 3, 2.
C—A, Q.
D—3.

S—A, Q, 9, 7, 3.
H—3.
C—K, J, 4.
D—9, 7, 5, 2.

S—K, J, 10, 6, 4.
H—8.
C—7, 5, 2.
D—A, Q, 8, 4.

THE BIDDING.

Score: 0—0. East dealt and bid one spade, south passed, west bid three hearts, and the bidding closed. North had the initial lead.

THE PLAY.

Tricks.	N.	E.	S.	W.
1	8S	AS	4S	2S
2	3C	4C	2C	AC
3	6C	KC	5C	QC
4	8C	JC	7C	D3
5	HK	H5	H8	HJ
6	D10	D2	DA	H2
7	H4	3S	6S	HA
8	H10	7S	10S	HQ
9	9C	9S	D4	H9
10	10C	QS	D6	H7
11	D6	D5	DQ	H6
12	DJ	D7	JS	H3
13	DK	D9	KS	9S

West secured eleven tricks.

The eight of spades was labeled singleton, and the first trick ended the usefulness of that suit to the declarer.

The immediate manipulation of the club suit was necessary to reduce the number of losing cards in declarer's hand. Had a trump been led at trick two the declarer would have lost the game.

But a more subtle play occurred at trick four, when west made an additional trick by discarding a diamond instead of a spade. The spade discard would have allowed north to make the ten of hearts.

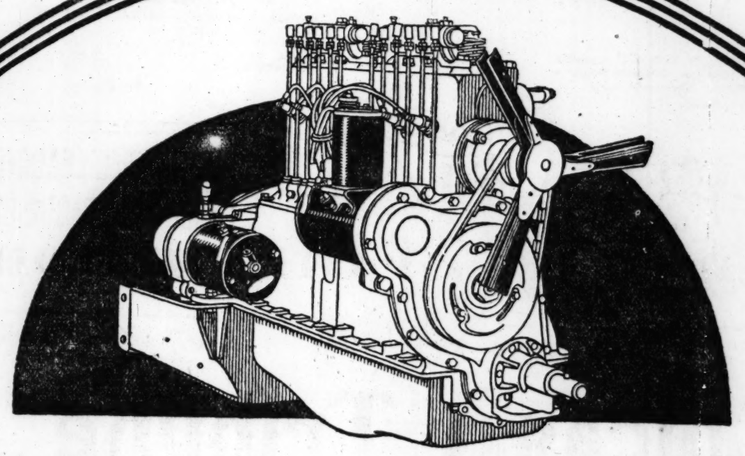
Work it out.

PESEK IN GOTHAM FOR MAT BATTLE

New York, Feb. 26.—[Special.]—John Pesek, the star Nebraska wrestler, arrived yesterday with his manager, Larney Lichtenstein of Chicago.

"Here we are," Larney remarked. "I ready to beat Laitinen on Monday night and any wrestler Jack Curley wishes to match us against. Pesek is the best wrestler in the business and a coming champion."

Stanislaus Zbyszko is ready for his tussle the same night with Charles Peters, the Nebraska sheriff.



This famous Engine is in every Oakland model

A few pertinent facts about the remarkable power plant that is responsible for the pronounced ability and economy of the Oakland car

THE chief factors in satisfactory automobile engine performance are—power, smoothness, flexibility, absence of vibration, and economy.

Because no other engine type so effectively combines these factors with low cost of manufacture, the greater number of motor car models selling at above $1400 today are of six-cylinder design.

Long ago Oakland foresaw the supremacy of the six-cylinder engine, and adopted it as the logical basis of a well-built, serviceable and lightweight car.

In the last six years Oakland has carried the development of this engine steadily forward, and it is today the standard power plant of the entire Oakland line.

It Delivers 44 Horsepower

The six-cylinder Oakland engine delivers a full 44 horsepower, far more than is delivered by other engines of similar size.

It is of overhead-valve design, the design used in all airplane and racing car engines, and embodies many individual features developed by Oakland engineers.

It has very light but strong reciprocating parts, which reduces bearing loads and minimizes vibration; it has a superior method of vaporizing fuel, and the best lubricating system yet devised.

In no other motor car in the world at Oakland's price can you get these important features, and the able, flexible and economical performance consequent upon them.

Advantages to the Owner

The Oakland Sensible Six owner realizes a measure of combined efficiency and low cost from his car that we believe is without parallel in any other automobile.

He enjoys more miles from the gallon of gasoline, more power per pound of car weight, quicker getaway, easier hill-climbing and greater utility, than are available in any other car at anywhere near the Oakland price.

Because of the Oakland policy of concentrating its whole manufacturing energies upon a single chassis type of proved capacity, he commands a value much greater than would otherwise be possible.

He is assured by the fact that the Company behind his car is the world's seventh largest manufacturer of automobiles, and is an important unit of the General Motors Corporation, the largest automobile producing organization on earth.

An Oakland for Every Need

From the Oakland line of closed and open cars you can choose the model ideally fitted for your own particular needs.

Whichever one you select, that Oakland has behind it as an endorsement, the record of more than 200,000 other Oaklands already satisfactorily serving owners.

These owners report returns from their cars of from 18 to 25 miles to the gallon of gasoline, and from 8,000 to 12,000 miles on tires.

If you want an able car this season, one that is economical to buy and to own, arrange at once for your Oakland demonstration.

THE WEST INDIES FOR US.

Mr. Wilson's declaration that the United States wanted nothing for itself from the victory over the Central European powers has been realized in the peace settlement and realized with a vengeance. If we wanted nothing, we got what we wanted.

But the American people, when they acquiesced in Mr. Wilson's assertion, did not understand it to imply that the United States carried its abnegation to the extent of allowing the peace conditions to weaken its position. If we have no mind to profit at the expense of the enemy, neither have we a mind to be placed at a disadvantage by our allies.

Our protest, therefore, on the subject of mandates is not in any sense foreclosed by either our declaration against acquisitions by conquest or our failure to accept the terms of the Paris covenant and treaty.

Our allies have all added to their territory and have been able to set off against the heavy sacrifices of war substantial benefits. Waiving the still unadjusted question of reparations, and the territories to be assigned by plebiscite, the allotment of shipping, both deep sea and river, and other gains unassessable as yet, it is clear that vast colonial possessions have passed under the control of the great powers, and the transfer in some important cases affects America's commercial and strategic positions in a degree which challenges even Mr. Wilson's complaisancy.

The British empire, for example, has brought under her control and virtually added to her dominion 706,630 square miles from German Southwest and East Africa, besides sharing with France in a division of 224,830 square miles in Togo and the Kamerun; in Mesopotamia 143,000 square miles, in Palestine and Arabia nearly 100,000 square miles, and in the Pacific archipelagoes 94,000 square miles. France, besides the recovery of Alsace-Lorraine with the latter's great iron mines and the use for a term of years of the Saar coal region, has brought under her control 106,000 square miles in Asia Minor [Syria] and 100,000 square miles in Africa. Japan has taken over the Shantung peninsula of over 56,000 square miles and of 38,247,000 population, a region of rich natural resources, and 5,000 square miles of islands occupying a strategic position of the greatest importance to Japan and to the United States. Italy has obtained 18,000 square miles in the Trentino, the Tyrol, Trieste, Fiume, and the Dalmatian islands and littoral. Greece has 25,000 square miles, approximately, in Smyrna and more in Anatolia. Roumania has 50,000 square miles at the expense of Hungary and Bessarabia if she can keep it from Russia.

The mileage is, of course, approximate and the attributions subject to future changes. But at the present gains stand about as we have given them.

These are substantial profits to be set off against the losses of warfare. The United States has paid for our share in victory 75,000 lives. Our net war expenditures were over twenty-two billion five hundred millions of dollars. We have loaned to our allies nearly nine and a half billions.

In offset we have gained nothing save such general benefits as our associates share, some of them in much greater proportion, from the overthrow of the militarist imperialism of the former German and Austrian régimes.

In consideration of this outstanding consequence of the war and subsequent peace the United States cannot fairly be required to accept a passive rôle while our associates in war and present and future rivals in peace not only pursue their own respective advantage but in so doing materially affect our interests and our position in the world. Our former associates have not undertaken to establish an enduring peace on a basis approved by us or implied in our declaration of self-abnegation. They are engaged in a struggle for selfish power and profit, and if we are entitled, as we are, to any benefit of the principle of self-preservation it is our duty to ourselves to adopt an affirmative defense of our own interests and to advance energetically within the limits of our own moderate aims.

Especially respecting the enormous debts owed to us, and in consideration of the huge acquisitions of territory made by the great powers with which we are chiefly in competition, we are entitled to press claims for payment and for readjustment of territorial holdings which will be beneficial to the United States. The Pacific situation should be reconsidered with American interests as an important factor. Our paramount interest in the Caribbean region should be placed on a secure footing and may be so placed by the cession of the British and French islands in that region as offsets to the British and French loans.

Great Britain has acquired through the war control of nearly one million square miles, France of over 200,000 square miles. They can well afford to part with territory lying within the unquestionable sphere of American interest. This would not only avoid the difficulties involved in the payment of their monetary debt to us, but would remove an extraneous and provocative factor in the relations of Great Britain and France with the United States and greatly tend to stabilize international conditions in the western hemisphere.

A RULE ON IMMIGRATION.

Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, speaking before the Hamilton club on Washington's birthday, suggested a rule on immigration which should be framed and hung before the eyes of every committee or organization, in congress or out, which considers the subject. It is this:

"My policy would be not to allow any one to come into the country with whom we would not let our children intermarry."

That rule does not cover the whole immigration problem, but it covers one important feature of it completely. If Americans are ever to be a homogeneous people, growing stronger in national unity, character and achievement as the generations go by, we must certainly allow no growing settlement of aliens whom we cannot assimilate. We will do well to face that fact now, adopt it as a national policy, impress it upon unassimilable aliens, and save ourselves much trouble.

THE CRADLE ROBS THE BANK.

A few weeks ago young Francis Carey of Ottawa, Ill., a receiving teller who had stolen $96,000 from the bank which paid him $90 a month, was sent home by Judge Landis, before whom he was for sentence. The judge, with a regard for the pay given a youth handling daily about $25,000, said that he had to find some disposition of the case which would satisfy him and that he could not escape the thought that the bank had contributed to the crime by the wages it paid.

In Chicago last Thursday a younger boy working for the Northern Trust bank as a clerk at $65 a month, took $772,000 of Liberty bonds and walked out with them.

In the sequence of events related here there may be an unescapable moral which for honesty of discussion must be stated. We do not know what influenced 17 year old William Dalton, but it may have been the community attitude towards 19 year old Carey which had judicial expression in Judge Landis' court.

Neither boy stole a sum which might have indicated need at home. Both took fortunes. If sentiment wishes to consider the individual, as it generally does, it may consider that both boys gave their mothers, to whose support they contributed, the greatest sorrow of their lives, both ruined their homes, and both have so twisted their future that it may be useless to them.

The confusion of sentiment and law, and the idea that the necessary rules of society disappear before the impulses of a small salaried youth, destroy either society or the individual who is given a semi-moral right to rob because he does not get paid enough.

Society will not be destroyed in this fashion, but individuals will, and communities will make themselves trouble. Commiseration will envelop young Dalton. It will dwell upon his youth, taken in a moment of weakness, upon the distress of his relatives, and the ruin he has brought upon himself. It will endeavor to intervene and to protect the boy. It will wish there were a way of forgetting the whole episode, of putting the bonds back where they belong, and the boy back at work at better pay.

Then some other boy will have a weak moment, walk out of a bank with a million dollars, and have a right to expect that society will blame itself, think he was justified because he did not get as much pay as the bank president, and that he should help himself to what he wanted, whether it was 50 cents or $500,000. Then Robin Hood can come out of Sherwood Forest and take offices in La Salle street.

However much sentiment may flinch from the idea, young Dalton must be punished. There are others in the cradle who will get some ideas from his experiences. If small pay is immunity to steal, all the low wage jobs will be in demand.

The same paper which told of Dalton's crime told of the arrest of a Montgomery Ward & Co. messenger boy who, at $19 a week, had been doing himself social justice by robbing his employers. Earlier in the month the robbery of the Ogden Avenue State bank was planned by a 17 year old messenger of the bank.

This is the road to madness. Sentiment which avoids sternness may be brutal and usually is. What is being raised in the cradle?

RE-ELECT JUSTICE THOMPSON.

A supreme court justice is to be chosen by voters of the Fourth judicial district on June 6. An active campaign is under way in the interest of several candidates, although the incumbent, Mr. Justice Floyd E. Thompson, has proved his fitness for the place he fills.

The sound principle which THE TRIBUNE follows in recommendations for judicial elections applies clearly to Mr. Justice Thompson's case. It is the public interest to retain on the bench men who have demonstrated their ability and reliability in the judicial office and who have acquired the experience essential to competent and expeditious dispatch of business. Judges, though elected from time to time and therefore subject to recall by the voters, should not be subject to the exigencies of party politics. They should be retained in office when fit in order that the administration of justice and the interpretation of the laws shall have the benefit of experience and consistency.

This principle is of special force in application to our Supreme court, upon which rests the chief responsibility for the orderly evolution of our legal system and the consistent interpretation of the law. The Supreme court should not be invaded by politics. It should not be frequently or unnecessarily changed as to personnel.

Justice Thompson has proved himself an industrious and competent member of the Supreme court and should be retained not only because good service should be rewarded but because sitting judges, unless special circumstances intervene, should be preferred to new and untried men. The office, furthermore, is not partisan and both Democrats and Republicans should give Justice Thompson preference.

GRAMMAR RULES UNDER FIRE.

[Quincy Whig Journal.]

"Yes, it is I," shouted back Sinclair Lewis, author of "Main Street," when a Chicago newspaper man sought by telephone to get an expression of the popular novelist on that much controverted point of grammar involving proper use of pronouns.

The Cook county school superintendent permits his pupils and teaching force to say "It's me," and doubles the dose on painstaking grammarians by recognizing "he don't" as sanctioned by usage and therefore correct.

Dictionaries do allow the use of "me" as a predicate substantive, but explain that it violates the rules of grammar and construction, which call for a predicate nominative after "is."

Grammar, like water, goes no higher than its source. It is made by usage, and if colloquialisms are approved and spread to common speech, they will likely stay there despite the shrieks of authorities on good grammar. The queen's English cannot withstand popular attack, whether it comes from Chicago or Boston.

MORNING PRAYER FOR POETS.

O dearest God, I want to say
A morning prayer to you to-day;

You who have made the lightning fleet
And cooing babies soft and sweet;

You who have made the deodars,
The oceans, mountains and the stars;

You who have made this day dawn fair
With lyric tang of frosty air;

For mattering not how great or small,
You made these dear things, one and all,

And in each far and flaming sun,
As in our earthly little one,

Such beauty is, I needs must pray
And love you for inventing day.

YOU knew that much of Wordsworth's best stuff was his sister Dorothy's prose put into verse, but do you know the passage in her Journals from which "Daffodils" was taken? Herewith:

"We saw a few daffodils close to the water-side. But as we went along there were more and yet more; and at last, under the boughs of the trees, we saw that there was a long belt of them along the shore. They grew among the mossy stones, about and about them; some rested their heads upon these stones, as on a pillow, for weariness; and the rest tossed and reeled and danced, and seemed as if they verily laughed with the wind that blew upon them over the lake, they looked so gay, ever glancing, ever changing."

BERTHA TEN EYCK JAMES.

WRITES M. G. M. from Denver: "Madame Pompadour, late of Chicago, opened a beauty shop here, and one of our up-to-date young ladies asked her if she was doing the hair in the crime wave so popular in Chicago. Can you beat that for innocence abroad—or at home?"

THE THOUSAND AND ONE AFTERNOONS.

XVIII.

It was the housebreaker's thought, as he slid down through the vines, to withdraw from the vicinage with a fleetness that more than once had commanded the admiration of the police, but his companion, less adroit in negotiating porches, completed her descent so abruptly that she upset his plan and himself; moreover when they rose she had him tightly by the arm. His impulse was to tear free and make a run of it, but he observed a form rounding the near corner, and the darting rays of a flasher betokened the private watchman. For the second time the lady resolved his perplexity. She led him quite naturally to the electric which was standing at the curb, unlocked the door unhastily, and stepped within. Mr. Wild followed with a word of appreciation, for here was a simpler method of escape, and one involving less labor than sprinting. "Where are we going?" he asked as the car rolled off. 'Over the hills and far away,' said the lady happily. 'Not in an electric; we should run out of current,' responded Mr. Wild. 'Oh Peter Pan, how practical you are!' she cried. 'Where would you like to go, then?' 'Toward town,' he said, so she turned the next corner and drove southward in Dearborn street. Once on the course she dropped her head on his shoulder and murmured, 'Oh Peter, how happy I am!'

He put a meditative arm around her, as the story-writers would say, but his other hand rested on the latch of the door. Obviously his companion was as mad as Ophelia, but her variety of lunacy was new to Mr. Wild; it did not relate itself to the fantasies evoked by cocaine, opium, and other drugs with which persons in his social set solaced themselves. He should be sorry to part company with her, but the necessity was present, and he cast a backward eye on the avenue. The lady's flight was by this time discovered, and the darkened room, the open window, the vanished electric must have raised a hue and cry. When they reached the river he decided that that was as far as he could in safety go, and he girded his lithe limbs for departure. The west driveway of the bridge was blocked; red lights on a barricade indicated that it was closed for repairs. The enamored Eruestine turned into the east driveway and drove cautiously upon the bridge, and when the car was about midway of the structure Mr. Wild opened the door and sprang out. It was a leap in the dark, and he could not have selected a worse spot, for the flooring of the driveway had been removed, and George Barrington Wild, gentleman housebreaker, shot like a falling star to the ice-strewn flood below.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, if matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. Where space will not permit, or the subject is not suitable, letters will be personally answered, subject to proper limitation, and where a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease. Requests for such service cannot be answered.

IT'S NOT "SLEEPING SICKNESS."

"PLEASE advise me," G. W. M. writes, "as to the etiology, pathology, and communicability in a general way of this malady known as 'sleeping sickness,' which is becoming more or less prevalent."

The common name for this disease among physicians is lethargic encephalitis. It is in no way related to the disease long known as "sleeping sickness" and which is due to a spiral parasite conveyed by the tsetse fly, a South African insect.

The etiology is decidedly obscure. It follows in the wake of influenza, but no one has proved that it is due to the so-called influenza bacillus. The common statement is that it is due to a filterable virus. That opinion leaves open the question of its exact cause. Drs. Dunn and Heagy of Omaha found a green streptococcus in many of their cases, but they do no more than suggest that that may be the cause.

Let us, then, answer your first question by saying the disease is due to some form of microscopic organism which infects in the wake of influenza, but that the exact cause is unknown.

The pathology is better known. It is an inflammation of the central part of the brain, what is known as the brain stem. The location of the trouble in relation to the other parts of the nervous system corresponds to the exchange and its leading trunk lines in a telephone system. It may involve other parts of the brain, but the standard pathology is inflammation of the stem area of the brain.

It is not communicable in the sense that smallpox is communicable. Those in contact with cases seldom develop the disease. Dr. H. Roger reports in the Journal of the American Medical Association that since 1917 it is estimated there have been 10,000 cases in France, yet nowhere has there been a true epidemic. The cases occur in distant quarters without its being possible usually to distinguish any link between them. In only 174 cases could direct contagion be determined.

The disease went through one institution in England, attacking twelve of the twenty-one inmates. Many health departments require the reporting of lethargic encephalitis for the following reasons:

The disease is slightly communicable; it is caused by some form of micro-organism; it might become epidemic.

The public welfare requires that all such diseases should be reported to the health department so that such department may have knowledge of their existence, should be kept aware of their presence and importance, should study them, and should do what is necessary for the care of the sick and the protection of the public.

It is a long drawn out disease. It is not a new disease. Dr. Crookshank, who wrote about it in the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal, says it is the same as the sweating sickness of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

If this is correct it is well to remember that this old epidemic was sometimes known as the Picardy sweat and that what was supposed to be its natural habitat was a province of France occupied in 1917 by the fighting armies, and that sleeping sickness began to spread over the world in that year.

WRITES OF MANY THINGS.

K. writes: "Itch—Every household contains all that is necessary for almost instant relief.

"Required—A piece of woolen cloth, say about three feet square; some very hot water.

"Process—Fold woolen cloth in middle, making three feet by eighteen inches; fold again, nine inches; again, four and one-half inches. Take up by ends, allowing cloth to loop, and dip middle half to two-thirds of length in water. The woolen cloth will not allow water to run out to ends as a cotton cloth would. Wring out by holding dry ends, twisting one end one way and other end other way. When cloth is not dripping, take both ends of cloth in one hand, allowing cloth to loop; swing like a pendulum, allowing hot, damp cloth just to touch affected part. As cloth cools and skin gets used to heat, longer application of cloth can be made. It will take just about three to five minutes to relieve worst case of itch. Water must be very hot—hotter than hands could stand it to wring out cloth; boiling water may be used.

"About that poor fellow who had to walk for hours and do all sorts of other stunts before he could sleep. No wonder he slept—the sleep of exhaustion. Far easier method—see that bowels are performing properly; eat less meat and more vegetables, as spinach, lettuce, celery; see that bowels are performing properly; take a little light exercise just before getting into bed—not tiring, but just get into the glow before perspiration; see that bowels are performing properly; use a higher pillow; see that bowels are performing properly; smoke about half as much.

"That smoke half as much leads us to the method of quitting use of tobacco you recently published.

"Either using tobacco is not harmful, in which case why quit? Or it is harmful, in which case why the necessity for all these mouth washes, etc.? There is only one way to quit, and that is to quit. The trouble with most is they don't make up their minds to quit. They 'monkey around' with the idea, and of course they can't get anywhere. Try a real true I have quit! none of this maybe I will quit, and see how easy it is. I know—I quit after more than thirty years of it—and I didn't do anything but say I have quit."

RESISTANCE MAY BE POOR.

M. L. F. writes: "My sister has chronic otitis media of about three years' standing. Two years ago I had a very acute attack of acute otitis media. One year ago my son, 3 years od, had an exceptionally hard attack of acute otitis media, both ears at the same time. This year daughter had mild attack otitis media. We live on the north shore. All had surgical attention and made perfect recoveries.

"1. Is this disease recurrent in some persons? 2. My wife and her family never had any ear trouble. What part did inheritance through me play in cases of two children?"

REPLY.

1. Yes.

2. Perhaps as a family you are below the average in powers to resist infections. Beyond that inheritance is not a factor. The determining factor was exposure of some sort in all probability.

YES, IT'S A REDUCER.

Miss G. A. writes: "Will the following diet make me thinner? 1. I eat no breakfast. For luncheon I eat a green vegetable and a salad; for dinner a small piece of meat, a green vegetable, and occasionally gelatin for dessert. 2. Also will the juice of six lemons daily aid me in reducing? I sweeten the lemon juice with saccharin."

REPLY.

1. That diet will cause you to lose flesh rapidly, assuming you stick to it closely. I presume you eat no bread or any other distinctly carbohydrate food.

2. Probably not.

SHOULD NOT SPIT ON FLOOR.

A Reader writes: "If a person having catarrh continually spits on the floor are other members of the family likely to contract diseases from it? If so, what kind would be the result and what should be done?"

REPLY.

Spitting on the floor may cause tuberculosis, pneumonia, bronchitis, and coryza. I do not know that the fact the offending party has catarrh makes the habit less indefensible.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

Letters for this department must be signed with names and addresses of the writers.

TRULY AMERICAN.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—[Friend of the People.]—Can you or one of your readers please furnish me with the third stanza of "The Star-Spangled Banner"? I have looked through several song books but they only give the first, second, and fourth verses. When was the author of this song born and when did he die? AN AMERICAN.

And where is that band who so vauntingly swore
That the havoc of war and the battle's confusion
A home and a country should leave us no more?
Their blood has washed out their foul footsteps' pollution.
No refuge could save the hireling and slave
From the terror of flight or the gloom of the grave.
And the Star-Spangled Banner in triumph doth wave
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave!

Francis Scott Key was born in 1780 and died in 1843.

FEDERAL AND STATE BONUS.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—If a man enlisted in the navy in April, 1918, and was not called until December, 1918, would he be entitled to any of the bonus from the state, from the United States? If so, for how long? He is still in the navy. E. J. H.

The federal bonus was paid only to those men who served between the dates of April 6, 1917, and Nov. 11, 1918.

Until a state bonus law is passed, if it is passed, we cannot say what the regulations will be governing length of service or time of service.

TO FORECLOSE.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Please inform me what action a mortgagee could pursue on an expired second real estate mortgage with two years' interest due. It is in the state of Wisconsin and is not recorded. W. T.

Place it in the hands of an attorney for foreclosure.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

SOME DID AND SOME DIDN'T.

Chicago, Feb. 23.—[Friend of the People.]—Either several of my friends or I are in the wrong and I'd like you to settle the matter for me by answering this question: Was it necessary for a voter to declare his politics, that is, whether he was Republican or Democrat, etc., in order to vote for the bond issue, or alderman, etc., at the election held last Tuesday? E. S.

If a vote was cast for city treasurer and city clerk the voter had to declare his politics; otherwise not.

THE FLAG ON HOLIDAYS.

Chicago, Feb. 23.—[Friend of the Soldier.]—Kindly inform me which is the proper way to raise a flag on a flag staff for legal holidays, such as Washington's birthday and Lincoln's birthday. J. T. B.

On such holidays as you mention the flag is raised in the usual way—that is, raising it slowly to the top of the pole. On the forenoon of Memorial day the flag is raised to the top of the pole first and then lowered to half-mast. At 12 o'clock on that day it is again raised to the top of the pole.

PAWNING DIAMONDS.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Last year I made a loan on some diamonds with a prominent loan society, with interest at 1 per cent. The interest is paid up to date and now they notify me that the interest would be 1½ per cent, also that unless I give them some additional cash they cannot carry the loan. They claim diamonds have depreciated in value. Is the increase legal? F. K.

If the period originally agreed upon has expired and if the lender is a pawnbroker, any amount under 3 per cent a month can be charged on the extension.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

UNWELCOME PIGS.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—[Friend of the People.]—The back porch next door joins onto our back porch. The people who live there keep pigs under the porch. The sty sends a most disagreeable odor all over the neighborhood and of course we get the worst of it. Are they permitted to keep pigs within the city limits? B. M.

An investigation has been made by this department and a notice served on the tenant to remove the hogs from the premises and clean out the inclosure under the rear porch.

JOHN DILL ROBERTSON,
Commissioner of Health.

WIRING LICENSE.

Ohio, Ill., Feb. 21.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Does the practical electrician have to have a license to do inside wiring in Illinois, and, if so, where can it be obtained? E. V. F.

It depends on the local ordinances. As to Chicago, write to the city clerk, City building.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

OUR LANGUAGE

[From London Punch (Copyright).]

Youthful Dominie (fresh from a course of phonetics): "But there's no such word as 'wa'er.' It's 'water.' Say 'water.'"
Wee Sandy: "Wa'er."
Dominie: "No, boy. I told you it was 'water.'"
Wee Sandy (with great effort): "Wat-ter."
Dominie (with a sigh of relief): "Yes—that's be'er."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

JOBS FOR AMERICANS FIRST.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The fellow that wrote the letter which appeared in the "Voice of the People" signed "Colored American" said a mouthful.

Yes, it's true many of our colored American boys, together with thousands of our American white boys, went to the front, fought, bled, and died, while thousands of foreigners were permitted to remain at home, rest upon flowery beds of ease, and reap the unusual profits made possible by the international conflict. And, as the colored writer says in so many words, the foreigner is still getting the cream in the way of jobs, etc.

It's an outrage the way many so-called American business men are showing their appreciation for the bloody service rendered by both our white and black boys, without which there would be no prosperous American institutions.

According to Orr in today's TRIBUNE, let's get out of the wilderness—back to the trail of Americanism, indicating that unless we are not careful America will yet change its name and cease to be the light leading to the crest of human endeavor. W. B. FREEMAN.

WAR AS A SOURCE OF CRIME.

Winchester, Ill., Feb. 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The nation-wide crime wave has its counterpart in the aftermath of every war, and that following our war of rebellion is thus alluded to by the late William Dean Howells in his "Years of My Youth."

"And I remember Garfield telling how, in the cool of a summer evening, such as this night had deepened from, he came with his command into a valley of the Kanawha: for he had quickly turned from laws to arms, and this was in the beginning of the great war. He said he noticed a number of men lying on the dewy meadow in different shapes of sleep, and for an instant, in the inveterate association of peace, he thought they were resting there after the fatigue of a long day's march. Suddenly it broke upon him that they were dead, and that they had been killed in the skirmish which had left the Unionist forces victors.

"Then, he said, at the sight of these dead men, whom other men had killed, something went out of him, the habit of his lifetime, that never came back again: the sense of the sacredness of life and the impossibility of destroying it. What was not their own could be made their own by the act of taking it: and he said we would all be surprised to know how often the property of others had been treated after the war as if it were the property of public enemies by the simple-hearted fellows who had carried the uses of war in the enemies' country back into their own.

"You would be surprised," he ended, "to know how many of these old soldiers, who fought bravely and lived according to the traditions of military necessity, are now in the penitentiaries for horse stealing."

With a great American author thus quoting a martyred president, verily it behooveth us all to be on the lookout in these days. D. M. M.

THE FOREIGN ASCENDENCY.

Chicago, Feb. 19.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The splendid cartoon by Cary Orr in Wednesday's TRIBUNE, showing immigrant labor throwing out an American workman, should sink into the hearts of every American born of American born parents. Why is it that the foreigners hold ownership to most of the apartment buildings? Nine times out of ten when we seek the owners they don't answer to a good old Yankee name, but one that nearly breaks your jaw to pronounce. Why do the foreigners have a monopoly on the flower industry, fruits, confections? Why do the Japs control most of the farms on the Pacific coast? I'll warrant that you won't find any American holding any land in Japan.

Why do the foreign born outnumber Americans in music and painting? The large majority of Americans seem perfectly satisfied to sit in the background and let the foreigner grab all the "laurels."

It's high time something was done, or that cartoon will become a reality and it will only be a matter of time before we Americans will find ourselves pushed into obscurity. MABELLE G. BRYANT.

SUGGESTING MORE WORK AND LESS TALK FOR GERMANY.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Recording the other day certain chastening measures, the shooting of 110 civilians at what should have been called Andennes, haste prevented notation of the fact that the Germans also burned that town and cited the two incidents as salutary for the people of Liege. But that, after all, is not the matter at issue, which deals rather with the German love of work and the firm faith that their industry may enable them to pay the cruel sum demanded by the allies.

In connection with that love of work, especially of work done by others, suppose that the genial Col. Gloss of Hoinon be cited for his proclamation of July 20, 1915:

"All workers, all women and children (15 years of age) are obliged to work in the fields every day, including Sunday, from 4 in the morning until 8 at night.

"Violation of this order will be punished in the following way:

"Lazy children will be punished by fifteen blows with a stick.

"Lazy workers will be punished with twenty blows a day for each day of refusal."

About one-eighth such industry and less work at propaganda might put the Germans in a fair way to pay off, but, of course, their innocence in the matter of the war, when they were attacked by savage Belgium, clears of all blame, while their salvaging of the Lusitania without the loss of a life entitles them to congressional and private sympathy. J. C. C.

MORE SERIOUS THAN SOBER.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I suppose all good citizens, militant Christians, and others have already noticed, and taken just pride in, the effects of America's first "blue law"—the eighteenth amendment. The almost total absence of crime, our almost empty jails, asylums, and other penal institutions, our very much reduced police force, our rapidly disappearing criminal courts, our very much lower rate of taxation, our municipal treasuries bulging with surplus funds, and the general air of prosperity and well being that pervades the entire country. Yes, indeed—a grand and glorious feeling, which we are quite ready to share with others, for some of our wise senators are talking of taking over some of the British West Indies, whose chief source of prosperity, as far back as I can remember, has been the production and exportation of rum, so that they also may share in the era of general good times and dry blessedness! Ha, ha! O, boy! CYNICAL HEATHEN.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

Last week's six best sellers at a leading Chicago book store were:

FICTION.

"Main Street" [Harcourt], by Sinclair Lewis.
"The Growth of the Soil" [Knopf], by Knut Hamsun.
"Moon Calf" [Knopf], by Floyd Dell.
"Poor White" [Huebsch], by Sherwood Anderson.
"Blind" [Macmillan], by Ernest Poole.
"Youth and the Bright Medusa" [Knopf], by Willa Cather.

NONFICTION.

"Outline of History" [Macmillan], by H. G. Wells.
"New Jerusalem" [Doran], by G. K. Chesterton.
"Authors and I" [Lane], by C. Lewis Hind.

The six best circulators at the public library last week were:
"Main Street," by Sinclair Lewis.
"Potterism," by Rose Macauley.
"Moon Calf," by Floyd Dell.
"Outline of History," by H. G. Wells.
"Margot Asquith: An Autobiography."
"Introduction to Psychoanalysis," by Sigmund Freud.

"AUTHORS AND I" and "Art and I" are two volumes from the journalistic pen of C. Lewis Hind. They are bound alike and form, in a peculiarly appropriate sense, a "set." "Authors and I," which is the only one I read, is a set piece delivered by the local florist. Mr. Hind's personal relations with the authors must have been horribly clouded by the "I." His anecdotes are yeastless. He knew his authors as authors, not as human beings.

We have all had contacts with authors or any other sort of artists while they were in their makeups, false whiskers, doublets, and waving plumed hats. An author who is authing all the time is as dull as a business man who talks about his turnover, or a bolshevik who curses the gods of finance and doesn't die, or a feminist who quotes Margaret Sanger to a gynecologist.

Mr. Hind may himself be a charming person, I dunno. But I do know that his authors went through all their tricks, carrying their properties and stage settings with them, and that Mr. Hind has, in his book, supplied the hand-clapping audience.

Your shelves of Russian literature may be richer this month by the addition of "The School-Mistress and Other Stories," by Chekov, and "The Friend of the Family," by Fyodor Dostoevsky, both of them translated by Constance Garnett. The Macmillan company is also publishing this spring a new complete Turgenev.

Here is a record of a day's "literary news" in a New York paper. Most newspaper readers are inclined to think that books are above the battle of life, that there is no "news" in books. Well: There was an emphatic denouncement of Chesterton's attitude toward Jews and Zionism, a long story by a New York rabbi. There was also a report of Chesterton's lectures, and an interview with him about a question of socialism. There was also a column and a half interview with Clare Sheridan, whose diary of her visit to Russia is announced by Boni & Liveright. A leading editorial renewed the discussion about Einstein and his theory of relativity—available in his own "The Theory of Relativity," and many smaller interpretive volumes. The announcement of Dr. Manning's election to the bishopric of New York reminded any one interested in religious books that his important new book is just ready from Macmillan. The arrivals on the Aquitania included Sir Philip Gibbs, whose "Now It Can Be Told" is still the war book which every one is reading, and Sir Ernest Shackleton, whose "South" loses none of its glamourous thrill. And the theatrical notes included bits about "Miss Lulu Bett," "Heartbreak House," "Deburau," and "Enter Madame," all of them books of present popularity.

Arnold Daly, late of the New York "The Tavern" company, then again of it, is to be the proud papa of a book of essays called "The Dominant Male." It is composed of everything he has had in print and a lot more that hasn't been, and is to be published by Moffat, Yard & Co.

There's a little paper-covered book—hardly more than a pamphlet—which bears the quiet title "An Introduction to Hindu Art." It is by Benoy Kobmar Sarkar. It is such a friendly introduction that it insures a deeper friendship.

The first edition of Daisy Ashford's "The Young Visiters" is listed at $15 in the latest rare book lists. An increase of 1,400 per cent in one year!

A bill has been introduced into the Massachusetts legislature to make Lake Walden a public reservation in memory of Thoreau.

"Sailing South" by Philip S. Marden is for the traveler who goes completely first class, and on the beaten track, not, like Harry Franck's books, for the vagabond in spirit—though Harry Franck has somewhat fallen down lately on his job of being a vagabond. Much of his latest jaunt in the West Indies was done in a luxurious motor made by a gentleman in Detroit. "There's nothing I like to do so much as to take a long tramp in my car," a bright young man said the other day. But to return to "Sailing South." Mr. Marden travels comfortably, sees the red-starred points of interest, writes about them pleasantly, and makes one say, "Now, next year I must take that trip. I wish I could this year, but unfortunately I read 'White Shadows in the South Seas,' and though every one else in the world is going to Tahiti, I've gotta go. I've just gotta." It's the civilized south of Havana, Porto Rico, Panama, and adjacent stations that you'll be lured to by Mr. Marden. The book starts with the assurance that the traveler in sailing south will realize for the first time the "undoubted fact of the earth's sphericity," which is, I think, a nice way for a travel book to start.

In Brinsley MacNamara's latest novel, "In Clay and in Bronze," the father of the hero has two vices. He has a passion for strong drink, and when he is in his cups he goes on an orgy of book-buying. The drink was a normal expression of human frailty, in the mind of the hero's mother, but it was agin nater to get book-tipsy, gave one a name for being queer. When she discovered that her son had inherited the degrading vices she hoped that it would be the drink and not the books that would ruin him if ruined he must be. The story concerns the young man's complete downfall!

"Ancient Man" is the first of the series of histories for boys and girls which Hendrik Willem Van Loon is going to write. Dr. Van Loon is one of the most fascinating writers in the world because he writes not only with the normal writing implements but with a burned match and a few bottles of colored ink. His "A Short History of Discovery" is a book which I wouldn't be without for anything. It, like "Ancient Man," is supposed to be a child's book, but no child could get the rich humor of it, the subtle fun of the drawings. He is a great historian, but, like the famous mathematician who preferred to sign his name Lewis Carroll even to a command from his queen to present himself at court, he is happiest in giving children happiness. If you cannot look upon his picture of "Nineveh" with joy unbounded you are not still a child at heart.

Isabel Ostrander's "How Many Cards" has been pointed to by some reviewers as the fictionization of the Elwell murder mystery. Miss Ostrander's book was finished and in the hands of her publishers two months before Elwell was murdered. If anybody ought to be blamed for plagiarism it should be the Elwell murderer and not Miss Ostrander. Things have come to a pretty pass when life can't think up its own plots and has to steal them from some poor, hard-working author.

Ethel Sidgwick's first novel since the war, "Madam," is promised for March publication by Small, Maynard & Co. Unless the few years of silence have changed her, "Madam" will be a great book. The old Ethel Sidgwick did not write second rate ones.

Dr. Marie Stopes' "Radiant Motherhood" is published in this country with the imprint of G. P. Putnam's Sons. They also own the American rights to "Married Love," but they have not, as yet, felt that Mr. Sumner and his disciples of virtue would permit its distribution. Ninety-two thousand copies of "Married Love" have been sold in England.

"The Passionate Spectator," the novel by Jane Burr which lately created much disturbance in our journalistic columns—accompanied by a photograph of the beautiful authoress—when its success in England sent a backwash of interest to one of her home towns, is now available in an American edition, published by Thomas Seltzer. "Rozie Winslow," as most of her Chicago friends knew her, has ideas about marriage which would be fatal in the life of any one who wasn't—like her—as beautiful as the dawn.

Gilbert K. Chesterton will lecture again in Orchestra hall on the evening of March 8 on "Literature as Luggage," or, as he translated himself the other night, "Literature as Baggage." His day in Chicago was so carefully guarded by his lecture manager that he and the Tabloid didn't have the long, chummy chat that we expected, but he was so sorry to have missed it that he wrote for the Tabloid Guest Book:

With regrets for a lost meeting
G. K. Chesterton

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

JIM BLUDSO.
By John Hay.

Wall, no! I can't tell where he lives,
Because he don't live, you see;
Leastways he's got out of the habit
Of livin' like you and me.
Whar have you been for the last three years,
That you haven't heard folks tell
How Jimmy Bludso passed in his checks
The night of the Prairie Belle?

He weren't no saint—them engineers
Is all pretty much alike—
One wife in Natchez-Under-the-Hill
And another one here in Pike;
A keerless man in his talk was Jim,
And an awkward man in a row;
But he never flunked and he never lied—
I reckon he never knowed how.

And this was all the religion he had—
To treat his engine well;
Never be passed on the river;
To mind the pilot's bell;
And if ever the Prairie Belle took fire—
A thousand times he swore
He'd hold her nozzle agin the bank
Till the last soul got ashore.

All boats has their day on the Mississipp',
And her day come at last—
The Movastar was a better boat,
But the Belle she wouldn't be passed.

And so she come tearin' along that night—
The oldest craft on the line—
With a nigger squat on her safety valve
And her furnace crammed, rosin and pine.

The fire bust out as she clared the bar,
And burnt a hole in the night,
And quick as a flash she turned and made
For that willer bank on the right.
There was runnin' and cursin', but Jim yelled out,
Over all the infernal roar,
"I'll hold her nozzle agin the bank
Till the last galoot's ashore."

Through the hot, black breath of the burnin' boat
Jim Bludso's voice was heard,
And they all had trust in his cussedness,
And knowed he would keep his word;
And sure's you're born they all got off
Afore the smokestacks fell—
And Bludso's ghost went up alone
In the smoke of the Prairie Belle.

He weren't no saint—but at jedgment
I'd run my chance with Jim
'Longside of some pious gentlemen
That wouldn't shook hands with him.
He seen his duty, a dead sure thing,
And went for it thar and then;
And Christ ain't a-going to be too hard
On a man that died for men.

Builders Can't Build! —and Why—

1. Wages and material are still too high.
2. Bankers won't finance building; too much high interest in lending money to industries, instead.
3. Senseless agitation for laws controlling real estate and rentals.

The law of supply and demand is responsible for the housing shortage in Chicago. No homes or apartments have been built in three years, while the population has increased 210,000. Therefore, apartments and houses are scarce.

They will continue scarce until the three conditions outlined above are changed. Wages and material will come down eventually. But bankers won't lend money on dangerous propositions and the building business in Chicago today is dangerous.

Here's why: Publicity-seeking demagogues, demanding confiscating bolshevist laws, keep YOU tied to ultra-conservatism in building. No one will risk money in transactions that cannot profit. That's sane business.

Till senseless un-American agitation stops, there won't be any building in Chicago. Until there is building, rents can't go down. The law of supply and demand is absolute.

Dr. Pinkston's Corn and Callous Remover will stop that awful pain in hard corns on top of toes, soft corns between toes, callouses on bottom of feet and on bunions, and will remove them by the roots without pain; no chance for infection. Most all painful corns and callouses have pus cavities in them, and my preparation will remove them both by the roots.

My bunion reducer stops the pain at once, removes the soreness, swelling and inflammation. It will reduce an old bunion ½ to ¾ its size, and will cure a bunion that is just starting. It penetrates to the bone and softens up the chalk deposit and absorbs it. This same preparation will stop the pain in nephritis, rheumatism, varicose veins, cramps in the feet and legs; it's the most wonderful pain killer known to science.

My antiseptic foot powder will stop that excessive perspiration of the feet, burning sensation, foul odor, cracking of the skin between the toes, that parboiled appearance, and removes all soreness and discomfort. These preparations are guaranteed to do what I claim for them, or money refunded.

Wear Dr. Pinkston's Combination Last Shoes and enjoy perfect foot comfort and shoe style. His oxfords and pumps cannot slip at heel, or bulge at side. Prices $10.00 to $18.00; extra charge for sizes over 9.

Price, corn and callous remover, $1.00; by mail, $1.10. Bunion reducer, $1.00; by mail, $1.10. Foot powder, 50c; by mail, 60c, or ask your shoe or drug dealer, and if he has not got it he will get it for you.
Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

NEW BUILDING BODY TO 'BUILD CHICAGO BETTER'

Organization of Experts Enters Field.

BY AL CHASE.

"Build Chicago better" is the slogan of what is said to be the biggest aggregation of successful, practical builders ever brought together in this city in the new organization to be known as Chicago Expert Builders, application for whose charter was forwarded to the secretary of state at Springfield yesterday.

IVAN O. ACKLEY

ROBERT ISHAM RANDOLPH.

WILLIAM M. LAWTON.

The objects set forth in the certificate of incorporation sent to the state capital are as follows:

1.—To "build Chicago better."

2.—To further and promote proper civic ideals for great public works and undertakings, and to aid and assist in the planning, development and building of the same; to teach and develop scientific methods in municipal works, and to encourage efficiency in public affairs.

3.—To provide expert advice, and to furnish practical, efficient and intelligent solutions for building, construction and engineering problems affecting the location, permanent well being or existence of all industries.

4.—To promote coöperation between its members and to render mutual assistance in all their undertakings.

The word "builders" in the name of the organization is used in the more comprehensive sense of including anyone who is necessary for either the building, purchase, sale or financing of building operations. Thus there are found among its members architects, engineers, contractors, building material men, real estate men, bankers and lawyers.

Who's Who.

The builders and material men are represented by such as:

Maj. Robert Isham Randolph, head of the firm of Isham Randolph & Co., president of the Chicago chapter, American Association of Engineers, and vice president of the Illinois Society of Engineers.

Wensel Moravа, presidentof the Moravа Construction company, which has furnished steel for the Hotel Sherman, Field annex, Peoples Gas building, and a score of other loop skyscrapers, and is now supplying 10,000 tons of steel for the new Federal Reserve Bank building.

Frank D. Chase, president of Frank D. Chase Inc., one of the largest engineering firms in the country, which in these days of building inactivity has under way over $6,000,000 of construction work.

Harry B. Wheelock, one of the few architects in the United States who have been elected fellows of the American Institute of Architects for conspicuous meritorious work. He is a director of and chairman of the legislative committee of the Illinois Society of Architects.

I. F. Stern, consulting engineer, for years in charge of the supervision, design and erection of all structures on the Chicago and Northwestern railroad system, and one of the few men who have built bridges across the Mississippi river.

Thomas J. Dolan, president of the Chicago Foundation company, who, in conjunction with President Roosevelt and Chief Engineer John F. Wallace, arranged the wage schedule and working conditions for the Panama canal workers, and whose company holds the record for the largest single excavation in the country.

Other Builders.

Among other builders and material men are: Justin G. McCarthy, president of the J. G. McCarthy company, painters; F. H. Rudderham, secretary of the Soper Lumber company; Morton R. Mavor, secretary of the William Mavor company, general contractors; Peter Aagaard, president of the T. S. Leake Construction company, builders of railroad shops, roundhouses, stations, and freight houses; Elmer E. Hansen, superintendent of construction for the Simpson Construction company, concrete and asphalt contractors, and R. I. Phillips, secretary of the Pitt Engineering company, elevator builders.

In allied lines of business are: Henry L. Canmann, vice president of the Chicago Guarantee Survey company, the largest survey company in the country, and Arthur C. Arnold, manager of the bond department of the Bartholomay-Darling company, general agents of the Indemnity Insurance company of North America, specializing in contractors' bonds.

Realty Stars.

Real estate interests are also represented by a galaxy of well known men: Ivan O. Ackley, Mark Levy, Paul C. Loeber, Adolph F. Kramer, Frank E. Lackowski, J. Soule Warterfield, and Bartholomew O'Toole.

Hiram S. Cody, manager of the real estate department of the Chicago Trust company, represents the financial end.

William M. Lawton, former attorney for the Cook County Real Estate board and now attorney for the Real Estate Association of Illinois; William H. A. Rush, master in chancery of the Circuit court, and J. Scott Matthews, chief examiner of titles for Cook county and former assistant attorney general for Illinois, will represent the legal end.

Outlines Scope of Body.

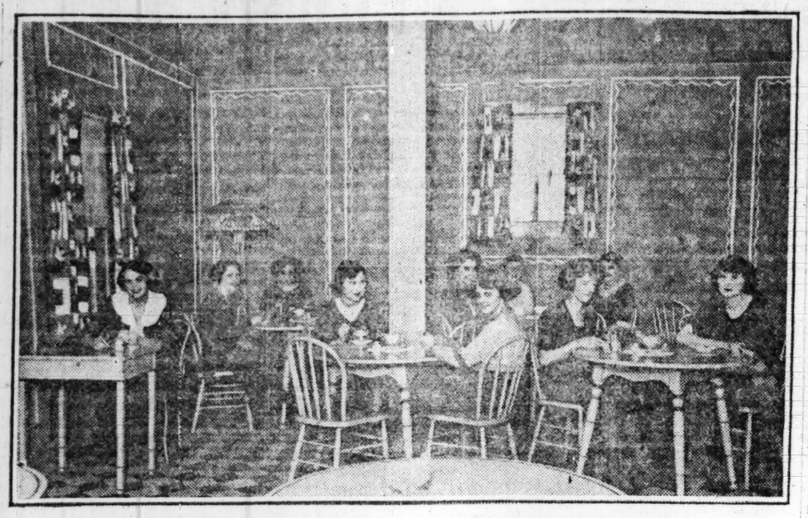
William M. Lawton, president of the organization, outlined the scope of Chicago Expert Builders as follows:

"We have brought together in one large organization every phase of the building and realty industries for two primary objects: first, we expect to do our part in relieving the present deplorable building situation, not by temporary expedients, but by helping to build a permanently better Chicago.

"Second, we intend to take advantage of the new zoning law which will probably be passed and in effect by July 1. We regard it as a coming opportunity for construction work on a larger scale than has ever before been attempted in Chicago.

"We don't propose to encroach on the work of the Chicago Plan commission or the real estate boards, but the Chicago Expert Builders intend to supplement their work by laying out and carrying into execution comprehensive plans for private buildings as well as public buildings on a scale that would be impossible for any building organization of limited capital."

Robert Isham Randolph will be first vice president. Frank D. Chase will be second vice president; Ivan O. Ackley, secretary, and Hiram S. Cody will be treasurer. Temporary offices already have been opened in the First National bank building and permanent offices will be secured at once in the loop.



Here are a few Tribune girls making use of their new blue and gold sky tea room atop the W. G. N.'s building at Madison and Dearborn, which has been remodeled from the five room bungalow formerly used by The Tribune Overset club.

IF you've ever had anything to do with Chicago real estate you'll recognize the above person—for you've surely either met him or talked with him over the phone. Next Tuesday will mark the rounding out of thirty years of continuous service with the Chicago real estate board of Herbert A. Cole, general executive secretary of that organization and one of the most important factors in the development of the board. He has served under thirty-one presidents and has helped the Chicago real estate board grow from a membership in all classes of 175 to the present number of upwards of 6,000.

He is known to realtors from coast to coast as "King Cole," having attended every convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards for the last twelve years.

"King Cole" has put more zip into real estate functions of various sorts than any one man. For years he has supervised the various banquets, outings, and out of town trips of the board, and things have moved without a hitch. He is a living encyclopedia of knowledge of the board's history and is frequently called on by members concerning facts of years ago. He lives at 6021 Dorchester avenue.

Here's continued health, happiness, and prosperity to "King Cole"—long may he reign.

START WORK ON "7 WEEKS" PLANT

Just seven weeks from the day work started on the foundations, the two story plant of the Floyd Manufacturing company, at the northwest corner of Diversey and North Harding avenues, is expected to be ready for the manufacture of metal specialties and small tools. Paul Gerhardt is architect.

The ground area is about 30,000 square feet. Portions of the building devoted to galvanizing and electroplating will have specially constructed acid proof floors. A separate fireproof power plant will be bufilt adjoining the building on the west. Provision will be made for the storage of a full year's supply of coal. The Floyd company is now at 522 South Clinton street.

WOMEN INVITED TO REALTY LUNCH

Women have been extended a special invitation to the first special spring luncheon of the season by the Cook County Real Estate board in the crystal room of the Hotel Sherman next Tuesday at noon. William H. Malone, formerly chairman of the board of equalization, will speak on "Taxation." According to William Jenson, chairman of the luncheon committee, the meeting will adjourn promptly at 1:30 p. m., giving members a chance to attend the real estate market at the board rooms.

New Concern Enters "Own Your Own Home" Field

The Chicago Home Service company is the newest entry in the "own your own home" field. It has opened offices at 179 West Washington street and, according to President Robert P. Gillett, is "a service company which recognizes the great growing need for homes in the city of Chicago and acts as a medium of bringing the owner of real estate in touch with the necessary architectural service, the financial means and the builder."

William C. Presto has charge of the architectural department of the new organization. The other officers will be announced later. According to the company's announcement, the owner of any real estate which is free from debt, located within the city limits and has in all improvements, such as water, sewer, sidewalks, paving, etc., shall be entitled to the service.

Residence in Bellevue Place Sold for $45,000

The property at 52 Bellevue place, 26x130, formerly owned by Mrs. Rose Thomas, widow of Theodore Thomas, founder of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, and subsequently purchased by the late Elmer H. Adams, who remodled it at a cost of $25,000, has been sold by his widow, Leona W. Adams, to H. Paul Juergens. The consideration shown on the deed filed yesterday is nominal but the revenue stamps indicate $45,000 paid for the property and not $20,000 as was incorrectly stated in this department last Sunday. Cremin & O'Connor represented both parties in the transaction.

Sky Bungalow Atop Tribune Building Becomes Tearoom

Frantic seekers for homes didn't know it—and it wouldn't have done them any good if they had—but for several months there's been an attractive little five room bungalow with living room, dining room, kitchen, bedroom and bath at the southeast corner of Madison and Dearborn. It has a large yard, somewhat sooty, it's true, but with a superb view, for it's 260 feet up in the air. And it's been empty since last fall.

But—there's always a but in house hunting—it's not for rent, for workmen have been busy during the last few weeks making this sky bungalow into one of the most attractive tearooms in the loop. Miss Anna Garrow, head of The Tribune's telephone system, suggested that The Tribune company turn the building over to The Tribune girls. Previous to trekking across the river, Tribune editors used the bungalow as the Overset club.

Suggestion Carried Out.

Miss Garrow's suggestion was promptly carried out. Aided by Miss Celeste Horton, Mrs. Vivian Classen, Miss Eleanor Heaney and Mrs. Paul Goddard, she opened the roof tearoom on Feb. 3 and since then more than 100 girls a day have eaten the "at cost" luncheons.

For The Tribune company has borne all the expense of converting the five room bungalow into a one room teashop. The decorations are blue and gold. All the furnishings, the dishes, linen and silver were donated by the company. The overhead expense of light, heat, janitor service, ice, etc., is also borne by the company, so that the girls get their meals at actual cost. It's their own restaurant and they conduct it as they see fit.

Pre-War Prices.

That means the menu prices are about half the usual loop prices and several times less than other roof garden eating places. The girls have a choice of plate luncheons, consisting of meat with potatoes and gravy and bread and butter. Coffee, tea or milk is 5 cents extra. The pastry, unless unusually fancy, is not more than 10 cents. Salads are 15 cents or 20 cents with bread and butter. There is a large assortment of sandwiches, fruits and desserts. It is the aim of the committee to serve a complete luncheon of excellent food for 40 cents.

"The company hopes," reads a letter to the girls on the opening day from The Tribune, "that you will find the conduct of your own luncheon facilities an interesting and profitable venture and that you will be able to provide in these quarters less expensive and better food and more pleasant opportunity for recreation and association together."

Miss Garrow will call a meeting of The Tribune girls soon to elect officers for the present year. These officers will take over the work of Miss Garrow's committee and conduct the tearoom on the basis of any of the big Chicago clubs.

ARCHITECTS TO HAVE EXHIBIT AT ART INSTITUTE

Four Weeks Event to Open on March 8.

That a closer coördination of all the arts related to building will be brought about by the combined exhibit of architecture, landscape design, and applied arts to be held March 8 to April 3 at the Art institute, is the hope of Chicago architects, according to John A. Holabird of Holabird & Roche, chairman of the exhibition committee.

"It is the first concerted effort of architects," said Mr. Holabird, "to reach the painters, sculptors, and workers in applied arts whose product might enlarge the scope of building plans. There are a great many young painters and sculptors in Chicago—some of them students of art schools—who can do murals, decorative figures, and other work that has a definite place in architectural plans. It would be of great benefit to the architect to become familiar with their work, and at the same time it opens a new field to the artist.

Has Wide Range.

Classifications for entry range from the smallest detail of interior decoration to drawings or models for skyscrapers and municipal buildings, while landscape and garden designs will have a prominent place and will include sculptural decoration. The list of organizations participating in the showing includes the Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Architects, the Illinois Society of Architects, the Chicago Architectural club—partly a student body—and the Woman's National Farm and Garden association.

The latter organization will supervise the showing of landscape and garden design for which it is offering a nation-wide prize competition to students of landscape schools, artists and pupils of the public schools. Cash prizes range from $5 and $25 for the models of bird houses and chicken houses submitted by public school pupils, to $50 and $100 awarded for the design of a formal garden. Architect Howard Van Doren Shaw has supplied the problem from which the design for the formal garden is to be drawn.

Other Awards.

Other awards are the medal of honor given by the Illinois chapter of the American Institute of Architects for a building design, and the Joseph Bircen prize of $50 for the best design in color of an interior showing two walls with the appropriate use of space for paintings.

The joint exhibition committee, headed by Mr. Holabird, Paul F. Esser, and Hubert Burnham, includes Fred C. Stanton, Charles L. Morgan, Fred M. Hodgdon, John R. Fugard, Albert M. Saxe, John W. Root, and Earl H. Reed Jr. Mrs. Russell Tyson heads the farm and garden committee.

News of the Architects

Ralph H. Oliver, formerly at 234 South La Salle street, has reopened his office at 115 South Dearborn street, for the general practice of architecture.

The following architects have been elected members of the Illinois Society of Architects: Lee E. Olsen, Jules Urbain Jr., Leo S. Hirshfeld, Harold Smith, William Gauger, and Maurice V. Rissman.

Realtor Note

O. A. Rockhold, for the last twelve years manager of the mortgage loan department of the National Life Insurance company, has resigned to become vice president and treasurer on April 1 of the First National Bond and Mortgage Guaranty company.

GIVE REALTY TO CHILDREN.

Washington Porter and his wife Frances have presented their son Fred C. Porter, with the 40x70 property at the southeast corner of Clark and Chestnut, improved with a store and two flats. To their daughter, Pauline Muirhead, they gave the 25x115 at 112 South Halsted street, improved with a two story store.

PROSPECTS OF BIG CORN RECEIPTS DEPRESS GRAINS

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Prospects of receipts of more than 1,000 cars of corn at Chicago on Monday depressed values of that grain materially and other grains declined in sympathy. The close was well toward the inside, with corn off ¾c to 1¼c. March wheat gained 5c, while May lost 5c, oats lost ¾c, rye was off ¼c for May and 1¾c higher for July, and barley was up ½c for the day.

A lower range on all grains was established for the week, with losses on wheat 2¾c, corn 1⅝@2¼c, May leading; oats 1¼@1¾c, rye 2¼@2¾c, and barley 1c. Provision prices hardened, with net gains of 25c on pork, 12½@15c on lard, and 25@37½c on short ribs.

Germany After Wheat.

Wheat traders displayed less enthusiasm on the constructive side of the market, although there was considerable in the news to strengthen values. All rallies ran into selling orders, but prices were up nearly 2c for March at the top, touching $1.69¼c, or 11c over May, while there was active trading in selling March and buying May at 11c difference by leading holders of March contracts. The finish was within ⅛@¼c of the low point of the day.

Commission houses and local professionals led the selling, while those active in selling on the bulge turned buyers on the late break. On the whole, buying was of lighter volume, although a good business was on throughout the day.

Germany was in the market for wheat, taking 160,000 bu, and wanted more. Italy has bought 1,050,000 bu during the last few days, having enough ocean room which had to be filled. Greece took 23,000 brls of the better grades of flour. Foreign countries continued their buying of Argentine and Manchurian, paying $1.76 to $1.76½ for Manchurian wheat and $1.86 to $1.88¾ for the Argentine c. i. f. European ports. Nothing of consequence was heard of crop damage or green bugs.

Corn Under Pressure.

Corn was under pressure from local traders and longs, the former leading, and May declined from 70¼c to 68⅞c, with the cose around the inside. The market was supported at the last by buying against bids. Exporters were after corn, bidding 12c over Chicago May track Baltimore, with 200,000 bought in all positions. Receipts show a big increase for the week, being 6,463,000 bu at primary markets, or 800,000 bu more than last year. Expectations are for a liberal movement the next fifteen days.

Oats were bought around 44¾c and held there for a long time by Wagner, who later turned seller, depressing prices ¾c, yet the close was on a rally of ¼@⅜c. Buying against bids helped to sustain values at the last. The week's movement, although larger, was the smallest at this time in five years.

Buying of July rye carried prices up 1¾c, with the close at the top. May was neglected. Spot barley prices were 10@2c higher.

Provisions Score Gain.

Provisions were sold early by the Armour interests and bought by commission houses. Hogs were up to the highest point of the year, $10.75. At the close lard was 2½@5c higher and short ribs were 7½c higher. Omaha and St. Joseph, Mo., are shipping trainloads of live hogs to California and 80 carloads are going from South Dakota points weekly to the Puget Sound country. The freight rate to the latter section is 2½c a pound.

COTTON MARKETS

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Cotton declined to the lowest of the season and closed at practically the bottom, with losses of 32@53 points for the day. Liquidation and short selling, the latter with the south well represented on that side, and the buying power poor, were features. The most striking factor, however, was reports that 2,000 bales have been shipped back from Liverpool to New York to fill March sales. Trade reports were less favorable. CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Germany bought 160,000 bu wheat at the gulf, and was after more. Greece took 23,000 brls flour at the seaboard. The German purchase attracted much attention in view of the claims the previous day that it had taken 2,000,000 bu Argentine at 15¢20c under an American parity. Chicago handlers sold 200,000 bu corn to the seaboard for export.

Domestic shipping sales were 25,000 bu wheat, 40,000 bu corn, and 20,000 bu oats.

Premiums on red winter wheat at Chicago were 16@2c higher, while hard was firm. Local mills report a better flour demand and are taking wheat out of public elevators. Receipts 27 cars. St. Louis was unchanged. Kansas City 1@2c higher, and Omaha 2c higher.

Offerings of cash corn were excessive for a Saturday and the discount under the May on the No. 4 grades widened ½@1c, with No. 4 yellow and white selling at 7⅛@8½c under the future. Sample values were off 1@1¼c for the day. Receipts 306 cars. Outside markets were unsettled, being unchanged to 2c lower, with St. Louis leading the decline.

No. 2 white oats sold at ⅜c under the May, against ½c under the previous day. Sample values were ¼@½c lower, with receipts 95 cars.

WORLD'S·GRAIN·MARKET·NEWS·

Action of the wheat market yesterday was a disappointment to those who had expected a continuation of the upward movement in values so marked at the last on Friday. There was not the buying power in the market and the combination of depressing influences from abroad, together with indications of a larger movement from Manchuria, Australia, and Argentina from now on, unnerved buyers and led to a general selling movement, with a lowering of values. India and Australia combined will export over 5,500,000 bu of wheat for the week. Argentina is expected to ship 5,000,000 to 6,000,000 bu per week from now on. A good crop scare and a decided revival of the foreign buying is needed for another upturn in values.

The corn trade has become bearish in expectation of a larger movement, which has been developing for a week past, and is expected to last ten days to two weeks. Export business is not bringing help from the outside and farmers who have sold little corn so far this season are showing more disposition to sell. There is a local element which is aggressive on the selling side, while the outside buying power is weak.

Bids to the country for twenty day shipment, track gulf, were 15c over Chicago March for wheat.

Cables from London say British wheat requirements are fully covered for April-May, and that the British commission will not start to buy Argentine wheat until late in March.

"The statistical position of wheat shows little available so that the market will be sensitive to any unfavorable turn in the crop estimate," says Thomson-McKinnon. "The greater possibilities lie on the buying side. There is not likely to be any particular strength in either corn or oats under existing conditions."

It is expected that T. W. Koelin, feed dealer, who has been charged by customers with giving short weights, will be given a hearing by the Board of Trade directors next Tuesday. A special committee has investigated the case for several months.

Purchases of No. 5 corn were made at 9¼@9¾c under May, with No. 4 grades at 8½c under. No. 2 white oats on track were ⅝@¾c under May, and No. 3 whites 1¼c under.

Owing to continued mild weather, wheat held on farms around Wichita, Kas., is more or less affected by weevil and 10 per cent of the receipts there Friday were affected.

Around 150 cars of corn were received at Chicago yesterday, too late for Saturday's market and will be on sale Monday. Total arrivals that day are estimated at between 800 to 1,000 cars. Four of the leading railroads will have inspectors working Sunday.

"European wheat requirements are in our opinion governed largely by the state of their finances," said Charles Sincere & Co. "Anything that will tend to strengthen foreign exchange will at the same time open possibilities of more export business. It is more than likely that importers are disappointed with the wheat surplus in Argentina and Australia. Their recent purchases in the United States would indicate that they are not entirely independent of us."

GRAIN RECEIPTS LARGER

An increase in the movement of corn and oats to Chicago and primary markets, and a decrease in wheat, was a feature of the grain traffic last week. Loadings of grain on western railroads have more than doubled within the last two weeks. The big gains were on the Northwestern, Burlington, and Illinois Central. The Burlington is loading over 700 cars a day and the Illinois Central an average of better than 300 cars.

Aggregate receipts of corn at Chicago last week were 3,558,000 bu, an increase of 754,000 bu for the week, and of 1,642,000 bu over last year. Oat receipts were 1,660,000 bu, gaining 384,000 bu for the week and losing 946,000 bu from last year. Of wheat there were receipts of 301,000 bu, a loss of 24,000 bu for the week and of 209,000 bu from last year. In all, receipts were slightly below the average for this season.

Primary receipts of all grains were 16,573,000 bu, an increase of 1,200,000 bu for the week and 72,000 bu over last year, but were 1,730,000 bu. short of the average. Corn receipts were 6,463,000 bu, gaining 913,000 bu for the week and 800,000 bu over last year. In wheat there was 4,790,000 bu received, a drop of 659,000 bu for the week and an increase of 571,000 bu over last year, while in oats the aggregate was 3,870,000 bu, or 1,000,000 bu more than the previous week and 1,461,000 bu below last year's, making the poorest showing in over five years.

Shipments of grain east bound from Chicago aggregated 2,949,000 bu for the week, a loss of 55,000 bu from the previous week, and a gain of 689,000 bu over last year. Provisions decreased 14,350 tons for the week and were 3,000 tons short of last year's.

Central Illinois Public Service Net Decreases

The annual report of the Central Illinois Public Service company shows an increase of $561,406 in gross earnings in 1920 as compared with 1919, but because of increased operating costs and interest charges the net decreased $44,800. After charges and preferred dividends there was carried to surplus $60,103, bringing that item up to $339,735.

The income account for the year, with comparisons, follows:

Latin-American Trade of U. S. Increases 45%

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26.—Trade with Latin-America is increasing rapidly and now constitutes one-fourth of all the foreign commerce of the United States, said a statement issued today at the department of commerce. The trade in 1920 amounted to $8,378,185,567, against $2,332,723,978 in 1919, an increase of 45 per cent over any previous year. The value of exports increased 59 per cent and of imports 35 per cent. Forty-two per cent of the total trade last year was with Europe, the statement said, and 19 per cent with the far east. Exports to and imports from Canada constituted 12 per cent, while 2 per cent of the total was with Africa.

METAL MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Except for some further export business very little demand has been reported for copper during the last week, and the smaller producers have been shading the 13c level for spot and nearby shipments. Quotations today ranged from about 12¾c for spot and prompt electrolytic to 13@13¼c for second quarter positions. Iron was unchanged.

PRODUCE MARKETS

The butter market was in good condition, with centralized ½c higher. Fresh eggs advanced ¼c for shipping lots, 1c for standards, the latter being 35c for car lots, with fresh firsts 34@34½c. Receipts for the week were 88,889 cases, against 85,135 cases the previous week and 73,191 cases last year.

Prices of potatoes were unchanged at $1.20@1.30 per 100 lbs for northern round white stock. Receipts on Saturday were 45 cars, making 218 cars for the week, compared with 324 cars the previous week and 220 cars last year. There were 124 cars on team track.

Live poultry prices were unchanged on Saturday, with receipts lighter. Hens were 28½c, spring chickens 30c, stags, 28c, roosters 22c, ducks 16@36c, and geese 18@22c lb.

6% First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds

Can be purchased at a price

To Net 7% Interest

For a limited period and subject to prior sale, we offer 6% First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds at a price to yield 7% interest. In many cases the borrower has agreed to pay the normal federal income tax up to 4%.

Bonds purchased on this basis afford an opportunity for an even greater return, and with no sacrifice in security. If redeemed by the borrower before maturity they would possess a distinct advantage over the 7% coupon bond, because you would not only receive par, the accrued interest and the call bonus of about 2%, but would also further benefit by the difference between the purchase price and par.

Numbered in this list are many issues upon which the borrower has substantially reduced the loan through serial payments made, thus greatly increasing the margin of security. These bonds will especially appeal to the conservative investor, because they afford the maximum security and a 7% interest return is assured for the full period invested.

We invite you to call at our office for circulars describing issues—phone or write if more convenient

Moline Pressed Steel Company

The Moline Pressed Steel Company, organized in 1910, has made a phenomenal growth and has attained an enviable reputation in the design and manufacture of sheet metal specialties, shipping only in carload lots to large manufacturers and jobbers. Although running eleven hours a day, six days a week and eight hours on Sundays, it will be September 1st before the Company can begin on new and additional orders. Since January 1st it has been forced to refuse $300,000 of profitable orders.

First Mortgage 8% Sinking Fund Serial Gold Bonds

This bond issue—the Company's only funded indebtedness—is secured by a closed first mortgage on all the Company's property (valued at over two and one-half times amount of this issue) and all property hereafter acquired. The Company's net worth is over three and one-half times this issue. This well-secured bond is further strengthened by a sinking fund provision and serial maturities until 1928.

We recommend these bonds as a conservative investment opportunity.

Export orders for cattle from Scotland, England and Switzerland during the last week injected strength in the trade, the week's average price of good beef steers advancing 40c to highest point since the second week of January at $8.75.

All classes of cattle shared in the general advance, the increased demand from country feeders forcing the cheaper grades of steers 50c@$1.00 above a week ago. Feeders paid up to $9.00, while best fat beeves only reached $10.75, an unusually narrow range.

Hogs at New 1921 Peak.

The smallest hog receipts, barring last Christmas week, since the second week of November and the unusually good shipping demand were strengthening factors in the trade, with closing prices the highest since last December, and 90c@$1.00 above the previous Saturday.

The best lightweight hogs sold at the close of the week at $10.75, with traders confidently counting on $11.00 early the coming week. It is expected receipts, after a possible spurt in the near future, will dwindle to moderate totals.

Much smaller receipts of sheep and lambs and a broader local and outside demand for mutton forced the week's average price of sheep up $1.50, and the lamb average $1.65 above the previous week, with top lambs at $11.00.

Receipts for next Monday are estimated at 18,000 cattle, 50,000 hogs, and 22,000 sheep, against 13,174 cattle, 43,290 hogs, and 13,396 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 50,000 cattle, 170,000 hogs, and 75,000 sheep.

READING IRON CO. CUTS PRICES ON ITS PRODUCTS

Reading, Pa., Feb. 26.—[Special.]—At the annual election today of officers and directors of the Reading Iron company, one of the largest independents in the east, prices were cut substantially, effective March 1.

The company operates nine plants here, at Columbia, Pottstown, Birdsboro, and Danville.

The company announced a reduction of from $8 to $10 a ton on the selling price of tubular products. The price of cut nails and bar iron was reduced several weeks ago. These reductions are made with the hope they will bring in orders sufficient to run the plants at a better rate of production. Orders received during the last two months were the lowest in the history of the company, and unless new orders are received the outlook is not bright, it is declared.

OFFICIAL WEATHER FORECAST.

The official forecast for today and tomorrow and yesterday's table of records follow:

Ohio—Snow or rain and somewhat colder Sunday; Monday fair with slowly rising temperature.

· FINANCIAL·NOTES ·

The prices of Pennsylvania and other grades of crude oil were further reduced yesterday by the principal oil purchasing agencies. Pennsylvania crude was cut 25 cents a barrel to $3.00. Cabell was reduced to $1.86, Somerset to $1.65, and Somerset light to $1.80 a barrel, a reduction of 20 cents on these three grades a barrel. Ragland remained unchanged at $1.00 a barrel.

The directors of the Vivaudou company have decided to take no action on current dividends until sales reach more nearly a normal volume. Sales for January over December increased 100 per cent; February over January about 25 per cent. The company's quick assets exceed liabilities more than two and a half times. The finances are said to be in a satisfactory condition.

The Ann Arbor Railroad company has notified holders of its two year 6 per cent collateral gold notes, due May 1, 1921, amounting to $700,000, that payment will be anticipated on the basis of 8 per cent, or approximately 99.6 per cent and accrued interest, on presentation to the Empire Trust company on and after Feb. 28, 1921. The company has also repaid $100,000 of the loan from the War Finance corporation made to it in July, 1919. No refinancing was involved on these transactions.

Between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 in gold, $3,500,000 of which is consigned to the Equitable Trust company of New York, arrived yesterday from India on the United States shipping board steamship Nemaha.

The number of individual stockholders of the United States Steel corporation has passed the 100,000 mark, a goal at which the corporation was aiming prior to the twentieth anniversary, which will be celebrated in April. The exact number of stockholders Feb. 12 was 100,641. This represents an increase of almost 5,000 stockholders since the beginning of the year.

The Chicago federal reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ended Feb. 23, by 209 banks in 24 leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $774,541,000 compared with $892,021,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account amounted to $772,115,000 compared with $982,410,000 for the corresponding week of last year.

Rumors have been heard in the financial district that the sale of the property of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois company scheduled for March 1 may be postponed again because of differences which have arisen between bondholders regarding the price to be paid by the new company formed to take over the old. That there will be a long delay was not the tenor of the rumor, as it is desired to lift the property out of the hands of the court. Accompanying the rumor about the sale there was a good deal of guessing regarding the assessment which will be made on C. & E. I. preferred and common stocks, the amount ranging all the way from $15 to $30 a share.

Why People Die Too Young

Will you devote 4 minutes of your time to a plan that may add twenty years to your life?

Why is it that even though you are apparently in good health there are times when you have all sorts of aches and pains—a depressed feeling and off days?

Have you ever stopped to question—why?

It is simply a warning from nature. Perhaps you have unknowingly broken some of nature's laws.

It is possible by following certain simple little rules not only to enjoy a vigorous health but to prolong one's youthfulness 10 to 20 years and instead of dying at 60 or 70 you may live to a ripe old age of 85 or 90 years.

There Is No Sudden Death

Nature goes far in her desire to protect us. There are certain signs, which when we understand them, give us warning of serious trouble to come. By knowing what they are we can head off illness and be healthy and vigorous.

Used by Big Business Men

Among the thousands who use this simple plan are the officials of many of the country's largest institutions—such as American Tel. & Tel. Co., Armour & Co., Standard Oil company, Sears, Roebuck and Co., William Wrigley, Jr. Co. The members of the bureau are literally insuring active, vigorous health, with the practical certainty of adding twenty years to their lives. It's all in a simple little plan that requires only four minutes of your time a year—and the cost is so small it is within the reach of every one.

Send for Our Free Book

Mail coupon below. We will send you interesting book "Why People Die Too Young" together with full information about this plan—a plan that takes only four minutes of your time and may add twenty years to your life. Mail the coupon for the book now. It will be sent without cost or obligation.

RESERVE BANKS REFLECT SPRING CREDIT DEMAND

BY O. A. MATHER.

The advent of the spring demand for credit, chiefly for crop planting and to meet March settlements, is revealed in the weekly statements of the federal reserve banks. The reserve system as a whole again shows an expansion of loans and note circulation, the increase in the latter being the first this year. Thus, the reserve position is slightly less favorable than in the preceding week, being the first setback since the turn of the year.

This change is chiefly interesting because in all recent years a similar turn has come some time in February, with subsequent fairly continuous expansion of loans and notes and accompanying decline in reserve percentage. The present expansion has come rather later than usual. How far it will go will be a matter of close observation, as it will indicate to some degree the status of business and industry, as well as the capacity of agriculture to finance itself.

Loans Again Move Up.

The combined statement of the twelve federal reserve banks shows an increase in loans of $31,846,000, those on government obligations and those on commercial paper expanding $13,793,000 and $18,053,000 respectively. Bills bought increased $3,629,000, so that total bills on hand expanded $35,475,000. Total earnings assets increased $35,227,000. Gold reserve increased $7,661,000, but subsidiary currency declined $3,652,000, so that total reserves expanded $4,009,000. The member banks increased their reserves $2,164,000.

Federal reserve note circulation expanded $14,262,000. Gross deposits declined $7,760,000, although government deposits increased $1,468,000. The ratio of total reserves to net deposits and federal reserve note liabilities combined fell to 49.9 from 50.3 per cent in the preceding week, while the ratio of gold reserves to note circulation, after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposits, was 58.1, compared with 58.5 per cent. The combined ratio is about 7¾ per cent higher than a year ago, while loans are about $57,000,000 lower.

Money Flows to Country.

The statements of the New York and Chicago federal reserve banks indicate the flow of money to the country, both showing declines in gold reserves and increases in loans. The New York bank's gold reserve declined $12,511,750, and total reserves receded $13,873,342. Loans expanded $11,893,789, those on government obligations increasing $18,169,601, but those on commercial paper receding $6,275,812. Bills bought increased $12,549,013, so that total bills expanded $24,424,825. Total earning assets increased $24,751,802. Federal reserve note circulation expanded $4,392,100. Deposits remained about stationary.

The ratio of total reserves to net deposit and federal reserve note liabilities combined fell to 40.5 from 41.7 per cent in the preceding week. This ratio still remains higher than a fortnight ago.

Chicago Reserve Is Lower.

The statement of the Chicago federal reserve bank showed the second consecutive decline in reserve ratio, the changes of the last fortnight breaking the steady improvement registered for a number of preceding weeks. Loans expanded $18,237,978, those on government obligations receding $2,830,119, but those on commercial paper increasing $21,168,097. Bills bought increased slightly, making an increase in total bills of $19,260,442. Total earning assets expanded $19,077,442. The member banks increased their reserves $9,628,681.

Gold reserves declined $2,908,317 and total reserves receded $4,566,281. Gross deposits increased $9,080,481. Federal reserve note circulation increased $1,619,490. The ratio of total reserves to net deposits and federal reserve note liabilities combined fell to 50.2 from 51.9 per cent in the preceding week.

Clearing Banks' Reserve Up.

The statement of the New York clearing house banks made a slightly better showing. Excess reserves increased $2,618,610, now standing at $14,340,980. This was principally the result of a decline in demand deposits, of $24,233,000. Time deposits increased $3,749,000. Loans receded $2,516,000. The member banks' reserve in the reserve bank remained about stationary. United States deposits declined $10,058,000. The statement, showing actual condition, follows:

	Feb. 26	Feb 19
Excess reserve	$ 14,340,980	$ 11,722,370
Aggregate res.	514,429,000	514,850,000
Loans, etc....	4,998,634,000	5,001,150,000
Reserv. of member bks. in F. R. bank.	496,733,000	496,651,000
Net demand deposits	*3,774,604,000	3,798,837,000
Time deposits	234,690,000	230,941,000
Circulation	34,157,000	34,405,000

*After deducting $50,314,000 United States deposits, compared with $60,372,000 last week.

CHICAGO CURB STOCKS

The wekely review of F. M. Zeller & Co. follows:

The local unlisted market was generally firm. The majority of issues were quiet, active trading being confined to a few issues which showed advances for the week. Goodyear Tire & Rubber preferred sold up to 32, closing at 30½@31½, a net gain of 5 points. The common, however, was unchanged at 13@14. The motor stocks continued firm, Paige-Detroit advanced a point to sales at 20, and was wanted at this price, with offerings at 20¾ at the close. Lincoln was steady at 19½@20½, while Packard was somewhat easier at 11@11½. Stearns was traded in between 22½ and 23½.

The trend of the sugar issues was reversed, Holland-St. Louis declining to sales at 8, closing with stock offered at this price with buyers at 7½. Columbia also declined a point to 11¾@12½. Michigan was fractionally lower at 7¾@8¼.

The miscellaneous stocks continued comparatively inactive, sales in Butler Brothers ranging between 35 and 36 and closing at 35¼ bid, 35¾ asked. Kellogg Switchboard & Supply declined somewhat to 37 bid, 39 asked, but Inland Steel was an exception, improving to sales at 43. Emerson Brantingham preferred was unchanged at 35@37, and Moline Plow preferred was quiet at 38@42. McCord common was less active, sales ranging between 6½ and 7¼ and closing at 6¾ bid, 7¼ asked.

Public utility sales were as follows: American Light and Traction common sold up to 111, but reacted at the close to sales at 103; preferred sold at 80½@81½. Cities Service common was somewhat easier and closed at 241, after selling as high as 247; preferred was steady at 68¼@68¾. Commonwealth Power Railway & Light was neglected, being quoted at the close 13½ bid, 15 asked; preferred 34@35½. Northern States Power common continued in good demand and sold as high as 49½, stock being wanted at the close at 48, with offerings at 50. United Light & Railway issues were in fair demand and were quoted at the close 22 bid, 24 asked on the common, and 56½ bid, 57¼ asked on the preferred.

Do You Believe It?

Continuing our remarks of last Sunday, where we spoke of a "job for somebody" in reducing production costs, the point should be made that our work as engineers has to do with the physical aspects and arrangement of manufacturing plants, rather than their cost-keeping or accounting features.

Our observation in this physical field is that just ordinary bad judgment in locating buildings, extensions and equipment is responsible for a lot of unnecessary travel of materials, with consequent needless labor. And because these errors are ordinarily right under the eyes of men on the regular payroll from year to year, they fail to see the mistakes.

Naturally we don't claim to know all about every manufacturing industry, but we have seen and put into effect so many common sense ideas which have improved production in a great number of factories, that our engineers are keenly alert to see where improvements can profitably be made.

If the man who reads this believes what we say is true (and it is), he will want to learn how our service can be applied to his work.

STOP! READ!! THINK!!! ACT!!!!

¶ In these strenuous times, the wonderful service we render will be quickly recognized by thrifty buyers. We invade every field of commerce. The extent of our operations and the unique position we have gained by original—different—methods are briefly outlined on this page. Our greatest difficulty has always been to properly present to the public the nature of our business. Upon this depends the success or failure of this announcement to fully convey the importance of our company to you, in all your buying. So, read every word—here's a message of deep interest.

¶ For more than a quarter century we have "blazed the trail" to true bargain buying. Practically all of the world's great expositions—innumerable commercial plants, factories, railroads, industrial institutions and the material from great projects has been successfully dismantled and handled by us. And the benefits of these great undertakings have been uniformly distributed to the people of the nation.

¶ Today we are recognized as the leading buyers of dependable material and merchandise offered at forced sales. Our $10,000,000.00 "spot cash" buying power gives us the first pick and choice of the world's finest products. Our keen, posted buyers keep our mammoth warehouses filled to overflowing. An endless stream of supplies in every line continues to reach us with clock-like regularity—bought at huge price reductions. And we sell as we buy, bargains only—nothing but bargains—in material and merchandise of quality at unmatchable bargain prices. Familiarize yourself with our business in all its branches. Write for particulars upon anything you need.

¶ From a modest beginning we have outgrown the facilities of our gigantic 20 acre plant here in Chicago. Today our branch factories, plants and warehouses occupy a prominent position in America's leading cities and on the Isthmus of Panama. Our success is but the natural result of honest, fair, square public dealing with the support and patronage of thousands of satisfied buyers who are firmly bound to us by the service we render and the money we have saved for them.

¶ And now, we are better equipped than ever before to make substantial savings for you upon everything you need. Those familiar with these great "price wrecking sales" of ours will need no reminder of the benefits we offer. They will be quick to take advantage of our treasure stocks of bargains. You can safely follow the performance of millions who never think of buying anything until our vast stocks are consulted.

¶ Get acquainted with this great institution—America's cosmopolitan shopping center. Ask for any or all of our numerous free catalogues—they tell an interesting story of our achievements in the genuine bargains they contain. Take advantage of the many expert engineering services we render. Thirty great departments are waiting here to do your bidding. We offer an invaluable service to any individual or commercial plant. We are waiting to build, improve or furnish your home—construct your factory and equip it from end to end; to establish you in any field of production. Or better, visit our main headquarters here. Be our guest. You'll be amazed by the size and extent of our stocks.

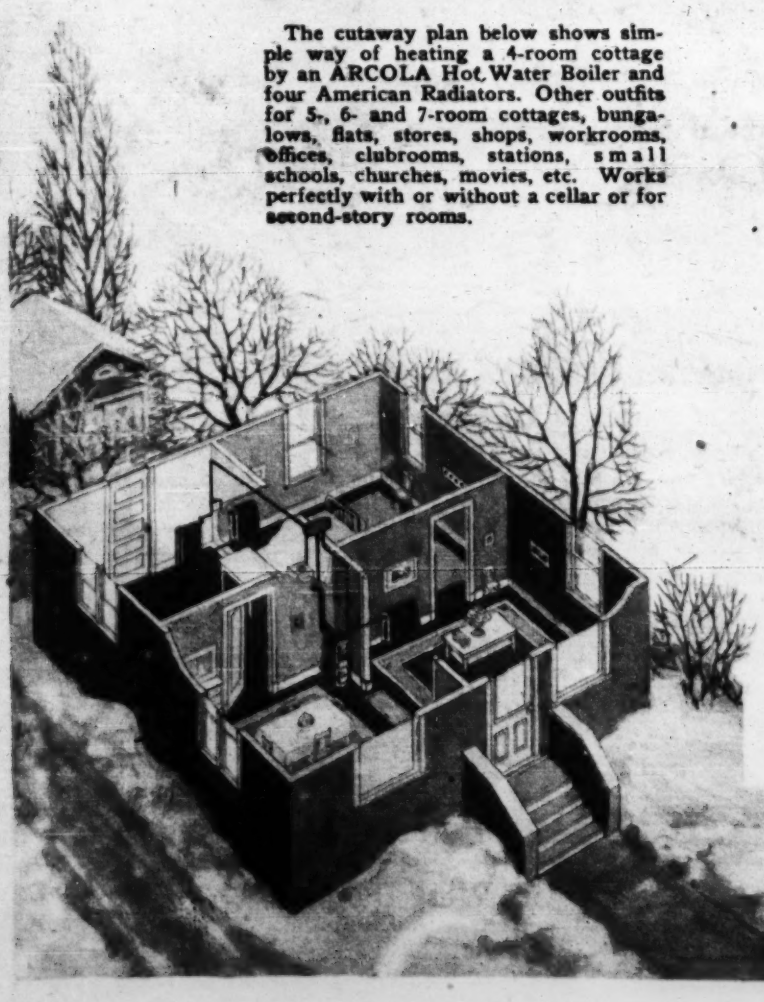
ARCOLA
Heating Outfits

"What a contrast between the old spotty heating and the healthful warmth which now fills our home! I am delighted with the big saving in coal—one fire does it all."

"My Dream of Comfort Came True"

The cutaway plan below shows simple way of heating a 4-room cottage by an ARCOLA Hot Water Boiler and four American Radiators. Other outfits for 5-, 6- and 7-room cottages, bungalows, flats, stores, shops, workrooms, offices, clubrooms, stations, small schools, churches, movies, etc. Works perfectly with or without a cellar or for second-story rooms.



Comfort for All

You, too, may enjoy the comfort, luxury and protection of Hot Water Heating. The low price of the Ideal-ARCOLA makes this outfit available for the smallest homes. Extravagant to be without this ideal comfort.

How It Works

The ARCOLA is especially designed for the small home. It may be placed in any room with a chimney connection; it circulates hot water through small pipes to AMERICAN Radiators, evenly warming all rooms. Thousands of families now enjoy the luxury of this economical hot water heat—equal in comfort to the First Mansion in the Land.

Hard or Soft Coal

Many an owner is using less coal to heat the entire home than was formerly required to heat one or two rooms. The cost of installation is moderate. Outlasts the building.

See the ARCOLA

You can see a complete Ideal-ARCOLA Heating Outfit, ready for use, in our public showrooms located in all large cities. Most of the heating contractors are provided with demonstrating outfits. Talk it over with the family and first thing tomorrow get an estimate for your old or new house. Put in any time, quickly and easily.

CHENEY SILKS

A dainty pastoral scene, printed on Cheney Crêpe, inspired the quaintness of a frock with a becoming fichu drapery, gracefully exaggerated cuffs, and a frivolous petticoat of Crêpe Chenette. Black velvet ribbon trims the cuffs and confines the fullness of the panniers.

FASHION'S LATEST CONCEIT

A FROCK that chooses a silk with an interestingly motivated design and then carries out the motif in developing its own lines is doing quite the latest and smartest thing—and will find among the new Cheney Silks many designs charmingly adaptable.

Stores with a reputation for fine merchandise will be quite sure to sell Cheney Silks, either by the yard or in garments ready to wear.

MAURICE B. FLYNN—"LEFTY"—et FAMILY are here displayed for your admiring consideration.

Mr. Flynn was at one time, not so long ago, half back for Yale with an enviable record. Then he left school, got married and everything, and recently joined the Goldwyn company at Los Angeles. "Going Some," the Rex Beach picture, was the last thing you saw him in, I think.

An amiable looking trio, aren't they? Mae Tinee.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN! Would you believe it? Look at those nobby, nifty footsies! In other words, look at those dogs! Behold that horse! And what he carries in his hand! Why all this?

Well—Mr. Chaplin has just been made a member of the Coronado, Cal., polo team. And what he displays is in honor of the election. Mae Tinee.

NICHOLAS II. shoveling snow in the park at Tsarskoe-Selo. Immediately after his forced abdication and imprisonment on what had been his own estate, the former czar went cheerfully about the business of devising ways to occupy his time. Daily work outdoors provided the principal solution—and incidentally a precedent for the ex-kaiser and his wood sawing in Holland.

THE EX-EMPRESS in her wheel chair busying herself with embroidery and, perhaps, thinking things over. When this picture was taken the rest of the family was in the midst of spading up the lawn and laying out a kitchen garden which, later on, produced a fine crop of vegetables. The others accepted their fate with apparent equanimity, but the czarina was less resigned.

Cuts, Sores, Boils, Burns

Heal in Quarter Usual Time

New antiseptic marvel discovered in war upsets old healing methods. Free trial proves it. Dozens of other uses.

The same wonderful antiseptic agent which healed war wounds, often in one-fourth the usual time, now serves the same purpose in home or factory. For cuts, sores, and burns, it gives the quickest healing ever known. To see why it conquered infection in the war when all old-standard antiseptics had failed, test it on a boil or carbuncle. Notice how it destroys the pus, ends the soreness, stops the trouble from spreading, and heals with amazing promptness.

Keep Kloria ready to use for injuries. It insures clean, sure, quick healing, and more positively than iodine, peroxide or any old-time antiseptic or ointment.

Kloria doesn't irritate, is soothing, pleasant, and absolutely safe, because not poisonous. Yet by scientific test it is over forty times more germ-destroying than carbolic acid.

Never before was there an antiseptic so healing, so effective in destroying germs, and with so many uses in every home.

It is the one antiseptic which destroys the germ cause of pyorrhea, usually ending gum soreness and bleeding in one week. For mouth-wash and gargle its superiority quickly proves itself. Notice how quickly it relieves sore throat and canker sores—how clean the mouth feels. Mark how it soothes sore, inflamed or itching skin. Apply it to almost any skin disease, eczema, or barber's itch, and watch the trouble fade away and disappear. For dandruff, simply wet the scalp with it. Scalp itching stops at once, and with just a few applications dandruff ends, yet it is as harmless as water to the hair. Harmless, yet far more effective than poisonous antiseptics for personal hygiene.

Dissolve a few Kloria Tablets in water and instantly you have, at a cost of a few cents, a large bottle of liquid antiseptic which is clean, colorless, stainless, and virtually odorless.

All druggists. 50c. Money refunded if not satisfied.

"Gets-It" for Corns

Got a corn? Why? Why tolerate such an annoyance? Why endure its ache and pain? Why wear extra large shoes to accommodate it? Why dabble with useless corn "remedies" and "cures?" Why risk infection by cutting and trimming it?

Simply apply two or three drops of "GETS-IT" and your corn stops aching—instantly and forever! Without burning or irritating the flesh it shrivels the corn right up. First the edges loosen, then the root lets go, and you can peel the whole corn off with your fingers. Costs but a trifle.

How Do You Choose a Suit?

DO YOU select one which is smart and becoming, or something which is called "fashion's latest creation"?

The latter way is a bit costly, for so often an untried fashion may last but a brief season. Your coats and suits really should be fashionable for as long as the material lasts, and they will be, if you use care in selecting them.

If, inside the collar of your coat or suit, there is the signature of the Wooltex Tailors, you may be perfectly confident that the style is one which will have lasting popularity. No other mode is ever approved by the Wooltex Style Studios.

The fabrics in Wooltex Tailor-mades and Knockabouts vary from the finest of serges and tricotines to delightful out-doorish tweeds, homespuns and others. The tailoring in these coats and suits distinguishes them from the ordinary ready made.

Ask the salesperson of Jerome & Co. for your copy of "The Tailored Woman" fashion magazine, or write us at Cleveland for it.

A "Stylish Stout" Corset Is Back of Many a Woman's Popularity!

Always the "art which conceals art" wins admiration. And in the art of corseting herself the stout or near-stout woman should refuse to be satisfied until she has achieved natural, young-looking lines.

"Stylish Stout" Corsets are the only corsets designed exclusively to achieve these lines.

They give grace and poise and such a slim appearance—often twenty pounds lighter in weight—that women are always amazed to find corsets with their wonder-working lines so very comfortable.

"Stylish Stout" Brassieres, too, are just as essential for a modish, slim appearance.

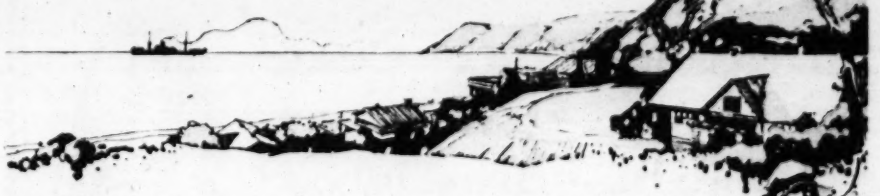
"We found roses like those of Castile"

The Puritan fathers planted corn above the graves of those who died in icy winter, lest Indians should learn how few remained alive.

Far differently, explorers casting anchor in the blue waters of San Diego bay found year-'round Springtime and a reminder of sunny Spain in the wild rose and the warm sea-breeze.

Today, a busy, modern, seaside city of 90,000 residents welcomes each year new thousands who find, as you will find, a healthful, out-of-door life all year, with new recreations for each new day.

Only a few hours of delightful travel will bring you to San Diego, California, the ideal home by the sea for those who have won a competence and still enjoy an active interest and participation in affairs.



You'll find hundreds of miles of splendid boulevards for motoring. A morning along the seashore, or luncheon among the mountains are among your daily opportunities. Your home will be somewhere among the miles of attractive residences that border the great flower-courted park and overlook bay and ocean, with golf, sea-bathing, water sports, and a multitude of other congenial diversions to be enjoyed in sunshine nearly every day throughout the year.

Health, happiness, and infinite opportunity for wholesome living every day in the year are the foundations of life at

GARDENING AT TSARSKOE-SELO—In May, 1917, the czar and his children undertook to transform the lawn of the once royal park into a vegetable garden. This photograph shows the preliminary digging well under way. The czar stands to the right of the center of the picture—the man with the light colored blouse and dark belt. By the shed at the left, holding a parasol, is the czarina, and near her are two of the grand duchesses. In the left center is Pierre Gilliard, the tutor of the czarevitch, who remained with the family to the end.

THE GRAND DUCHESSES ALL HELPED—Manual labor became a sort of mania with the interned family and, except in the case of the czarina, nobody worried in the least about maintaining the royal dignity. Here is the Grand Duchess Tatiana helping a soldier carry lumps of sod about the garden and obligingly pausing while the photographer took the picture.

"California Syrup of Figs"
Laxative for Children

Hurry, mother! A teaspoonful of "California" Syrup of Figs today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If your child is constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good "physic-laxative" is often all that is necessary.

Children love the "fruity" taste of genuine "California" Syrup of Figs, which has directions for babies and children printed on the bottle. Ask the druggist for "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup. Beware!

FAST FADELESS EASIEST TO USE

Beautify Your Hair with "DANDERINE"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

IF YOU care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy, or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually, why not now?

For want of one vital element your body begins to "burn itself up"

New knowledge of an important lack in many of our everyday foods

SCIENCE has made the startling discovery that if we do not get a proper supply of energy from our food, the body begins to feed on itself—to burn itself up. We now know that the lack of one vital element in food, called vitamine, keeps us from getting this needed energy.

Which of our common, everyday foods have it? Which lack it?

Around this tremendously interesting subject hundreds of actual feeding experiments were made. Scientists eagerly watched the seeming magic change from an almost dying condition to one of health and vigor as one animal after another was given the precious vitamine. When the vitamine was taken away they lost appetite and became actually starved.

In many of these experiments yeast was used as the richest known source of this life-giving vitamine. A number of foods, notably leafy vegetables, contain this vitamine. But it is of the greatest human significance to know that from many of our foods it has been removed by the process of manufacture or preparation.

That is why thousands of men and women today are adding Fleischmann's Yeast to their regular meals. They find it gives them a vigor and energy they never had before.

Yeast is assimilated in the body like any other food, and like any other food it must be taken over a period of time to be effective.

Eat Fleischmann's Yeast before or between meals, from 1 to 3 cakes a day. Spread it on toast or crackers, dissolve it in milk or fruit-juices, or eat it plain. If you are troubled with gas, dissolve yeast first in boiling water.

Place a standing order with your grocer for Fleischmann's Yeast, and get it fresh daily. Write for the free booklet, "The New Importance of Yeast in Diet." THE FLEISCHMANN COMPANY, Dept. 132-D, 701 Washington Street, New York, N. Y.

A food with health-building properties

In scientific tests of the therapeutic value of Fleischmann's Yeast in treating pimples, boils and constipation the doctors say: "In many of these cases which came under our observation the yeast treatment caused an improvement in the general physical condition of the patient, quite unassociated with the improvement of the symptoms associated with the particular disease in question."

To build up and maintain health, keeping the body resistant to disease, eat 1 to 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast a day—a part of your regular diet.

Helps the system eliminate waste

Fleischmann's Yeast helps the body get rid of waste matter, stimulates the appetite and helps digest the increased food we eat. Eat it over a period of time—a month or longer—and notice the difference.

Women Everywhere are using this beautiful La-may Vanity Box!

NOW you can use a face powder that cannot spill. The powder is in cake form, covered with porous cloth. You can drop it on the floor and the compact will be just as perfect for use. You wipe the puff on the cloth covering of the compact and the powder comes through as needed. You could powder your nose in the dark and you would not get too much powder, and you are sure not to spray your clothes with powder. This new, perfect way to use face powder was invented by the specialist who perfected the famous, harmless La-may Powder. There are two qualities of packages. Both are very flat and convenient to carry. One box with compact and puff sells for fifty cents. The other, a German Silver Gold Plated Vanity Box with hinged cover and two-inch mirror, containing compact and flat lamb's wool puff, sells for one dollar and fifty cents. This beautiful La-may Vanity Box looks like solid gold and will not tarnish. It will last a lifetime. The La-may compact in the La-may Vanity Box contains enough pure La-may Powder to last for generous use for about two months. When La-may Vanity Box is empty you refill it by asking your dealer for a fifty-cent La-may compact. The compact and puff from the fifty-cent package is made to fit the La-may Vanity Box. Ask your face powder dealer to show you this splendid new idea. Remember, here, at last, is an entirely new idea in face powder. The powder cannot spill and it comes out so evenly you could powder your face in the dark. La-may Face Powder is also sold in the loose form for thirty-five cents and sixty cents. La-may is guaranteed absolutely pure and harmless. Because it is pure, and because it stays on so well, it is now used by over a million American women. If your dealer refuses to get you a La-may Vanity Box, you may order by mail from Herbert Roystone, 16 East 18th St., New York City. There is also a delightful La-may Talcum that sells in a beautiful large package for only thirty cents.

"FOR HE'S A JOLLY GOOD FELLOW"

by MAY EDGINTON

A Moral Tale for Brides and Bachelors, and Men Who Forget to Go Home

Eight o'clock found Cartier hooking up the back of the pink frock and praising a little deliriously the white softness of her neck.

THE Good Fellow put his latchkey into his door as the clocks struck twelve. Throwing off his overcoat in the tiny hall, he went on into a drawing-room almost as tiny. There, although the clocks had said twelve with bedtime insistence, Dorothy waited for him, wasting the glories of a pink silk trousseau frock all alone on his slippers, still warming before the fire. Over the arm of his empty chair, pulled up also to the blaze, hung the old smoking jacket that he donned for evenings at home. It and the slippers somehow struck an unobtrusive note of faithful pathos repeated by the slim dejected figure in pink.

Cartier, big and hearty, a little flushed and exhilarated by Mostyn's very good dinner, only faintly heard the note. It struck rather pleasantly than otherwise on his consciousness; it was not a bad thing to have this pretty picture of domestic fidelity to come home to after an evening of his old bachelor freedom.

She jumped up gladly, and ran to him, seizing the lapels of his coat in her two hands like an eager child while he kissed the soft cheek she held up.

"A nice evening, Stephen?"

"First rate." He sat down, stretching out his feet to the fire, with Dorothy perched on the arm of his chair. "Mostyn's dinner, you know, tonight. Mostyn does us very well—was always the rich member amongst us six poor dogs——"

"You're not poor?" she murmured, her pink cheek against his.

He laughed, an indulgent, well satisfied laugh.

"I've been poorer. So were we all when we founded the Beggars, years ago. Lord! What feeds we used to give! Even old Mossey's first one, I remember—vegetable soup and some messes we ate, like you do eat when you're young and hungry. But we've always fed each other ever since, and I hope always shall——"

Her round face fell a little.

"You mean you—you'll always go to these dinners three times a week, and—and——"

He put a careless arm round her.

"You aren't going to be Mrs. Henpeck, dearest?"

"Henpeck!" she cried aggrievedly. "Henpeck!"

A tiny quiver puckered the corners of the soft lips. She was very young, very pretty, very gregarious, and, since her marriage, very lonely, for after the first week or two Cartier had resumed all the old habits and occupations of his bachelorhood. He was a rising man in the ranks of journalism and his work and his club took him from home most of the day. The evenings to which she looked forward after solitary hours seemed always swallowed up for weeks ahead in a rush of multitudinous engagements. She was a little country-bred girl, entirely ignorant of London, and was beginning to feel bewildered and more than a little aggrieved at the new waters into which he had plunged her and told her to swim alone. But—"Henpeck?" "Henpeck!" Never let it be said! Certainly not "henpeck!"

"I—I—it's been sort of—extra lonely today," she faltered, hating "Mossy" of the Beggars, who had "done" Stephen so well tonight.

"I meant to have been home earlier," he said, looking a little guilty. "But—well, one can't leave the fellows without a better excuse than bedtime——"

"There's me!" said Dorothy.

"O! you! he laughed. "You're only on sufferance, darling, and I don't obtrude your existence, you know. The Beggars broke one of their strictest rules when they allowed me to keep my membership after I married, and a tabooed subject at our feeds is 'women'! 'Extra lonely,' have you been? Well, now——"

She waited, looking forlorn.

"Well, now," he said, "couldn't you have asked Mrs. Pettigrew in or trotted up to her!—" Mrs. Pettigrew was the occupant of the flat above them, and absolutely young Mrs. Cartier's only London acquaintance—"and—and—had a gossip, or—er—helped her make the baby's clothes—or something? You might have gone out to tea together."

"I didn't want to go out with Mrs. Pettigrew," she answered, "and even if I had, she went out with her husband this afternoon."

"O, Pettigrew is a model Benedick, I grant you!" said Cartier, a little sulky. "And see here, dear, I think it is time we turned in, isn't it?" He stood up. "I'm abominably sleepy, and you're quite annoyed at having married a busy man who hasn't time to make love to you at all hours of the day—though he'd like to"—her reproachful face drew from him the concession. "You've been sitting up for me, and you're tired, little country girl. Go to bed. I'll just have a pipe here by this jolly fire you've kept, and—er—we mustn't let you feel 'extra lonely' again——"

"Stephen, dear!" she murmured.

"If we can help it," he added hastily. "You know what—er—what a rush I have—and I told you all about the 'Beggars' when we were engaged, you remember, and what jolly good chaps they all are, and—and—how we've stuck by one another for years. But we must try to arrange some little dissipation together soon—I don't quite know when——" She was waiting expectant. "There's the football dinner tomorrow, at my old Streatham club, and a billiard handicap I can't very well miss the next night, but——"

"There's always something," she said subduedly. She went slowly to the door, and turned: "My birthday the end of next week, Stephen. Couldn't we——"

He hesitated. "Darcy's feed that night. I'm afraid, dear. Told you who Darcy is, haven't I? But we'll see. Don't worry, Dorothy——"

"I didn't mean to," she said, and went out.

He sat down again and lighted a pipe, while his mind roved pleasantly over the events of the evening. They had all been there, all six "Beggars," at Mostyn's rooms, and the dinner had been a good one. There was Mostyn, the father of the little society, himself, Pigott, Darcy, Cleaver, and Brooking, the youngest member, Brooking, of loose talk, and, they said, looser morals, but the best of good fellows, from whom life had crushed any petty squeamishness. So were they all the best of good fellows, all men of budding, worldly prosperity now, bachelors, cynics of circumstance, perhaps, but capital company.

There had been some good stories told—Cartier's lips curled over them yet. The little society had formed, years ago, through the chance meeting of two or three nearly out-at-elbows boys who discovered that they had all been educated at the same school—obscure—in the Midlands. They christened it the "Beggars" for obvious reasons, and each member dined the others once a fortnight in his rooms if he had a plurality, in a restaurant if not. There were six of them now, and they had left the early struggles behind, but they still banded together with marvelous regularity. When Cartier returned from a Devonshire holiday with a little country-bred wife they broke Rule No. 1—there were three—and allowed him to retain his membership on condition of his still adhering to the other two, one of which was to attend their, and give his own, dinners in due course—the other, that the one tabooed subject thereat was still "women." Cartier, who had married the least exacting of her sex, pledged his adherence light-heartedly. Wherefore little Dorothy wept many secret tears, which she wiped ashamedly away; where-

LOVE AT SECOND SIGHT

by Jack Lait

fore she began to sigh for the farm in Devonshire, wherefore one or two of the cynical bachelors who formed the "Beggars" found themselves wondering a little what sort of a woman—or angel—Cartier had married; wherefore Louis Brooking, who possessed a turn that amounted to talent for intrigue of the grosser sort, behind a face that heaven had apparently given him to facilitate it, swore to himself that he would go and see.

It had become a habit during these two months to put the slippers and old smoking jacket by his chair at the fire, so Cartier's wife brought them as usual and arranged them with pretty devotion.

Her husband had kissed her and gone to the football dinner at Streatham, and she had donned the pink frock and settled down to her lonely evening. He had brought her a book when he came home, and glowed with the conscious virtue of the thoughtful man who had done his duty. She loved his thoughtfulness, though she ached for his companionship more than for a dozen presents, and she sat down by the fire and opened the book upon her knee.

But it was a Devonshire story.

She read two pages through swimming tears. She had never been lonely on the Devonshire farm for all her twenty-two years. The book slipped down on the hearth rug, and she laid her face on her arms and cried.

There is a drawing by Dana Gibson of a solitary woman sitting, her head bowed, her face hidden. The empty chair is drawn up to the fire and the slippers warming before it, and underneath the artist has written: "For he's a Jolly Good Fellow." That is all.

The woman, the slippers, the empty chair, the brief inscription, tell the whole story—the story Dorothy and her tears told to Louis Brooking when, no answer coming to his ring, he pushed open the outer door of the flat, went softly through the tiny hall, and, a sob guiding him, on to the drawing-room.

He stood a moment on the threshold, looking in, unperceived. So this was Cartier's neglected wife, this sobbing girl in pink. The Gibson picture occurred to him briefly. He could not see her face, only the top of the bent brown head, and the slim shoulders heaving. He hesitated barely the fraction of a second, never doubting his reception. His vanity and his experience were equal to the idea that he knew women.

"Mrs. Cartier——?"

She looked up—saw him—sprang up, frightened, breathless, speechless. He came quickly forward from the doorway, his dark eyes on her flushed face.

"You are Mrs. Cartier? I am awfully distressed, of course. Please send me away——"

He added, after a moment's pause, during which he appeared to be deferentially awaiting her dismissal:

"But I am a friend of your husband's—Brooking, you know——"

"O! I—I—k-know," she said. There were catches in her breath like a grieving child's. "I know, of c-c-course. No, d-d-don't go away, p-p-please. Stephen will be s-s-s s-s-sorry to have missed you——" She put out a small hand.

Brooking smiled, took both hands, and kept them a moment.

"But you are in trouble," he said. There was so much of the sympathy that she longed for in his voice. She checked her tears with a determined effort, and looked up at him while he held her hands in a gentle grasp, with a grateful sense of confidence and comfort.

"Not exactly, but——"

"But you are," he contradicted gently.

Her lips began to quiver again.

"I am very—foolish, Mr. B-B-Brooking—"

"You are not foolish at all," said Louis. "You are lonely."

She flushed with surprise at his comprehension.

"Lonely, and horribly bored all by yourself. Isn't that it? And Stephen has left you while he has gone to the club—"

"No—no!" she faltered, in hasty excuse. "A football dinner—"

"A football dinner!" said Brooking. He allowed a certain amount of indignation in his fine eyes and flexible voice. "A football dinner! And you are lonely, of course. May I say how glad I am that I happened to drop in—"

A pause.

"I—I am—very glad, too," said Dorothy.

"Then may I sit down?" Brooking said.

She did not know how it was that the evening seemed to have taken to itself wings and fled away.

Brooking knew, because he had juggled similarly with Time frequently before. After the first five minutes, during which loyalty to Stephen had struggled with an overmastering desire for sympathy from any one, they had talked absolutely confidentially. Her tears were dried. Yes, she had been lonely—very, very lonely.

He said hotly that it was a shameful thing for any man—then apologized for an indiscretion almost committed in the righteous heat of indignation.

Shyly she thought this very quixotic.

He asked, feeling his ground a little, for she was not the type of woman with whom he was accustomed to conduct intrigues, that he might stay an hour or so, while away her dull evening, perhaps, of course in the hope of seeing Stephen.

She said, a little dolefully, that she was sure Stephen would be late.

"Are you not expecting him in early?" he asked, and looked at the coat and slippers by the fire.

Then he told her of the Gibson picture.

"I haven't seen it," she said.

"They print it on postcards," said Brooking. "I will get one and send it to you. Then you will see what you looked like when I came in an hour ago. Have we really known each other an hour? But you mustn't show the postcard to Stephen."

She laughed with him over this.

"I used to collect postcards," she told him, naively, "before I was married. I had nearly five hundred in my album. Stephen laughed at me and said he thought the craze died with Queen Anne, and that album-making was an exploded industry."

"I shall buy an album to hold a thousand for you," said Brooking, softly, looking at her with steady, dark eyes, "and send you postcards every day until it is filled—postcards you mustn't show to Stephen."

She laughed again, but a little nervously, and with a quickened heart-beat under his deliberate scrutiny.

"I—I show him most things," she said.

Again a pause.

She looked at Brooking, and he smiled at her. Something indefinable in the dark, clean-shaved, almost ascetic, face set her heart thumping again quite madly. Her brown eyes widened.

"My dear child!" said Brooking, "but you mustn't expect Stephen to be so expansive."

"Wh—why—?" she began.

"Your confidence is absolutely charming," said Brooking.

He had given her something to think about, and he knew it, but he did not want the contemplation of his half-suggestions to fill her mind just then. He led her on to talk of many things. He heard all about the home in Devonshire, and the garden and the poultry. He told her he loved Devonshire, and she expanded under his interest like a flower in the sun. He heard how Stephen had gone down for a holiday and simply swept her up, and brought her back with him to London. He understood how splendid she thought her husband.

They touched again, then, on her loneliness, and she said she hated London. He said, looking at her, something about Devonshire girls that she hardly understood, except that it was, somehow, a tribute to her own prettiness. Presently he helped her make the coffee she insisted on giving him, and at half-past ten stood up to go.

She walked with him to the door. The pink frock fitted her svelte young figure like a glove, and trailed over the carpet. The face she lifted as she shook hands with him was flushed and alight with excitement and laughter. There were charming dimples in her round cheeks.

"Good-bye," she said. "Stephen will be sorry to have miss—"

She stopped. Brooking held her hand, smiling a little in a way that just curled up the corners of his fine lips. A very demon of suggestion, of mockery, of mischief, of—she hardly knew what—stared from his dark eyes into her suddenly arrested startled ones.

"Ah! Stephen!" he repeated. So—you are going to tell him of this—impertinent invasion—of mine?"

She gasped a little.

"What do you mean?"

"Don't you like secrets?" he asked.

"I don't understand," said Dorothy, faintly.

"My dear Mrs. Cartier," said Brooking, "that is the correct reply, correctly made. Having administered that small sop to the conventions"—he saw he was still bewildering her, though she was suddenly scarlet—"can't we make a little compact together? Such a harmless compact—two lonely people trying to form a mutual benefit society just to themselves. Why bring Stephen in at all? Stephen with his clubs, and his old pals, and his football dinners—"

"But—but—but—" she stammered. "You—you—came—on purpose to see him tonight."

"I knew he was out," said Brooking, softly, his steady eyes meeting hers. "Good-night. I came to see you. Good-night."

The flat was in darkness when Cartier came home from Streatham. He switched on the light, stumbled, nevertheless, over an apparently very superfluous chair, swore at it softly but heartily in a somewhat thickened voice, and felt a little glad that Dorothy had evidently gone to bed. No doubt, however, she was still awake, listening for him to come in, and ready to retail her own small evening news and to hear his. He went on into the bedroom, but she lay, like a pretty child, her brown hair tumbled over the pillow, asleep.

The Gibson postcard came by the second post the next morning—after Stephen had gone out—enclosed in such a letter as Brooking knew very perfectly how to write. It brought a little excitement into the dull day—the excitement of a secret—for she had not told Stephen. She remembered resentfully that he had "his clubs, and his old pals, and his football dinners" as enlivening factors, while she had only one small secret. So she cherished it, together with the growing resentment.

That evening was the evening of the billiard match of which Cartier had spoken. After he had dressed, and left her again, however, she was not dull. She put on her prettiest frock for her hoped-for visitor. When Brooking rang she ran to let him in, with a gay greeting as to an old friend.

She looked alluringly pretty—and he saw at a glance that she had not told Stephen.

The hours flew. She began to take a vivid yet half-shy interest in the man himself, his handsome personality, the inflections of a voice that said much more than his lips uttered, his savoir faire, his quick sympathy, above all his absolute and wonderful understanding. She did not know that all her story was written plainly in her candid face and innocent eyes for the most indifferent physiognomist to read.

Louis Brooking was no indifferent physiognomist.

During the evening he spoke of himself, his work, a destined three months' travel, for which he was to depart at the end of the next week. She realized that he had written books, that she, Dorothy, of the little Devonshire farm, talked and laughed with a Successful Author. She had an ingenuous awe for all in the world of literature. She used to wax breathless over Stephen—now—

He read the impression he was making in the open book of her mind. Presently he recurred again to next week's departure.

"But how delightful for you!" she said, sorrowfully.

He knew the thought that had crossed her mind—she already felt she would miss him.

"Delightful?" he repeated, reflectively. "Delightful for me?" He let his eyes rest on her face. "Yes, I had mapped it out with great pleasure only a few weeks ago. And now—I'm sorry I'm going."

There was no mistaking the implication. She blushed pleasurably.

"Because I'm leaving my new little—friend." Brooking put a hand on hers, his grave eyes studying her. "It seems a year ago since I came into this room and first saw you—yet it was only last night. I wonder if it is because our souls—our souls that are above the petty trammels of convention—meeting, sprang at once to such friendship as might have taken months to ripen? Or was it that today seemed so long? One wonders. Have you ever felt that?"

No, she had not.

"Till now?" he supplemented, as if stating an incontrovertible fact, rather than making a suggestion.

Dorothy accepted it without controversy, owning that today had been extra long, and that this wonderful friendship—she felt so honored by Louis Brooking's friendship—had certainly progressed with wonderful strides.

"We must see as much as we can of each other in the week that is left to us," said Brooking. Put thus, the thing appealed to her as nearly pathetic. "You will let me drop in as often as I can, and cheer up your lonely evenings, and you'll talk to me as you'd talk to that foolish husband of yours, if he'd only properly realize his astounding luck—his astounding luck! I realize mine very fully, you know that, don't you—dear? You don't mind my calling you dear, do you? Because we're going to be good friends—it's only that we haven't fuddled away weeks and months on preliminaries—good friends, you and I—and of course, I'm quite an old one of Stephen's."

He timed his good-night carefully to forestall the finishing of that billiard match. Dorothy voiced no regrets for Stephen. They shared the secret. It was a dear little conspiracy.

Brooking gave himself a week.

That week had taught him to covet Stephen Cartier's wife, but he was not going to postpone his eastern tour, hence the time limit, which he set with his usual method in ces affaires, without the smallest doubt of himself or her.

On Thursday night he excused himself from a "Beggars'" dinner on the ground of business preparations for his forthcoming departure. Eight o'clock found him at the Cartier's flat.

Dorothy sat in the drawing-room alone and in tears.

He realized at once that this was his moment. He seldom found himself wrong in the choice of his moments. He went forward and took her in his arms.

"My darling," he said for the first time. "Tell me. Whatever it is, let me share it."

She sobbed on his shoulder.

"How c-c-can we s-s-share it when it's y-y-your g-g-going away?"

Undoubtedly the moment—and the opening! Over the bowed head Brooking smiled to himself.

"Just the thing, dear, we can share, if you're brave enough, as I'm sure you are. Just the one thing above all others I would have us share. Don't you understand"—he spoke very softly—"how I love you? How you've taught me to love you during this week, which has held as much for us as a year of cold, conventional acquaintance holds for cold, conventional people? We're not cold, not conventional, neither you nor I. We love each other."

She was suddenly, terribly frightened—tried to struggle away.

"We do—we do!" he said, passionately, holding her. "Look at me and deny it, Dorothy, if you can. Don't you love me?"

"I—I don't know!" she gasped.

"You do." Brooking kissed her. "And if you don't, I can teach you. I think I've taught you more than Stephen already. Don't cry. Don't struggle. Can't you trust me?"

"Y-y-yes," she whispered, faintly.

"You know it," he said, very low. "You know it. You want to come. You must come. I can't leave you—won't leave you—to Stephen. How can I? Didn't you tell me it was your birthday tomorrow? And he's going out, and leaving you, as he always does? I couldn't think of you so; I want to share the birthday; I want to make all your life"—momentarily he was really swayed out of all prudence as to time limits—"like a birthday. I want to take you with me to the east, and show you things you've never dreamed of. Sit down," he put her into a chair and knelt beside her, "while I talk to you. Don't cry. Only listen——"

"I c-c-couldn't!" she said, sobbing breathlessly.

"You could!" said Brooking. "You can! You will, darling! You are going to promise me——"

The week had been sufficient.

. . . . . .

It was Darcy's feed.

When Cartier went in four Beggars greeted him a little constrainedly. He did not notice their sudden cessation of talk, nor the constraint, nor their furtive glances at one another. He went over to the fire and stood with his back to it, on Darcy's hearthrug, and dropped a few remarks in his usual careless manner.

"So Brooking's off tonight? Missed all our gatherums for a week, hasn't he? What? Pleaded off on business, I know, but I thought Brooking was one of the idle rich. Lucky chap! Dunno what business——"

Some silences can be felt. They arrest. This one suddenly arrested Cartier, staring a little.

"Purely—amorous, I believe," said Mostyn, slowly, breaking it. A murmur went round.

"Oh, well," said Cartier, with a laugh, "I suppose Brooking's beastly concerns are his own."

The murmur swelled again.

"What?" he asked, staring.

They looked at each other.

"Your night, Darcy," said Mostyn. "You tell him."

Three Beggars mentally applauded casting from them the ungracious office. They repeated as one man.

"Your night, Darcy. You tell him."

But a man's friends are slow to show him the defalcations of his nearest and dearest, for fear of losing his friendship. They stand by to watch while the blow falls, and after it cluster round to proffer sympathy. Whereby they keep his friendship and earn an additional gratitude.

ter. One of them, for the moment, was his enemy, against whom he had been plotting as he sat in there alone. At sight of the other two a furrow appeared in his brow, for the first thought was that the thing which he feared in respect of them had hap-

"Where?" the judge demanded.

But Ted avoided that question, saying: "It seems there was a girl buried up at Stony Cove and somebody thinks it's Katey. The way to settle that is to look at the girl. It can be arranged through the police or sheriff or somebody. I suppose it's only a fact room, his lips working together. "Good Lord! I know——" he exclaimed again, but again he did not finish the sentence. Instead, having reached the other wall, he turned exactly and paced back.

Judge Crane, Danforth, and Peggy waited that kind, no doubt, ought to be pitied and put in a hospital for treatment. But you never can tell what they'll do. Probably they can't tell themselves. As long as they're at large they've got to be looked out for.

"You've heard my father say Ted killed are limits. You've got to draw the line somewhere. This business of Katey, now—I did it for my wife and I'd do it again; but it really troubles me a lot. As a man gets older he don't want messes of that kind on his mind."

He stopped his pacing a moment, thoughtfully. "I've had an idea about this Katey business, too. It seemed safe enough, at the time. But we did go and stick the poor little maid under ground without her day in court—no chance to tell her little story and ask for justice. I've had an idea about that—sort of looks like she was getting back at us, you see; and I wouldn't be the one to say hadn't a right to—I'm a pretty tough old man; but you've got to draw the line somewhere. There are things a white man mustn't do."

He moved toward his son and looked down at him. "Killing a man's one of them, Dan. I know, you, son; probably I'm built more or less that reckless way myself. But I tell you, some things won't do. You've got to draw the line."

Danforth at once replied rationally, "No doubt you're right, father. You must certainly draw the line somewhere. No doubt you're right." But that reasonableness was only on the surface; underneath the lava lay molten.

"We'll try to find the way out of it," the judge went on. "Probably we can send him to Russia. But you keep yourself in hand, Dan."

"Well, I'll try to, father," Danforth replied, rationally.

Judge Crane regarded him a moment, felt reassured, and turned to another phase of the subject, for which the juncture seemed propitious:

"As it stands now, I don't see as you could gain anything by keeping that body up there."

"No, I don't see that I could, either," Danforth replied, for he now had a different idea of Ted Pennell.

"I want to get that disposed of," the judge urged; "We may as well."

"I can see Eastman—Cordwainer's man—and hear what he has to suggest," Danforth answered; but, he was hardly, properly speaking, thinking about that at all. To him that point had ceased to be important; his mind was really occupied with other things. Nevertheless, perfunctorily, he discussed it with his father for some time, finally saying, rather absently:

"Well, I'll get hold of Eastman and see what he has to say."

With that he left the judge's study—his mind occupied with the other things.

It had been perhaps twenty or thirty minutes since Peggy left the judge's study. Danforth walked to the stairs and started down them—the errand to Eastman vaguely in his mind—and when, his hand on the bannister, he had got down far enough to have a clear view of the hall on the main floor, he saw Ted and Peggy there.

Ted had put on a rough jacket over his thin coat, for a high south wind was blowing, so that one who intended to drive needed a wrap, and a cap such as he commonly wore in his machine. Peggy was slipping on a long coat. Both of them had an eager air. Apparently, they were on the point of leaving the house together; presumably, judging by their costumes, on the point of going away together in a car.

So apparently nothing would answer—nothing would save her! Hardy half an hour ago she had turned pale and gasped when he told her Ted was not to be trusted—and why, only half an hour ago she had promised him not to go away alone with Ted. Yet there she was, hastily putting on a cloak, apparently eager to be off.

Peggy glanced up then and saw Danforth standing on the stairs—saw his glaring face, and at that evidently she remembered, for the motion of her hands and body suddenly ceased, as though, swift as a lightning stroke, she had been frozen in her tracks. Her lips parted.

Then Danforth moved again, going on down the stairs, and as he reached the bottom he saw Ted's long, big headed yellow car roll up to the west door of the house. Unquestionably they had been going away together. Nothing would answer! Nothing would make her understand!

FOR HE'S A JOLLY GOOD FELLOW

"Damn it, you fellows!" said Darcy. "I can't!"

"Then I will," said Mostyn. "We were breaking a club rule when you came in, Cartier—talking of a woman——"

The four well-known faces were looking at him strangely. A sudden prescience of evil had fallen upon him, masking his ruddy face in an unusual pallor. It gripped him. He spoke hoarsely.

"You—you're playing a confoundedly silly farce, you chaps——"

"Of a woman," said Mostyn, steadily, "your wife——"

"I think," Cartier said, instantly, "that you have not the honor of knowing her."

They looked at each other again.

"—and Brooking," Mostyn added.

After the silence that fell Cartier said, almost in a whisper.

"They must not be mentioned in the same breath."

The vision of little Dorothy was before him.

"I—I should not permit so much as—as—their acquaintance——"

"You left her too much alone," said Mostyn, moved from his celibate cynicism. "Too much alone, and—and you know Brooking——"

Very well he knew Brooking. He began to see them all—four jolly good fellows—through red. His clenched fists bulged in his trousers pockets.

Mostyn went on hurriedly.

"You know Brooking. All this week he—we—we—know where he's spent his evenings. But it was only today that—that—that Darcy here suspected—he—they—might go—tonight. I—I'd rather not say it, Stephen—rather not say it."

"You've taken a damn long time," said Cartier, "a damn long time, friends of mine, to tell me this——"

"It was a—a delicate matter," Mostyn began.

Cartier stood before them staring, shaking. They turned their eyes from his terrible face.

"Curse your delicacy!" he foamed. "Curse your delicacy! Lies! Lies! Lies, I tell you! She and Brooking! God! Left her too much alone? God forgive me! I—I—I—yes, but I tell you the thing's impossible! You don't know her—her purity, her flawlessness, unassailable. But that I've left her to—to unclean beasts like Brooking! Yet I tell you it's a lie, and I'll prove it to you here tonight——"

"Where are you going?" they cried out, afraid for him.

He was at the door.

"Home——"

"And whatever you find, or don't find there," said Mostyn, "I believe'll be your fault, Cartier."

"I'm going to prove it to you, curse you!" Cartier raged. "Prove it to you that you're wrong. Going to make you eat your words, all of you! I tell you I know her—know her above this thing—as the angels in Heaven—I'll show it to you, tonight!"

He rushed out.

"Lord help that poor devil!" said Mostyn, in the hush that followed. "But if she's that sort, I'd let her go."

We speak of the dawn of conviction upon the mind; often, however, it comes not slowly, but as a lightning flash, as it came to Stephen Cartier, in the interminable minutes that elapsed before he found himself at the flat.

He knew.

While he had forced their horrible revelations back upon them, lying to them that he did not believe, he knew, and the knowledge shattered him. Like a Samson bereft of his strength, he went to the little hall, a trembling, weak child, terribly afraid.

The light was full on in all the rooms—the emtpy rooms. He knew. The silence gave him the news. He knew. It was as if a veil had dropped, shedding fierce daylight upon a desolate world. He went through, very quiet, and trembling, into the bedroom, looking round him as a man in a strange place.

On the dressing table's pink cover lay a white square. He went over and picked it up. It was a note addressed to himself. Then he was more afraid—of himself, of the emptiness of what he might find in the slight thing he held—dared not open. The secret white thing that knew his heaven or hell, that turned in his shaking fingers, keeping its still silence.

Some one sobbed.

It was not himself. He turned slowly—and saw Dorothy coming out from the corner by the wardrobe—God! where she had hidden from him! hidden away like—

She wore her hat and coat. They stood and looked at each other.

Presently he heard himself saying:

"You were going out—I came home, thinking—remembering that it was your birthday—"

Again silence.

He was pulling himself together, as becomes a man to whom heaven has granted a merciful reprieve.

He began again.

"You were going out, dearest—with—with—the Pettigrews, perhaps, and—and—wrote me the little note to tell me if I came back before—and—but I remembered that it was your birthday, and I wanted to take you out myself. So I came back, and—you were just going out with the Pettigrews——"

He held out to her the cloak of the lie, but the absolute candor of her white face scorned it. Yet she could hardly speak above a whisper, for fear of him.

"I was not going out with the Pettigrews, Stephen——"

Thus the guilty small creature, with piteous brown eyes.

"Anyway," he said, licking dry lips, "as I have come in I shan't need to read the note," and began to tear it precisely into minute fragments.

She looked at the clock on the mantelpiece. The hand was at the quarter. Eight o'clock was to have found her with Louis Brooking. But she could not pass the barrier of this big man, her husband. She did not know what she could do, or what Stephen was going to do, and she did not know his terrible new face—what just fury lay behind it to overwhelm her guilty head. She began to cry.

"My sweetheart——" said Cartier.

She looked out from behind the protecting handkerchief and saw him white and trembling. So Stephen was not angry, only afraid, too——

"O!" She swayed toward him. "O! O! O! I have been almost—wicked tonight——"

She had been almost wicked! What a merciful, beautiful little word, pregnant of comfort! "Almost wicked!" What did "almost" matter? He repeated it madly first to himself.

"What do 'almosts' matter?"

"Stephen!" she gasped.

He put his arms round her, while his mind groped for, his lips said, somehow, crazily, the right things.

"My darling, I love you! Always forever and ever, while I am I, and you are you. I think I've been rather more than—a first class damn fool and brute. It was my infernal selfishness—thoughtlessness—blindness—all inexcusable. I've made you think I don't care, my dearest. I'll teach you how I do. Always you're first, above everything, under everything—in my heart. I love you. There aren't new words for it. It's your birthday, sweet——"

She clung to him.

"Your birthday, and I want to take you out with me. Just we two together again. You shall put on your dear pink dress, and we'll go out and dine where you like, and go where you like afterward. I'll just take you to call somewhere first——"

It was of the Beggars he was suddenly thinking.

"I want just to make you happy, sweetest little sweetheart——"

"And I you," said Dorothy faintly.

Eight o'clock found her so, with Cartier hooking up the back of the pink frock, and praising a little deliriously the white softness of her neck, the curling tendrils of her hair against it, and all her incomparable sweetness.

Four "Beggars" had eaten through a very good dinner, and sat, tongues pleasantly loosened, with the coffee and liqueurs, when the door opened suddenly to show Cartier upon the threshold, a radiant little woman in an opera cloak by his side. She was a gross violation of the rules, but they all rose together, and stared approvingly upon such prettiness.

"Gentlemen, my wife!" said Cartier.

Every man bowed profoundly.

Cartier added:

"She has come to tell you herself that she insists on my resignation."

LOVE AT SECOND SIGHT

"Now, you stand there while I put on my coat," he directed.

The girl looked at him for a flash as though she would try to tear him to pieces. Just for a flash—then she reached up and helped him on with his clumsy coat and even buttoned up its throat-concealing flaps under his chin. The minister beamed, bowed, and voiced his thanks.

Trixie stood with her fists resting on her dainty hips: "Well, sir, and now that you've made a scandal of me, what is the next wish of your lordship?"

An expression of puzzled pain crossed Hal's face. Scandal? He hadn't thought of that in his impulsive actions prompted by his burning love and his courageous righteousness. His features melted. He took her hand, this time with trembling gentleness.

"Oh—I'm afraid I have been impulsive—but I couldn't—I just——"

She understood—his attitude, if not the full depth of his sentiments; and the tears came to her eyes, tears of mingled wrath for what he had done and joy for why he had done it.

"Oh—why did you do it?" she sobbed.

"Because—because——"

He could not say it, but she read it with startled revelation.

"But—it isn't possible—you hadn't seen me for years—I——"

"Could you forgive me?" he pleaded.

"Forgive you? I could worship you. I—please take me home."

Down the country road, under the light of a friendly moon, they walked—on air—the strong man now melting as a baby, the rebellious girl a kitten in her surrender.

They walked for a while in silence, each deep in thoughts. And there was plenty to think about: it had been so precipitate to both, so biff-bang in consecutive clicks of action. Hal was trying to assemble his wits now, for he could see before him the buzzing of gossip, he could foresee that while he had won this heavenly girl in jig time he had made spicy table talk and curbstone discussion which would start at sunup and ferment and seep through that provincial community.

And he had to be its minister, and this cherub at his side was to be its minister's wife, with everyone knowing the details of that sensational scene in Duggan's dive, everyone knowing that she had to be dragged by brute force from the company of another man, a man of unenviable name, from a resort of black disgrace. She was thinking, too—thinking of what it meant to be loved, and, what was greater, what it meant to love.

In an open spot she stopped, and he stopped beside her. She looked up into his face.

"You mean you would marry me after my—in spite of what happened—and where you found me?"

He was very solemn.

"Yes, I am certain that you have done nothing wrong. There will be talk—but we will brave it. My conduct was perhaps as thoughtless as your own."

She looked at him with the rapt gratitude of love. Then she burst into a laugh that echoed through the quiet night. He looked startled.

"Listen," she said. "For several weeks Rev. Turnbull, a minister from the city who succeeded the man who succeeded you, has been preaching against Duggan's. The Young Women's Aid society of the church took it up, drew resolutions, and finally called an indignation meeting when it became known that several girls had been taken out of Duggan's intoxicated. I, as president of the society, was appointed to investigate conditions at Duggan's. Rev. Turnbull was asked to accompany me. Tonight he dressed in his lay clothes, and we——"

Rev. Hal seized her arm. "That man you were with—the one I pushed—he——"

"He was Mr. Turnbull, the minister pro tem. The car was mine."

Hal clapped his palm to his perspiring forehead.

"The—drinks on your table——"

"Lemonade!"

"I've behaved like a—like a fool."

"I'm glad you did. Anyway—Hal was paved with good intentions."

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Turnbull, with a bandage over one eye.

LOVE AT SECOND SIGHT

by Jack Lait

WHEN Hal went away, just about all of Centralville came down to the depot to see him off on No. 6. And among the villagers was Trixie Jordon.

But that was all long ago—back in those immortal days immediately following President Wilson's declaration of a "state of war."

The handsome, popular, militant young clergyman had been the first in that isolated community to answer the clarion of the colors. His move was a thunderclap in the village, for he was exempt, just starting toward a career, regarded as a prime "catch" by several well-to-do farmers' wives who had eligible daughters, and the spokesman of peace rather than bloody war.

The hero worship which later became custom was all new then, and the Rev. Hal Weston was the pivot of such hubbub as the hamlet had never before worked up. At the station he was grandiloquently presented with a soldier's kit and a carload of woolen socks and sweaters, apples, a fountain pen, a certificate of the town's pride in him, a vote of thanks from the church board highly resolving that his post would await him whenever he returned, and a liver pad.

That was when he went away.

Trixie (her Christian name was Theodosia) was only a little high school junior, with pigtails swinging from her pretty head, at that betwixt and between age, a giggling, gangling girl. She was 15.

If Hal noticed her at all on that annoyingly glorious occasion, it was to note with fleeting eye the daughter of Centralville's unrivaled financier, churchman, and publicist, and one of a group of mincing maids mingling with the exalted and absurd grownups and getting in every one's way. She threw him a kiss as he raised his hat from the platform just when the train began to move, but many others, older and younger, did it, too.

Two years later Hal returned to Centralville, discharged, decorated, browned, hardened, a captain of artillery, with a fine record in action—ready and eager to forget the critical climaxes in history, the anguish and the inspiration of red war; ready and aching to resume his little country pulpit. He was one of the last to come home, as he had been the first to go. By then so many had gone and so many had returned that the novelty had paled. He was formally greeted by the church board, warmly handshaken, and reassured that his post waited and welcomed him. And he was glad and satisfied.

Among the greeters was, of course, Squire Jordon. His arm was linked with that of the bronzed, uniformed young American as they walked down Main street. Here and there the natives stopped to hail their returned hero. And at the principal corner, where stood on Jordon's bank, the great man halted to take leave of his charge. Just then emerged from the bank Mrs. Jordon and a young woman. Capt. Hal raised his cap to the squire's wife, took a look—then a second—at the younger woman; and he was lost.

It was Trixie.

But those two years! If ever two years metamorphose a woman, they are the two between 15 and 17.

He saw before him in exquisite and alluringly adolescent womanhood the most beautiful creature his eyes had ever beheld.

Trixie gave him her hand coyly. There was a momentary exchange of conventionalities and Squire Jordon's womenfolk stepped into their car and were off. Capt. Hal looked after them—after her. Then he walked to his old lodgings beside the little church and sat him down. He was dizzy. Love had come to him when and where he had least forseen it, and love was new and strange to him, for he had never gazed into any eyes with more than good will, charity, friendship, and brotherhood.

Within the hour he had callers. Several of his flock came to bid him their pleasure at his safe return and to gush at him the gossip of the self-centered burg covering the period of his absence. They told him that a considerable industry had come to Centralville—an electrical plant built just outside of town. It was superintended by a New Yorker, a tall stranger, who wore outlandish clothes, who sported a little racing car that snorted insolently, who lived in the most expensive suite of the Merchants' hotel, who had his shoes shined every day, and who was morally a scalawag, two village girls having fled his employ because of advances he had made toward them.

They told him of another unpleasant incident—a road house established just across the county line, a few miles distant, conducted by "Bull" Duggan, who had run the saloon in Centralville until local option had driven him elsewhere. This resort, unwelcome as it was, was immune from any indignation that could be aimed against it by the law-abiding citizens of Centralville, for it was in territory under jurisdiction of the adjoining county, where politicians ruled in favor of shameless laxity. Prohibition was being openly flouted, and appeals to the federal authorities had been unanswered while the corrupting influences of Duggan's dive were imperiling the moral welfare of Centralville's boys and girls—and some of the elders.

Clinton Crow, the manager of the electrical factory, was a nightly visitor and the star patron of the roadhouse, having driven there repeatedly with girls who had come from other towns to work in his plant, and, a few times, with Centralville girls who had been daring, indiscreet, and unholy enough to forever damn their good names—and maybe their souls—by being seen in Duggan's with the unloved, too well dressed, and resented Clinton Crow.

Hal promised that on the next day, when he would have resumed his garb of the ministerial cloth, reënlisting as a soldier in the service of the church, he would call on Squire Jordon and take up with him possible ways and means of combating Duggan's, which unsavory acquisition to the flock he had tended he viewed with sincere displeasure. He did not say that he would seek the squire in his home, but he was thinking it, for before him swam a vision of a girl who had stormed him with one look, who had conquered him with one smile.

Rev. Hal surveyed himself an hour later for more than a moment in his mirror. Here was he—but was it he? Was this figure in the severe black of the country minister, this good listener to the petty peeves and the inconsequential confidences of the isolated and insular proletarians in a grass-grown village the same Capt. Weston who a few weeks since had stood in the thick of the decisive crisis in the affairs of a universe, begrimed with the powder and sweat of carnage, commanding with distended nostrils, muscles taut and brain aflame, the destroying avalanches of death and consternation of giant cannon against the assembled enemies of mankind?

Curiously, perhaps sadly, he picked up the garments of the fight, the uniform of his past profession and his rank. Then he surveyed himself again in the meek vestments of a shepherd of a small and commonplace flock.

Ah, well——

And here was this new emotion, this newest besetting and upsetting visitation: he was in love.

He who had faced unseen batteries, camouflaged and murderous, he who had slept in calm snatches amid the deafening boom of shot and the shrill shriek of shrapnel, he who had commanded two hundred men, and he who had seen death and danger and victory with the impersonal vision of a soldier—he was quaking and twitching over one look into the eyes of a snippy nosed country youngster, already shaping his hopes and aiming his dreams with that one objective, one girl—one girl who counted not even one full grown atom in the inconceivably tremendous world with whose fate he had so lately wrestled hand to hand.

Yes, it was not to be denied. He had taken one unexpected look, and everything else had shrunk—everything but that girl, that one girl, that little girl. It was an anti-climax. But it was a verity.

And, to make it more acutely absurd, she didn't know it—scarcely knew him, in truth.

Sitting in that mood, looking blankly at nothing, a flash of something through the semi-darkness of the road without whizzed across his sight. It passed so swiftly that it was gone before he could set himself for a concentrated look. He rubbed his eyes confusedly. Could it have been? Had he really seen her exquisite face, lips parted in a smile, her eyes glistening under the little blowy tufts of hair playing hookey beneath a fetching motor helmet? Or had his fancies crystalized into a mirage of her; had he seen with his heart or with his eyes?

With his eyes!

For, beside her as she scurried by, had been a man, a man whose features were strange to the love-sick minister. And he had caught a dash of yellow on the body of the scooting speedster in which they were sitting behind a liveried chauffeur.

Where could they have been going? It came to him in an instant—to Bull Duggan's roadhouse! He rose unsteadily. It seemed scarcely plausible. Yet—what did he know of the girl except that her parents were good folks? That did not always set a child in the proper pathways.

She might at that moment be alighting with this stranger, apparently the pernicious Clinton Crow, from the looks of the car, at the threshold of the hellhole which had aroused the hostility of the simple folk of Centralville. Why, he would have interfered (he told himself) in such an instance even if the girl were nothing more to him than the daughter of a church member, or any other girl of respectable surroundings.

Not entirely clear in his own mind as to what procedure he should or would follow, Hal hastily picked up and donned his military overcoat and cap. It looked a bit strange over the black trousers of his clerical estate, but he strode out and slammed the door behind him. It was a stiff walk to Duggan's, but the Rev. Hal was a stiff walker, and he pushed on over the familiar road, his military form erect and his steps brisk and even. He saw the faint lights of the illicit resort ahead and he heard the muffled "jazz" through the country calm. At the door stood the car, the chauffeur leaning against the hood.

Duggan's was a broad, long, low converted barn. Not for a wink did the young clergyman hesitate when he reached the door. He twisted the knob and entered.

He stood in the doorway and saw before him a scene of shabby viciousness. Farmhands, village "sports," and indiscreet yokels, with the ragtag of the village girls and the poorer element of the young women attracted to Centralville by the opening of Crow's factory were just ending a dance which was more notable for its rudeness than for its naughtiness; it was a typical exhibition of jays attempting to ape what they are always the first to emulate of big town ways—the vices.

The dancers were scattering to their seats. Only one couple had not been dancing. It was a couple that looked different—apart—from the rest. The man, tall, richly and correctly if just a bit too carefully dressed, was looking up into the face of a waiter who was fawning on him with expectant and sycophantic attentions. The girl was Trixie. She had thrown back the motoring veil and was looking about her just a trifle uneasily, yet with an effort to seem composed. She nervously reached for and lifted a glass that had a block of ice chunking in a yellowish mixture which might have been indicted on suspicion as a highball.

Hal saw red. In three steps he was at the table, and, without word or a sound, he reached across and took the glass from the amazed girl's hold.

She gasped. Her escort was on his feet in a moment. The waiter stepped forward to act as guided by eventualities. Trixie looked curiously, then furiously at the intruder, her mouth open as though to say something sharp which did not readily say itself.

A figure slid across the floor. It was Bull Duggan, proprietor of the unsavory establishment. He proposed to have no "rough stuff" in his joint. He laid a hand on Hal's shoulder and, with a "what's this all about?" swung him half about. Hal looked at him with a mild contempt, spilled the contents—ice and all—of the glass on the floor behind the table, set down the glass, and unceremoniously brushed Duggan's hand from his shoulder. Duggan reached for a bottle on a nearby table, grasped it by its neck, backed a step, and stood on the aggressive.

"Put down that bottle," said Hal.

Duggan winced at the tone. The weapon wobbled slightly.

"If you wasn't a—a—soldier—a officer——"

Hal smiled for a second, then slid off his cap and soldier coat and dropped them in a vacant chair beside him, standing forth in his clerical collar and his ministerial dress.

"Oh—you're a parson——"

The bottle drifted still further out of the direct attitude of attack.

Hal nodded.

"Well, what do you come bustin' in here for, interferin' with my cust'mers?"

"I've come here to take this young woman out of here," answered Hal, indicating Trixie.

Trixie's escort sprang forward.

"If you please——"

Hal brushed him back. Duggan turned to the girl, who looked astonished and bewildered.

"What's this man to you?" he demanded, pointing to Hal.

Hal shoved Duggan back with a thrust of his forearm.

"I'm nothing to her—except the minister of her church," he answered for her.

Duggan's bad blood flew up at the shove. He gripped the bottle more firmly.

"If you wasn't a minister," he growled.

Hal deliberately took off his coat and removed his collar. He now stood in his trousers and a white shirt.

"There," he said, "I'll waive the minister part. Now, what?"

"Aw—I can't get away with it," snarled Duggan. "They'd run me out o' the state if I walloped a preacher, in his shirt sleeves or all dressed up. But I got a good notion to chance it and crown you, at that."

Hal reached over suddenly and seized Duggan by both lapels of his coat in the grip of one strong hand, and yanked the divekeeper to him across the slippery floor. He slapped him soundly, first on one cheek and then on the other, then shot him staggering backward against the next table. As he let go he ducked a blow aimed at him by the nearest waiter and deftly stepped to the nearest wall, with his back to it.

The patrons and the help edged toward him, but he had both his sturdy fists clenched, and none came within tangible distance. A few, recognizing him, were already making sheepishly and with what hasty grace they could for the door. Duggan picked himself up from under a table, where he had fallen all tangled up with a chair that had fallen with him, and made a mad rush at Hal, who neatly clipped him on the jaw and again felled him, this time taking the combativeness out of the man.

Trixie's friend had placed his hand agitatedly on her forearm and was talking excitedly at her. The girl, dizzy with a chaos of emotions, was glaring at Hal. The minister stepped forward and firmly disengaged the hand from the girl's arm. The man, scared white but with a moment's fleeting spirit still flickering, raised his finger:

"Now, look here, brother—"

Hal pointed to the door through which the crowd was scampering.

"Get out," he ordered.

"But, just a word. I'm——"

"Get out or I'll throw you out," and he slid two fingers down the man's collar.

"W-wait a minute; I have a young lady with me—have to take her home."

"I'll take her home. Get out."

And Hal pushed the heel of his hand into the other's face. This was enough. He looked a licked look at Trixie and started to back across the floor. It was too much for Trixie. She faced Hal, burning:

"Oh, you're going to take me home!"

Hal nodded.

"You mind your own affairs, even if you are a minister. You're not my guardian—why, I scarcely know you!"

"I am going to be your guardian, and I hope you will come to know me very well—and very tenderly. Shall we go?"

"We? You may go. I am going home with my escort, whom you took it on yourself to attack and insult. He'll be waiting."

"You're going home with me, and you'll walk."

He reached down and took her little hand. He loved that hand, but he seized it with scarcely the clasp of a lover. The girl flew up in a burst of temper, attempting to wrest her wrist from his unbreakable grip. She tore at him with her finger nails like a little vixen.

"Will you come, or shall I carry you?"

It only made her fight more frantically, a fight which was futile but furious. Hal protected himself only enough to keep her from scratching his face. When he thought that he had let her storm sufficiently he suddenly bent down and with his loose arm swung her off the floor, up onto the other arm, where she was held about the waist, kicking and struggling, clawing and resisting. With his other hand he swept up his clothes from the chair and carried her out.

The crowd had deserted the room, but a dozen or more had clustered in the doorway, watching the extraordinary proceedings. They fell away as the athletic soldier-minister came with his animated burden. Standing at the roadside, beside the sporty car, was the stranger, looking dazed and undecided; the chauffeur was at the wheel.

"You needn't wait," said Hal. "Go on," he shouted at the chauffeur. Trixie's head was toward him. She said something to the chauffeur. The car started and disappeared in the distance before Hal let down his recalcitrant prisoner.

cuter. One of them, for the moment, was his enemy, against whom he had been plotting as he sat in there alone. At sight of the other two a furrow appeared in his brow, for the first thought was that the thing which he feared in respect of them had happened. He gave them not even a nod therefore, but sat still frowning, the stubborn hair thrusting up over his forehead, his brown face deeply carved, like a grim old chief sitting in judgment. It was Danforth who placed a chair for Peggy, and Ted who spoke first, looking the judge hardily in the eye.

"Judge, Peggy tells me something or other happened here about that girl Katey. She says somebody saw Katey lying insensible in the laundry after she was supposed to have left the house for good, and next day a girl was buried up by Stony Cove on the strength of a death certificate signed by Dr. McKeon, and the next day I disappeared without saying anything to anybody, and it might look as though I had a hand in Katey's disappearance and you'd covered it up for me, and I'd skipped out. When she told me that I proposed to go straight to the police, or sheriff, or coroner, or whoever would be the right man and come here afterwards. But Peggy thought I ought to come here first. So I'm here and I want to have it out with you now."

His tone was not defiant, although it sounded bluntly uncompromising. But Judge Crane had heard many a man bluff and was not particularly impressed.

"You gave me your word that you'd stay down there in New Jersey until I sent for you. Why didn't you do it?" he asked.

That obviously confused Ted a bit, for to answer he had to blame the woman. So he said:

"When I heard Peggy was in New York I wanted to see her."

As though seeking the truth where the truth might be found, Judge Crane turned to her, saying, kindlier:

"Tell me what's happened since you left here, Peggy—and why you left." He wanted to know that first—for unlike his son, he had not said "Married or not!"

"Ted wrote me a letter," she replied, simply. "I read it a good many times. I've known Ted a long time, you know. When I read it over, judge, it seemed to me it wasn't possible that he could have done anything like that—what those circumstances pointed to. I felt it must be all wrong some way; there must be some explanation. I got a letter from a girl in the same mail—you know Nell Wheaton. She complained about having to stay in New York until the first of the month." She hesitated a moment, in a little confusion. "You see, I'd had a letter the day before from Alice Cotter asking me if I couldn't come down there for a few days. I really don't know why I told mother I was going to Cotter's instead of to Nell Wheaton. . . . But it's no use explaining things to mother, ever. She might think it odd that I'd go to the city this weather and I didn't want her to ask any questions. I just said I was going to the Cotters; but I went on to New York and telephoned Ted over in New Jersey. He came to see me and I told him. He insisted on coming back here at once. I thought he ought to, too. I met him at the station in New York at half past six this morning. We took the earliest train."

"You saw him at Nell Wheaton's last evening," the judge suggested.

"Yesterday afternoon," she corrected. "He had to go back to New Jersey to pack up his things."

So evidently what he had feared had not happened. They weren't married. With a grim satisfaction, Judge Crane prepared for the alternate course of action.

"He says you sent him down there, judge," Peggy added. It was not exactly an accusation, but it required an explanation.

"I sent him down there because he asked me to," said the judge, grimly.

"Well, that's true enough," Ted admitted. "I wanted to get away. . . . Peggy was sore at me. . . . I was awfully dissatisfied. I wanted to go away somewhere for a while." The young man took an instant to get his story firmly in hand and resumed, resolutely. "I told Peggy and I'll tell you that there's one point in this thing I can't explain now. I said to her the day I left here that I didn't see Katey at all the day she disappeared. And Peggy says I did see her and had her in my car with her. I don't dispute her. We'll just have to let that stand as it is. You can say I lied about it if you want to. But aside from that one point the rest of this Katey business is all nonsense. Katey's no more killed than I am. I'll bet my head she's in tip-top health right now and I could find her in a few hours if I wanted to."

"Where?" the judge demanded.

But Ted avoided that question, saying: "It seems there was a girl buried up at Stony Cove and somebody thinks it's Katey. The way to settle that is to look at the girl. It can be arranged through the police or sheriff or somebody. I remember a case only a few weeks ago, probably you read it in the newspapers, where a man was dug up to identify him. That girl up there is no more Katey than I am. If you have any doubt about it the quickest way to settle it is to get the sheriff. I'll go to him right now if you say so."

That impudence was hard to bear. The judge struck back:

"That girl up at Stony Cove is Katey. She was killed in this house—in your bedroom with your revolver. You killed her yourself and tried to hide the body!"

For a moment Ted only gaped at him and then muttered, "You're crazy."

"I'm not crazy," said the judge. "I've had some experience with courts and juries. You talk about betting your head. I'll bet my head I can convict you on the evidence I've got now. Katey is dead. I've seen her dead body with my own eyes. She was killed in your bedroom with your revolver. I know it as well as I know that I'm sitting here."

Ted was still gaping as these asseverations sunk into his mind, and he declared in a way that sounded fairly foolish even to himself:

"Judge, I don't know any more about it than the man in the moon."

With that he ran his fingers through his hair and in the dead silence stared from Judge Crane to Danforth and from Danforth to pale, starry-eyed, trembling Peggy. Then he leapt from his chair and seized the telephone on the table.

They heard him exclaim to the operator, "Give me the sheriff's office. I don't know the number, but I want the sheriff's office, quick!"

But at that Judge Crane sprang up, his face in a deep scowl, putting forth a menacing hand, and cried, "Wait!" He took a step nearer, leaned over, and put the outstretched hand on the telephone which Ted was holding. "Give me that telephone!" he commanded. Ted still held the instrument and Danforth stood up significantly. Peggy's lips parted, but no sound came; her hands clasped in her lap. A struggle seemed imminent. Ted then released the instrument. A moment later Judge Crane spoke into it:

"What number is this? . . . That's the wrong number. Central made a mistake." He put the telephone back on the table—his side of the table, however—and resumed his seat; but it was evident that his temper was still agitated by the clash that had occurred. There was a rough and aggressive edge in his voice as he said:

"If you were the only person concerned, I'd be as ready to call the sheriff as you are. But you're not the only person. I've taken some steps in this business myself. I did it to protect by wife. She can't stand such a shock as that. She ain't going to have to stand it. I helped cover this thing up for her sake. It's going to stay covered for her sake."

The ailing woman came into Ted's mind then and daunted him, for he, too, felt that she should not have to bear such a shock. He cried to the judge:

"You tie my hands and strike me in the face! You accuse me of murder and won't let me go to the sheriff. I had no more to do with Katey's disappearance than the man in the moon!" Angrily, he blurted, "I don't believe she's dead!"

Judge Crane, so to speak, was resuming his judicial robe. Grimly he replied, "Let's see now if we can't try this case just among ourselves. Suppose you sit down."

Ted obeyed him; they had the feeling of a court solemnly convening.

"To begin with," said the judge, "Katey is dead—I saw her dead body myself. She was killed in your bedroom—or, rather, in the dressing room off your bedroom. She had been shot through the heart with your revolver. The revolver was beside her. That's absolutely sure—beyond any question." He spoke with an aggressive deliberateness, driving the words in, his eyes holding Ted's.

"She had been attacked before she was shot—beaten and choked, her hair torn down. The marks were on her face and on her throat where she'd been struck and choked."

Ted gave a gasp—"Oh!"—and a look of comprehension swiftly dawned in his eyes. "Beaten and choked?" he cried.

"Beaten and choked," the judge repeated.

Excitement shone in Ted's face. He sprang up crying, "Good Lord! I know then—I know!"

But he did not finish the sentence. Instead he started pacing eccentrically across the room, his lips working together, "Good Lord! I know——" he exclaimed again, but again he did not finish the sentence. Instead, having reached the other wall, he turned excitedly and paced back.

Judge Crane, Danforth, and Peggy waited tensely for a further disclosure. But Ted seemed to have no further disclosure to make. He ceased his eccentric pacing for a moment and gave himself up to thought, compressing his lips hard. Then he turned to the judge like a man saying a final word:

"Judge, we'll just have to let it rest for the present. It will all come out. It's bound to, but just now I can't say anything more. For the present we'll just have to let it rest."

And as soon as he had spoken he was aware that this was a lame enough conclusion—after his fine heroics to Peggy to the effect that he would return at once to Overlook and clear the whole matter up in half an hour, and after his other heroics of seizing the telephone and demanding an immediate investigation—a very lame conclusion; he felt that the moment after he had spoken.

Looking at Judge Crane, he read in the old man's face stony disbelief. Looking at Danforth, he read something still more damning. They had already convicted him, and for the moment he could say no more; there was another face in his memory which forbade it. But in a way Judge Crane and Danforth hardly mattered. The true and final court lay elsewhere. In a deep agitation he turned to it—taking three steps across the room and falling on his knees beside Peggy's chair.

He put his arms around her waist and gave his case to her, with a cry:

"Peggy! My God! You don't think I killed poor Katey! You can't think that of me! You don't, do you?"

Her hands not moving in her lap, she bent her head to kiss his forehead and replied, low and grave,

"No, Ted. I can't think that; but you see it must be explained."

"Of course, it must be explained," he replied. "It will be explained. I know—but you'll give me a little time?"

"Yes," she said.

Then he stood up, looking at the judge and Danforth as though he had somehow been vindicated, as he said,

"That's all, then. I need a little time. But if you want me I'll be right around here." With that he walked out of the room.

Which was bitter to Danforth Crane beyond anything he had imagined. Peggy had heard his father bluntly accuse Ted of murder. She had heard Ted's poor bluff that he knew Katey was alive and had seen it collapse. She had seen this last comedy of declaring, "I know——" and then stopping short. And, after all, at the end, he had held her in his arms and she had said she believed him.

Nothing whatever would serve, it seemed. Although she herself saw him pull the trigger, yet when he whistled she would go to him; he knew the tune. That was bitterer to Danforth than anything he had imagined. Yet, after all, she didn't really know. She didn't really understand; she was only a girl—she must know the whole truth for her own sake.

Peggy sat still a moment after Ted had left the room, musing. Then she raised her eyes to Danforth's face and said, low and sweet, as an audible continuation of the musing, "It's impossible he could have done it, Dan." With that she got up to leave the room also, and someway as she arose a yet keener sense of her grace penetrated Danforth. For just an instant he found his throat too dry and tight for speech. Then, rising, he said, "Wait, Peg," and stepped toward her.

She waited dutifully, and felt the emotional stir in him before he spoke, huskily:

"You know my father and I love you very much."

That struck true on her heart, and she replied, "Why, of course, Dan! And I love you—both of you!"

A fond sense of what he had been to her all her life—a sure rock of refuge, whether her trouble was a broken doll or a murdered maid—moved her, and she put her hands on his thick arms, looking up at him, saying, "Good old Dan!"

"I want you to sit down and listen a minute," he said, in that oddly thickened voice.

She obeyed that, too. He lifted a chair over to sit close by her, taking her hand and holding her eyes with his.

"You know, Peggy, there's now and then a man with a bad spot in his brain. I used to know a man like that myself. I thought he was a very good sort—as good a man, say, and as normal as I was myself. Then presently I found out what he'd been doing in secret. It's a rotten subject, dear girl—but it seems necessary to tell you. A man of that kind, no doubt, ought to be pitied and put in a hospital for treatment. But you never can tell what they'll do. Probably they can't tell themselves. As long as they're at large they've got to be looked out for.

"You've heard my father say Ted killed Katey. He knows. We'll have to let that be for the present. But I know something else, Peggy, something else quite as bad as that. Ted can't be trusted. If any harm came to you I wouldn't know what to do. Until this business is cleared up, I want you to promise me—promise me solemnly—that you won't go anywhere alone with Ted. He can't be trusted; for today, at any rate, you must promise."

She comprehended, incredulously, what he had meant by a man with a rotten spot in his brain. He had meant Ted was such a man and could not be trusted. He had said he knew something besides the affair of Katey. They called such men degenerate.

She bent her head and dropped forward in the chair, making a little exclamation: "O, Dan—O, Dan!"—breathless and pulseless as though he had been beating the life out of her with his big fists until she could just gasp; but she clung tight to his hand.

"God knows I'm sorry to hurt you," he said, "but I'm horribly afraid, Peggy—you'll know why later. I'm horribly afraid. Give me the promise."

Her head bent, and, clinging to his hand, she struggled a moment and then murmured, "I promise." That was like condemning Ted, too; but at the moment she knew not what else to do. Having promised, she got up quickly and glided from the room, with a feeling that the sky had fallen on her.

When the door closed behind her, Danforth drew a heavy hand across his brow and shut himself up for a long moment. Turning to his father, then, he gave the explanation:

"This case puzzled me a bit up to today, father. I was satisfied the girl was killed in a scuffle. I could imagine easily enough how they might have come to be scuffling. But the choking and beating—usually white men, our breed of white men, don't do that; at least not when they're sober. That puzzled me a bit.

"You saw in here how his mind acted; first declaring he knew Katey was all right and he could find her in an hour and then as good as saying he knew who killed her but couldn't tell. Then his sudden bluff of calling the sheriff. If you look the case over, father, you'll probably see that it's a poor article of mind—cunning, in a way, but a poor article. I understand it now."

He observed the judge a moment and added, lower, "The fellow's a degenerate. He was choking and beating Edith Hilton in her room half an hour ago."

"My God!" the judge gasped.

"A fact, father," Danforth went on. "That happens once in a while, you know—good family and all that don't seem to be a protection. I knew a case myself. We've got that sort of a chap on our hands. So you understand why I made Peggy promise not to go away with him."

"I should say so!" exclaimed the judge.

"I suppose he ought to be shut up in an asylum," Danforth remarked, "but I suppose that couldn't be done without a trial on this Katey case and a conviction."

"No," said the judge.

"You see, he's got us tied," Danforth went on. "We can't strike him on the Katey case. Probably we can't take up the case of Edith—you know how women usually feel about talking of such an affair. He's got us tied. If he's a mind to just sit and bluff it out, I don't know what we could do."

"Well, I don't," the judge confessed. "Of course, I didn't suppose we were dealing with a lunatic—a moral lunatic, anyway. If he's a mind to just sit still and bluff it out, I don't know what we can do."

Danforth pondered in silence a moment and then seemed to continue the pondering aloud as he looked blankly at the wall.

"I don't know how another man might feel about it; but all I feel is just something to set my heel on—like a mad dog. I wouldn't give him much more consideration than that."

He looked over at his father. "I saw Katey choked and beaten and dead. I saw Edith choked and beaten—the marks on her throat"—he lowered his voice and it shook slightly, but his abrupt speech was like the charge of a bull: "Peggy's not going to make a third to them! That shall never happen—if I have to strangle him with my own hands!"

Judge Crane looked hastily away from his son's face; also he got up in an agitation of his own and began pacing.

"Dan, be careful," he said, earnestly. "I'm an old man—a pretty tough old man, too; but not as tough as I used to be. I know there

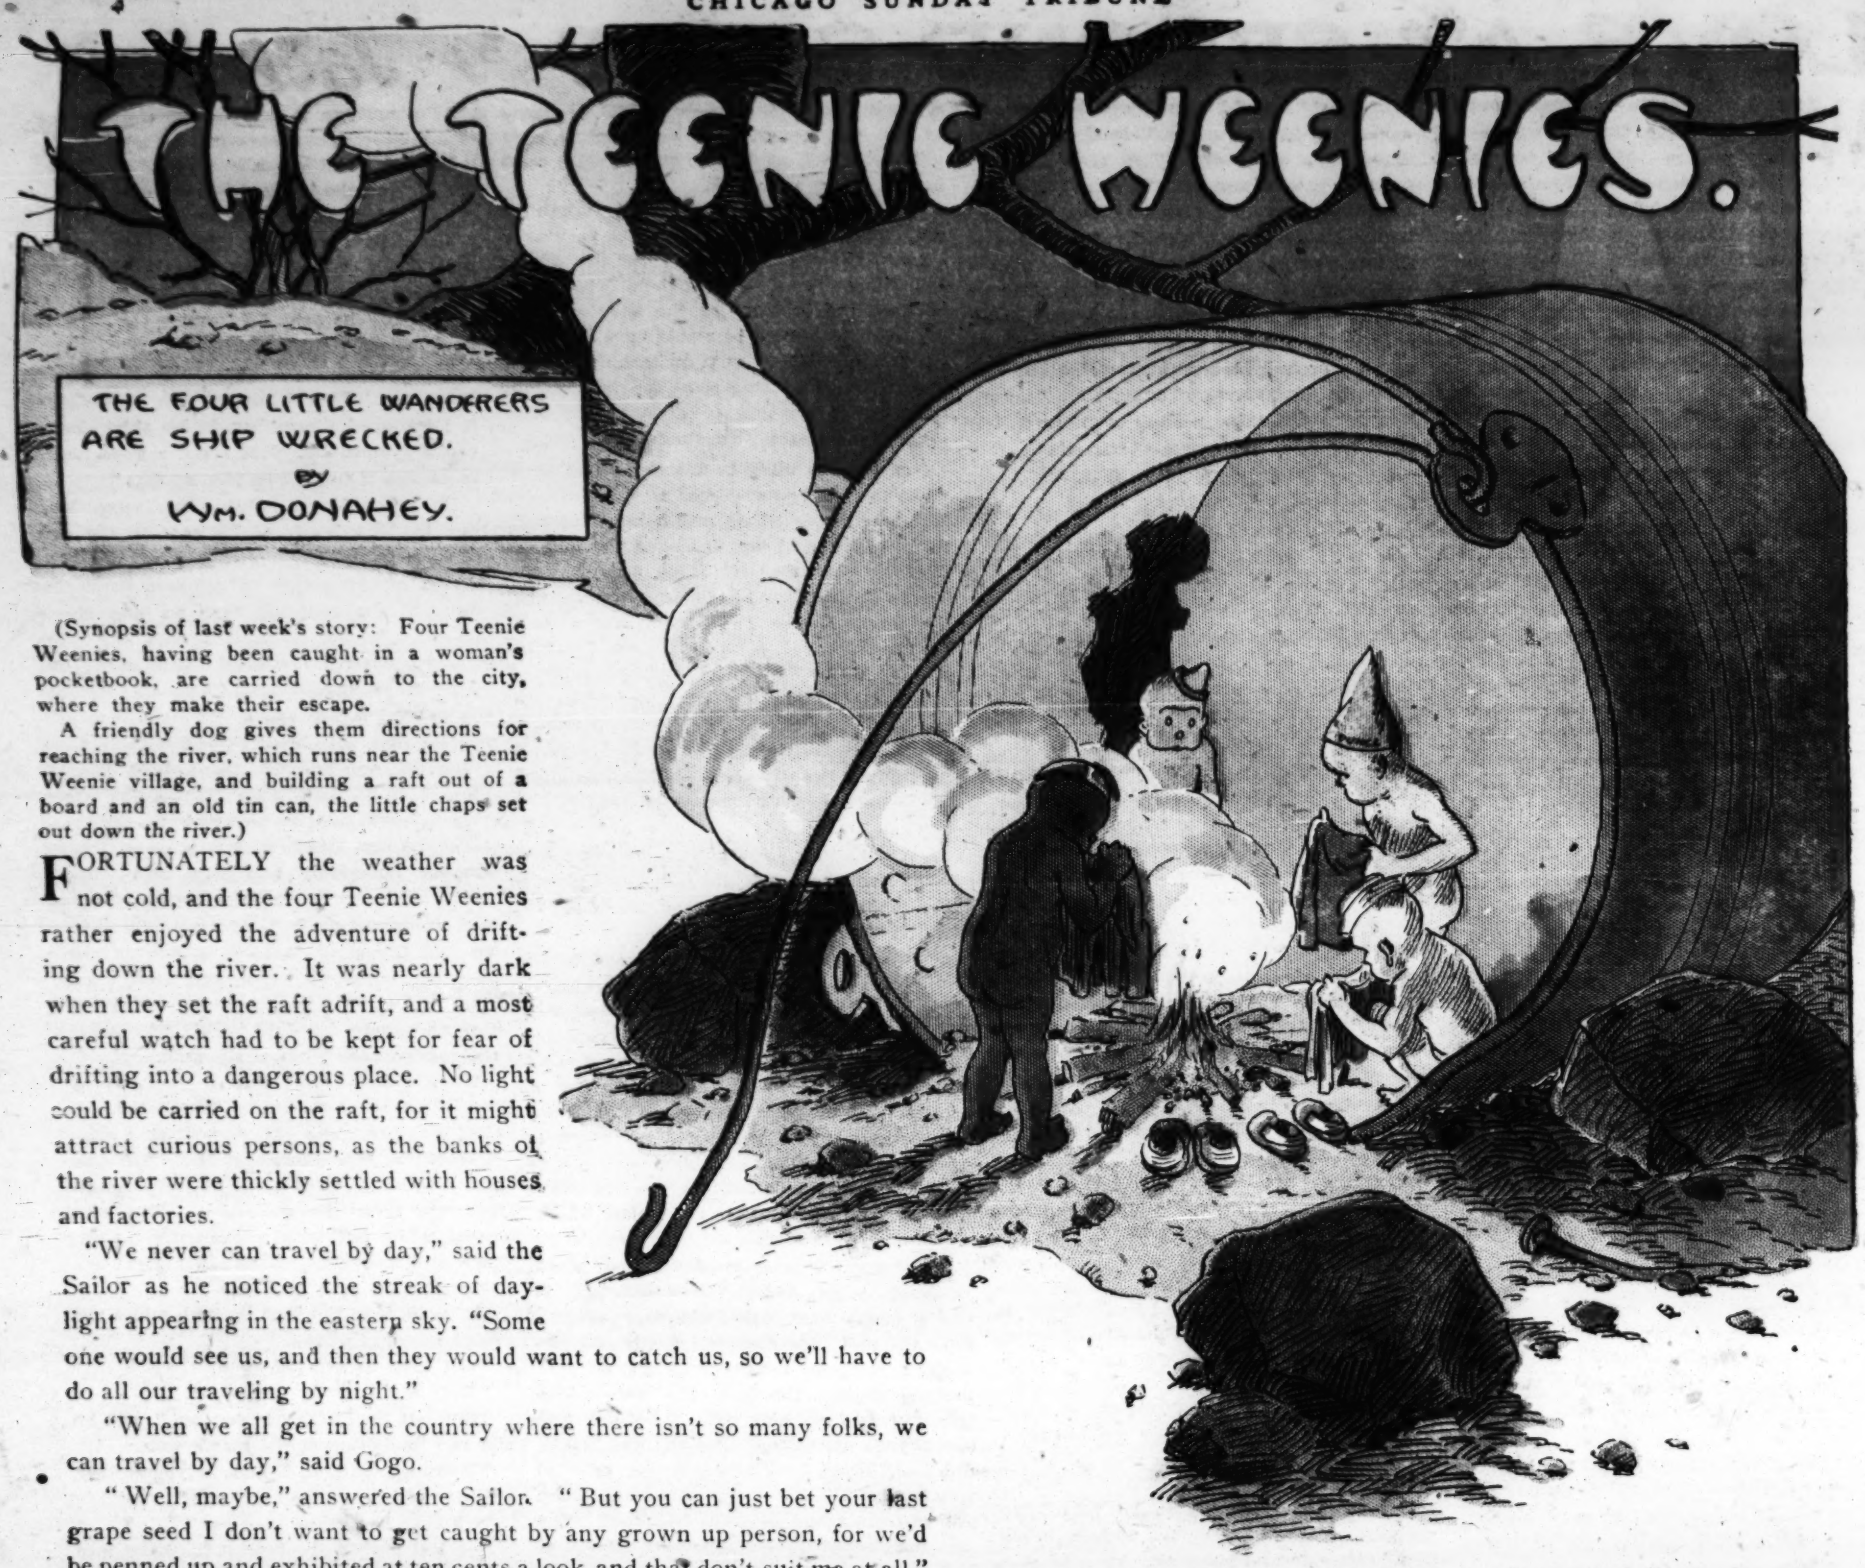
THE TEENIE WEENIES.



(Synopsis of last week's story: Four Teenie Weenies, having been caught in a woman's pocketbook, are carried down to the city, where they make their escape.

A friendly dog gives them directions for reaching the river, which runs near the Teenie Weenie village, and building a raft out of a board and an old tin can, the little chaps set out down the river.)

FORTUNATELY the weather was not cold, and the four Teenie Weenies rather enjoyed the adventure of drifting down the river. It was nearly dark when they set the raft adrift, and a most careful watch had to be kept for fear of drifting into a dangerous place. No light could be carried on the raft, for it might attract curious persons, as the banks of the river were thickly settled with houses and factories.

"We never can travel by day," said the Sailor as he noticed the streak of daylight appearing in the eastern sky. "Some one would see us, and then they would want to catch us, so we'll have to do all our traveling by night."

"When we all get in the country where there isn't so many folks, we can travel by day," said Gogo.

"Well, maybe," answered the Sailor. "But you can just bet your last grape seed I don't want to get caught by any grown up person, for we'd be penned up and exhibited at ten cents a look, and that don't suit me at all."

As it was now getting quite light, the little fellows decided to make for the shore and tie up during the day, for many houses were still scattered along the bank of the river.

Choosing a snug place under a dock, the little fellows soon paddled the raft into a dark place which was well screened from the curious. Making the raft tight to a nail which stuck out of one of the logs supporting the dock, the little men crawled into the can, which served them as a cabin, and lay down on a bed of shavings for a much needed sleep.

The Teenie Weenies slept for a long time, and they might have slept for many hours longer had they not been awakened by a loud hissing sound like escaping steam. Peering out of the can the little chaps saw the nose of a big dog sniffing at the opening.

"Land's sake!" exclaimed the dog. "Who in the name of raw beef are you?"

"J-j-j-just four stranded Teenie Weenies," answered the Dunce timidly, for the four little fellows were just a little startled by the appearance of the dog.

"I thought so!" exclaimed the dog. "You smell rather familiar to me. I passed your house once about a year ago, and as soon as I sniffed you I knew I had smelled you before."

The dog proved to be friendly, and when the Teenie Weenies told him that they would have to hunt up something to eat, he offered to bring them a bone.

"It's a perfectly good bone," said the dog when he saw the Teenie Weenies did not readily accept his offer. "I buried it only a couple of weeks ago."

The dog seemed quite hurt when the Teenie Weenies refused his bone, but when the little fellows explained that they never ate meat he felt much better.

"I know where there's a big piece of bread," said the dog. "It's about a half mile down the river, and if you'll wait I'll go and get it."

The Teenie Weenies thanked the dog for his kindness, and when the big fellow set off to get the bread the four little men made their way up the bank to see what they could find in the way of food.

"We had better lay in a supply," said the Clown. "For we might have trouble getting food at another time, and we can store enough in the can to last us for the trip home."

After several trips up and down the bank the little fellows carried seven grains of corn, which they found in a chicken yard, some peas that they discovered sticking to the inside of a can, and a piece of cheese rind as big as a half dollar. All this they stored in the can, and with the piece of bread which the dog brought they had enough food to last them a month.

Late in the afternoon the Teenie Weenies decided to take a chance and set off down the river before night. Although they knew it was dangerous to travel by daylight, they thought that by keeping out in the middle of the river they would be far enough away from shore to keep from being bothered.

"It'll be safe," argued the Dunce. "Anyone who sees the board with the can on it will think it's just a bit of rubbish and won't pay any attention to it."

"We all can keep hidden in the can," suggested Gogo. "And no one is liable to bother us."

"All right," growled the Sailor, who was more cautious than the rest. "Let's go."

After bidding the dog good-by the Teenie Weenies pushed the raft off, and soon floated out into the middle of the stream.

The little raft had only floated a short distance when some boys appeared on the bank of the river.

"Oh, look at the board with the tin can on it," exclaimed one of the boys. "Let's see who can knock the can off," and picking up a stone he threw it at the raft.

The boys never imagined that the tiny raft contained a crew of Teenie Weenies; had they done so they probably would never have thrown the stones.

The stones fell all around the raft, splashing water into the can and rocking the tiny craft as though it was sailing on a stormy sea.

Finally one stone hit the can fairly in the middle, knocking it off the board into the water, where it bobbed up and down a couple of times and soon disappeared, carrying down with it all their store of food.

The four Teenie Weenies dived into the cold water and swam for the opposite shore, where they landed, chattering with the cold.

Fortunately the Sailor carried a tin water-proof match safe in his pocket, and in a few minutes the little men built a fire in an old tin bucket.

Taking off their wet clothes they shivered around the fire while they tried to dry them.

OVERLOOK HOUSE

Blue Ribbon Fiction

by Will Payne

THE STORY THUS FAR—Overlook House is the home of Judge Tillman Crane, a wealthy owner of oil lands, and his invalid wife. As the story opens the Cranes are entertaining as their guest Mrs. Edith Hilton, whose husband, a broker, has been handling the judge's financial interests. One day Hilton summons his wife to a secret meeting at a nearby town, confesses that he has been misappropriating the Crane securities, and begs her to help him conceal his guilt. To avoid recognition on her trip Mrs. Hilton has worn the hat and cloak of Katey Zobrosky, a pretty Polish housemaid. On her way back she is overtaken by Ted Pennell, son of her husband's partner, who gives her a lift in his car, promising secrecy and treating the little masquerade as a joke. Several persons, however, have seen the supposed maid in his car, among them Peggy Loughman, Ted's fiancée, who has been angered before by young Pennell's open philandering with the girl. There is a lovers' quarrel and then matters take a more serious turn, for Katey, the maid, has disappeared. The first to admit any knowledge of her whereabouts is Samuel Thorp, a town loafer, who has seen the girl lying on a pile of clothes in the laundry, covered with a coat which he recognizes as one belonging to Ted Pennell. Thorp confides his secret to Louis, the gardener, an admirer of Katey, and Louis, in turn, tells the disturbing story to Danforth Crane, the Judge's son, who is in love with Peggy Loughman and proposes, if he can, to overcome her preference for Ted Pennell. Ted, feeling himself bound not to betray Mrs. Hilton, refuses stubbornly to explain Katey's supposed presence in his car just before her disappearance, and adds to the mystery of his conduct by abruptly leaving Overlook House. Peggy Loughman, deeply troubled, determines to find out what has become of the maid, and at her suggestion Danforth Crane engages a detective named Eastman to work on the case. At the same time a second detective, a woman, is retained by Lester Hilton, the broker, who has his own reasons for wanting to get Ted Pennell more deeply into trouble. The detectives, both employés of a man named Cordwainer, work together in order to play one client against the other, and find that Dr. Bradford McKeon, the Crane family physician, has authorized the burial of a girl whom he identifies as Mina Stein, a maid in his house. The body is exhumed secretly and proves to be that of the missing Katey. The next day evidence of Hilton's peculations falls into his partner's hands and the embezzler, desperately playing for time, offers to get a receipt for the missing securities, duly signed by one of the Cranes. Then his detective tells him what she has learned about Katey and the Crane physician's part in the affair. Armed with this knowledge, Hilton tries to blackmail Judge Crane into signing the receipt, and the Judge promises to "think it over." At the same time he takes Danforth into his confidence, saying that Katey was shot by Ted Pennell and that the secret burial was arranged to keep knowledge of the crime from the judge's invalid wife. He is determined that she shall be spared the shock of hearing the grewsome story and declares that the body must be removed at once and sunk at sea. To this Danforth objects. He is Ted Pennell's rival in love, and if the body is evidence against young Pennell he does not propose to have it disappear.

FOURTEENTH INSTALLMENT.

"You Killed Her Yourself!"

DANFORTH was pleading his case with earnestness and emotion, although his heavy voice was controlled; but whatever was formidable in him came out as he spoke, and his father recognized it with a disquieting sort of shock—so to speak, beholding his own cub, whom he had brought up and taught to fight, standing squared across his path. He pulled his rough dewlap between thumb and forefinger. Very few things in life could be less welcome to him than a fight with his son; so he spoke in a mild and reasonable tone:

"Well, I'm bound to protect these other people—say nothing of myself."

So there was the issue indubitably joined between them.

"I'm afraid of him, father," said Danforth. "If the actual evidence is gone he'll lie about it. Of course he's lied to her about it already. She's only a girl and romantic. He'll think up some plausible fable and bluff it out with her. It's one chance in a million for me. I may be foolish—at my age—but I can't help it. Say I'm mad about her, if you like. I am mad about her. The body mustn't be moved just now."

His father looked him in the eye and inquired, "Mad enough to throw me down, Dan?"

It was a hard question, but Danforth, likewise looking his father in the eye, replied at once, "If it had to come to that I'd be mad enough for it. But there's no need. You can afford to take the chance of letting it rest a day or two. It must."

There was no doubt about the conclusiveness of that, and Judge Crane replied grimly: "In that case there's nothing more to be said." Not that he gave up his own plan, however; already he was prepared to consider what steps he might take independently of his son.

Danforth stood up, saying, simply: "Sorry, but I can't see it any other way." He knew well enough that his father was not likely to give up easily, so he added gravely, "Please don't start anything tonight; it would be foolish." With that quiet and final challenge he moved toward the door.

With a certain sense of strangeness Judge Crane watched his son's burly figure move toward the study door. They were antagonists; a covert declaration of war had just passed between them. Who could have imagined that such a thing would happen?

Then the judge witnessed an odd little pantomime. Danforth opened the door and stepped into the hall, but halted, the doorknob still in his hand, and so stood for a moment; then he stepped back into the study, pulling the door to after him, but leaving a crack so that he could still look down the hall. For a minute, he stood that way, and then went into the hall, briskly, closing the study door behind him. Of course the little pantomime struck Judge Crane as odd.

Opening the study door, his mind sombrely full of this clash with his father, Danforth's eyes had traveled mechanically down the hall and at once lighted upon an arresting object—namely: a new and distinguished traveling bag. It was of pale yellow leather, with stout straps over the top and metal fixtures of dull wrought iron—an uncommon sort of bag. A fortnight before Ted Pennell had exhibited exactly such a bag to him, in the new pride of ownership.

The bag stood on the hall floor, near the wall, not, however, near the door to Ted Pennell's bedroom, but on the opposite side of the hall and some distance this way from Ted's room. But it was close to the door of Edith Hilton's bedroom. So much Danforth took in at a glance and halted in his tracks. The next moment he saw the door of Edith's room opening. A man, clad in light colored summer flannels, stepped partly out and turned, as though to take another look backward into the bedroom. The partly disclosed man looked like Ted Pennell and Danforth withdrew into the judge's study, keeping a crack to peer through.

When he had got down far enough to have a clear view of the hall, he saw Ted and Peggy there.

When the man came wholly into the hall Danforth saw that it was Ted. Having put a key into the lock, Ted locked the door, tried it to make sure that it was fast, then, with the key in his hand, picked up his bag and went to his own room, which he entered.

Of course, Danforth wondered, and his wonderings were of a dark tone. He went down the hall and listened at Edith's door, but all seemed still within. He had seen the door locked a moment before and so didn't bother to try it. But the bedrooms there, on both sides of the hall, were constructed in suites of two, with a dressing room and bathroom between, so that a man and wife might have each a separate bedroom, but the use of the same dressing room and bath. Danforth stepped on to the door opposite Ted's—the door of the bedroom which, just now, was assigned to Lester Hilton.

When he tried the door it yielded to his touch and he entered. There seemed nothing uncommon in the aspect of the bedroom. He crossed it, listened at the door of the dressing room, tapped very gently upon it, and got no response. He then entered the dressing room, found it empty, and crossed to the door to Edith's bedroom. This might prove embarrassing; but when he had listened a moment and heard no sound, he gently tried the knob, found that it yielded, and pushed the door open a bit, peering in. An instant later he was crossing the room to the bed on the further side.

Edith Hilton lay on the bed, a folded towel partly concealing her face, and what of it he could see was white as the pillow. But when he had nearly reached the bed she heard him and lifted her head, with a wild look. In that action the folded towel, which had been wrung out in water, fell from her face. There was a bruise on her left cheek where she had been struck savagely, blood still oozed a little from it. Her right eye was swelling and turning black from another blow. Her hair was disheveled, but that might have been from the towel and pillow. On either side of her white throat were long, purpling marks, where undoubtedly she had been choked hard. As Danforth saw her another face arose upon his mind—a sweet face, too, with soft, disordered hair above it; bruised by savage blows, brute marks of fingers on the white neck.

As Edith raised herself, with that wild look, a shudder ran through her body; then she recognized Danforth. Her hurt face puckered and she gave a weak, plaintive cry:

"Dan? Why did you come in? Go away, Dan. I can't talk now. . . . I'm too hurt. Go away. I'll talk by and by."

The weak, plaintive voice wrung his heart in pure sympathy.

"What's happened to you, Edith?" he asked.

She stared blankly at him an instant, as though he should have known what had happened; then dropped back on the pillow and moaned, "I fell and hurt myself. Go away, Dan—please. I can't talk."

He felt it would be mere brutality to stay after that, and apparently she was not in a condition of any danger. So he withdrew by the way he had come, through the dressing room to the bedroom now assigned to her husband. There he sat down on the arm of a chair for two or three minutes, trying to think, although the stuff that was in his mind didn't yield itself to thinking very well. Leaving the bedroom then, he crossed the hall and entered Ted's room without bothering to knock. No man who could have seen his mind would have cared to stand in his way.

But Ted's room was empty. The distinguished traveling bag stood on the floor, where its owner had dropped it. A light colored flannel coat lay in a heap on a chair, where it had evidently been tossed. It was the coat Ted had been wearing when Danforth saw him in the hall five minutes before. Danforth picked it up. A sleeve and shoulder were dabbled with blood.

But its owner couldn't be far away. With that idea Danforth started down the stairs. The hall down there was empty. He walked over to the living room door, glanced in, and all the arrows in the hunter's quiver struck him at once.

Ted Pennell, in light trousers and a darker coat, which he had evidently put on in a hurry after discarding the blood stained garment, sat in a big arm chair, humped over, his elbows on his knees, his head bowed. And Peggy was sitting on the arm of the chair, her arms resting lightly over his bowed shoulders, comforting him.

Naturally Peggy saw Danforth first and at once got up from the arm of the chair, advancing to meet him—a slim figure in a brown traveling suit with a little three-cornered brown straw hat on its shiny head. The sweet image of her which haunted Danforth's mind would have had subtly to take on some age and care in order to correspond exactly with this advancing figure, as though in the few days since he had seen her she had some way left off being a girl and become a woman. She was smiling at him, holding out her hand—not the bubbling smile, like a burst of bird song—for there was some age and care in it; but it was not less sweet for that.

"Hello, Dan," she said, in a quiet note.

As his hand closed over hers all that was most dear and fragrant in the old image seemed there; he thought it impossible that anything could have happened.

"Hello, Peggy," he rumbled, noticing that she didn't offer to kiss him this time as she usually did when they met after an absence, but there was no other sign of reserve or withdrawal from him. It seemed to him that the omission was not because he had fallen to a lower place in her regard, but because she was occupied with weightier things and forgot it. But he didn't wish weightier things than himself to occupy her mind.

She murmured to him, in a half whisper, "I don't know what's the matter with Ted. . . . Upset; nervous, I suppose."

Ted was looking at them then and Danforth observed that the young man's eyes were somewhat dim, as though he had been shedding tears. Apparently he had come down from Edith Hilton's room to Peggy to blubber and be comforted.

For once Peggy was tremendously in the way and Danforth could say very little. Something was choking him and bursting his throat; he knew that his hands were trembling slightly. There was something that he yearned, unspeakably, to settle immediately. Peggy was in the way, and now that she had come up to him and he had one full look at her he took care to keep his eyes averted from her.

"My father is up in his study," he said; "we'll go up there."

And Ted immediately sprang up, saying, "That's exactly what I want!"

Danforth ignored that impudence and silently led the way up the stairs. Peggy moved beside him and he was acutely aware of her, as though the perfume of her hair filled his nostrils. . . . Had anything happened?

But in one way it was immaterial whether anything had happened or not. A little while before he had said to his father that if Ted and Peggy were married he would help shield her from knowledge of the grave at Stony Cove. But that was before he had seen Edith Hilton. Now his feelings were quite different. Married or not, it should all come out. Marriages could be set aside. So resolved, he opened the door to his father's den.

Turning in his chair, the judge saw them

FOR THE WOMAN WHO WANTS TO DO HER SUMMER SEWING EARLY

by CORINNE LOWE

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

AT the left a hat of black patent leather has extended its patent to dressiness by an embroidery of silver and a brim of black lace. The frock worn with it is of black satin and tobacco crepe chinchilla. In the center is an organdy dance frock of reseda green taffeta appliqued with design in old blue taffeta. The reseda leghorn with black velvet under brim presents the pendant trimmings so much featured in spring millinery. The right shows a gray organdy over mauve taffeta trimmed with bands of taffeta alternating light and deep mauve which is worn with a hat of gray tulle wreathed with glazed black flowers and silver leaves. At the left center a draped frock of rose color charmeuse finished by a turban of rose tulle trimmed with ostrich shows that the skirt is undertaking old responsibilities. At the right center fawn color crepe is contrasted with terra cotta satin and a hat and veil of self-color are dotted with steel beads.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The fourteen inch skirt has passed. Petties are no longer going to be ventilators. They are lapsing into that comfortable theory discarded these past seasons—that a skirt is meant to be a covering. Many of the smartest frocks and separate skirts now being made are eight inches above the ground.

This optimistic declaration is supported by a certain New York trade journals which recently collected the opinions of the leading designers and specialty shop managers at Palm Beach. These authorities were almost unanimous in their belief that the kilt is doomed. Some of them, it is true, still concede sports skirts that are ten or twelve inches off the ground, but for more formal wear eight inches or even six inches represents the best taste.

The best of it is, too, that we may trust Palm Beach. What they wear down there in February or March we usually wear up here in July and August. Florida is, in fact, the dressometer of America. Reading the meter is in this instance a soothing performance, for with missionary zeal I have tilted for more than a year against the skirt that climbs to the snowline.

Perhaps, of course, I am sentimental about women. I hate to see a great broad shouldered Valkyrie of a girl who stands 5 feet 10 in her stocking feet going around looking like one of the Follies chorus. I hate to have my grand opera turned into farce—also I hate to have my grandmother turned into it. To have one of these young things of 65 teetering about in skirts that are just barely knee guards seems to me an offense against everything that is fine and romantic in age. And even youth itself has been robbed of a good deal of its lyricism by the fourteen and sixteen inch petty.

There's Juliet, for example! In my opinion Verona would have been deprived of its leading news interest if Miss Capulet had come out on her balcony in a plaited sports skirt that made her stockings do all of the work. And Troy—well, it would be safe as anything this very day if Helen had chosen a chic skirt instead of her beautiful palla and peplum. And then there's the Winged Victory—can't you just imagine her if the wind had nothing to do but ruffle up her wool sports hose?

Well, well, I have had my gouty say against the short skirt. Now I'll try to calm myself sufficiently to talk about the styles shown on this page. Only nobody can keep me from repeating just once more that I'm glad, glad, glad that Palm Beach has said what it has. And if Paris won't sustain her—there seems to be a good deal of difference of opinion in the reports of the Frenchwoman's attitude toward the lengthened skirt—so much the worse for Paris. It will have to worry along without New York and Chicago and Butte and Seattle.

At the left of this page is one of those jacket costumes to which we all look forward for this summer. It is made of tobacco brown crepe chinchilla in combination with a coatee of black satin trimmed with aplique and folds of the skirt material. The hat worn with this is a smart model, contributing the information that patent leather may today be as dressy as it please. For this—can't you care for it?—is embroidered with silver and has a brim of black lace.

The costume itself impresses upon us an important style feature of this spring. The coatee accompanies many of the most delightful frocks being made up today. According to a frequent French interpretation, the coatee assumes a bolero line at the front and lapses into a cape at the back. It is, of course, usually of a contrasting material; and here some of the Paris artistes have been busy.

For instance, one often finds a jacket of serge accompanying a crepe de chine frock. Or your serge wrap may finish off a foulard costume. This is altogether in line, by the way, with our new mood, to mix up crepe de chine and almost anything which comes handy. Thus many of the new crepe de chines made up by Agnes in Paris are set off with foulard trimmings.

Taffeta! Ah, the taffe-teria still goes on, and the girl who wants to make some new spring dance frocks for wear a few months hence need not fear to make her choice now. If she gets her a taffeta, and designs it with a tight fitting little bodice and a rather full skirt, she won't make any mistake. For there is every reason to believe that here is a mode which will pervade the entire summer.

Many of these little taffetas are untrimmed save by flounces of self-material. But one need not be austere about it, of course. There is a variety of furbishings from which to choose, and among these the applique floral design is still in the lead.

In the center we are showing one of these quaint little dance frocks of taffeta, which is conducted in reseda green taffeta with applique design of old blue in the same fabric.

And quite in keeping with the frock is the hat of pale reseda Leghorn, with its black velvet brim facing and its dripping straw flowers.

This last word brings us to a feature of the new millinery which, although I have mentioned it before, cannot be overemphasized. This is the fact that trimming is now brimming. We are clandestine about our flowers and other ornaments. Instead of heaping them up about the crown we hang them shyly from the under brim. In these big picture hats the effect, too, is most charming. Doesn't this hat, for instance, make you think of the temple bells?

In the earliest of French models for spring one is impressed by the tremendous amount of black. Black taffeta, crepe de chines, crepe satins—all of these are here to make the world look like a hansom cab on a stormy night. Sometimes they are trimmed with white, of course, and in this connection one thinks first of all of organdy. This snowy cotton is being used again, just as it was last spring, for the black silk frock, and some of the most stunning models have scalloped flounces of white organdy superimposed on the sooty foundation.

The fact of it is that organdy is going to renounce none of its authority. Here again the woman who wants to do her summer shopping early may play quite safe. Buy organdy, and you don't need to feel a bit nervous.

A word right here about the colors in which this cotton now comes. We find it this year in henna, the new flamingo pink, and in tangerine. All of these will undoubtedly be smart, but for one of our calmer moods of organdy we shall want just the tonal scale represented in the organdy at the right.

This is a gray organdy made up over mauve taffeta and trimmed with taffeta bands, which alternate a light with a deep mauve tint. The hat worn with this is one of those becoming tulle things—gray over mauve taffeta—and the axiom that somewhere about the gray costume there should always be a touch of black is observed by the wreath of glazed black flowers admitting a touch of silver leaves.

There is a threat of circular skirts this spring. Whether we shall be able to avoid this or not, there seems to be one thing certain. The circular tunic with its hint of the bell shaped skirt is already upon us. This is particularly true of the taffeta frock. As to crepe of all sorts, it does not yield meekly to bouffancy, and the majority of these models are of the straightline type.

At the right center, for example, we find a simple one piece frock of fawn colored crepe trimmed with terra cotta satin, which is accompanied by a turban and veil of the same color as the frock. An interesting detail of the latter is formed by the steel beads sewn over both hat and veil.

The costume at the left center of the page is an afternoon gown of rose charmeuse bearing out more conclusively than any other on the page our optimism regarding the lengthened skirt. The draped line of this gown should be studied by every woman who, in an age of the chic and the ugly, still retains some vision of graceful and even romantic attire.

The small turban of rose tulle stitched with silver and trimmed with tufts of self-colored ostrich fills out the lesson to be learned from the gown itself.

Presenting Original—Individual Tailleur Suits

SUITS that attain the exacting requirements of custom tailors' superior models are the inimitable tailleurs that have been so cleverly fashioned by Stevens designers.

They display that exquisite finesse of fine tailoring that pays perfect attention to minute details. The materials are Twill Cord, Cheruit Twill, Piquetine, Poiret Twill, Tricotine and Covert, while the new colors are Wren Tan and Pewter Gray. These are in addition to the always desirable Navy and Black.

Anticipating the requirements of the well-groomed woman for at least one finely tailored suit in her spring wardrobe, we present this collection for her immediate selection.

Introducing Distinctive—Unusual Caracul Trimmed Wraps

DEVELOPED in Armida and Velmirage, these handsome wraps of cloth offer a choice of Tan, Gray, Brown or Black Caracul. Their colors vie with those of the spring season. There's Mouflon, Silver Pine, Hindustan, Sorrento, Ostrich, Camel, Azurite, Slynx, Amalfi, Navy and Black.

There is only a limited supply of these models, and because of the scarcity of this high-grade caracul, they are extremely difficult to duplicate. An early inspection will prevent later disappointment.

Our showing of spring Wraps and Coats is now complete, and includes everything from the smart sports garment to the exclusive afternoon wrap.

DOVE LORE

by Doris Blake

THERE is a belief that the pigeon has no gall. The story goes that pigeons have no gall, because the dove sent from the ark by Noah burst its gall out of grief and none of the pigeon family has had a gall ever since.

In Scotland a white dove followed by a black dove means ills followed by joys.

In Lancashire the appearance of a white dove at the window means either a recovery or else a good angel to take away the soul.

In India if a young woman whose husband is away sees a pair of doves, it is a sign that he will soon come back to her.

If you hear the first notes of a dove in spring while you are lying down, you will have ill health all the year; if you are walking, perfect health; if sitting, moderately good health.

The pigeon is supposed to look well to its own stomach; hence pigeon-toed people are said to be stingy.

To feed strange pigeons will bring true friends.

Turtle doves in your house are said to banish rheumatism.

When a pigeon perches upon the house in Hindustan the owner takes it to be a forerunner of ill luck.

The cooing of a strange dove in your window is the sign of coming sad intelligence.

In India pigeons are thought to bring good luck. They are carefully reared in houses, which they are believed to keep from decay.

The dove was considered unlucky to Assyrians.

It is good luck to have a stray pigeon come to your home.

Mourning doves frequenting your premises are supposed to bring sudden illness to the family.

Pigeons flying in a ring over a body of water give a sign of rain.

Eastern people believe that the pigeon brings good luck.

To kill a mourning dove means loss of friends.

Pigeons are trusted as insurers against fire. The flight of a pigeon through a house is regarded as a kindly warning of conflagration.

Mr. Henderson, in his "Folklore of the Northern Counties," says: "The Russian peasantry have a strong feeling against using pigeon feathers in beds. They consider it sacrilegious, the dove being the emblem of the Holy Spirit.

Shakespeare, in "Timon of Athens," alludes to the superstition thus: "Pluck stout men's pillows from below their heads."

If a dove flies into a house when any person is dead or dying, the person at whose feet the bird falls will die next.

If a gentle ground-dove or turtle-dove is seen strutting along on the top of a home in Barbadoes, it is a sure sign of death to the inmates.

When the doves around the dovecote make a more than ordinary cooing and pass incessantly in and out of their cotes, it is a sure sign that there is to be a change of weather.

If a pigeon should fly into your room in a snowstorm, it is an omen that one of your family is in great bodily pain and is being cared for by strangers. They will treat your friend as you treat the pigeon.

If doves arrive at their homes later than usual, it is a sign of bad weather.

If you are going downhill when you hear the first dove in the season, you will lose something. If you are going up, you will find something.

If a pigeon settles on a table, it is a sign of sickness.

It is unlucky to drive a dove or pigeon out of the house.

If some strange pigeon comes and picks in your garden three days in succession, it foretells the death of some young person.

It is a common notion that if a dove were let loose with its eyes blinded, it would fly straight up into the air until it fell from exhaustion.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair of which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Sunday Tribune. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Advice Is Free.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a girl for the last year whom I love dearly. When I went to see her I always took her a box of candy or flowers. One day she wrote me a note and said that for a good many reasons she thought we had better quit going together for awhile. So I wrote her a letter asking her what her reasons were, but she has made no reply, and when we meet she will not even speak. What can I do to win back her love?

"D. E. K."

First, D. E. K., I want to scold you good and properly for enclosing a dollar bill. There is no charge for advice in this department. And you made it doubly difficult in signing initials only and giving no address. Please supply your address so I may return the money, or if you do not want to do that designate some charity to which I may donate the dollar.

About the girl, I am afraid you must take her advice and leave her alone—until, at least, she signifies a desire to renew the old relationship. Perhaps, however, a short cessation of your devotion may make her realize a fondness for you she never suspected. I hope so for your sake.

Choose a Man You Love.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am hoping that you can advise me in this affair. I am acquainted with a fellow of foreign birth. I like him; but as to marrying him, it is impossible. My father, mother, and sisters insist on my marrying him. He brings me expensive gifts, which I refuse, and is everlastingly insisting on my going out with him, even when I refuse to go. He has left angry, and my folks are constantly worrying me about him. They won't listen to what I say. He is wealthy and is always bringing mother gifts and sends his car for us when we go out. I am of age. Isn't there some way I could get out of this tangle?

BROWN EYES."

Stick up for your right to choose a man you love and not one to please and bring gifts to your family. You have to live with him. Any parent who exacts a sacrifice like that of her child is deserving of no sacrifice from the daughter, and don't you make it.

More than an Escort.

"Dear Miss Blake: Do you think it improper for a girl to kiss a young fellow, who is more than an escort, good-night?

G. H. A."

How much more is more than an escort? Is he half way between an escort and a fiancé? These fine graduations are confusing. However, the confusion does not refer to the kissing privileges. If he is more than an escort and still less than a fiancé—no kisses.

Too Old for You.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 16 and have fallen madly in love with a man of 30. Do you think he is too old for me? We want to get married, but mother objects. Do you believe it would be advisable to elope?

R. F."

Yes.

No. You'd be sorry for the rest of your life.

It's Up to You.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 21 and have been out a few times with a girl I dearly love. Other fellows ask her for dates, but she always refuses them and never refuses me, and at the same time she does not act as though she loves me. Please tell me what you think of her.

H. E."

She may not love you, but she must think more of you than she does of any of the others—and that should give you much hope. Now, it is up to you to make her love you by being so kind and nice to her she will have to do it in spite of herself.

About Hair Waving

by Antoinette Donnelly

IS marcel hair waving ever going out of style? This is a question asked daily of hairdressers. And they reply in lusty chorus "No, never! Styles of hairdressing may come and go, but the marcel wave waves on forever."

The reason? Naturally curly hair makes the most fascinating hairdress, but unfortunately for humans and fortunately for the hirsute profession relatively few women have natural curls, and the best imitation is undoubtedly the marcel wave.

Result of an Experiment.

The first marcel wave was given in the year 1885 by one M. Marcel, a Parisian coiffure artist. His mother had naturally curly hair, but as in the cases of many naturally waved heads, there were unruly strands of stubborn straightness. With these M. Marcel experimented until he had them following in consistent ripples from whichever angle one viewed her head.

Then he experimented on heads of straight hair with such results that ere long his work was in such demand that the line of women willing to stand and wait resembled the familiar bread line in length and standing durability.

The fad became so popular that the rich women bribed M. Marcel's time with more money, so that in 1885 competition for his hand and his curling iron on their precious heads became so rife he received as high as $50 for a single wave. He instructed directly only one pupil, and retired to a life of ease and millions and the possible reflection that "all is not vanity."

Hairdressers afterward improved this method, and today every hairdressing parlor includes at least one good marceling iron in its equipment. And the demand grows steadily. Time was when a woman had attained the marcel stage of success she demanded a Frenchman for the work. But now American hands are proving to be quite as adept with the marcel iron as American throats with operatic notes, and the future promises a bright outlook for the painstaking and energetic operator.

Not Harmful if Done Well.

"Is marcel waving harmful?" and "How long will the wave stay in?" are the questions most often repeated in connection with this phase of the decorative art.

If done painstakingly and correctly it is not harmful, but as in every other profession and line of work there are careless and inefficient operators who use irons that are too hot because they are either too busy to care for anything than that the work is over with to make way for another head, or else they just don't care whether they burn the hair or not.

Naturally when intrusting the only head of hair you have to a marcel operator you should use the same instinct for protection you do when choosing a doctor for your ills. You would not drop into any office whose window carried an M. D. after a name to be prescribed for in the case of sickness without first inquiring about the reliability and the professional standing of the doctor. A little such caution is advisable where hair preservation is dear to your heart.

Permanency Cannot Be Guaranteed.

Some women, I am told, will try to exact a guarantee that the wave will remain in the hair for a certain length of time, and an operator less conscientious than might be will use a hotter iron, with the result that if it does not singe the hair it will dry it out. No one can guarantee the permanency of a marcel wave. It depends upon the texture of the hair and its degree of natural curliness or straightness.

In some cases the marcel will hold for three or four weeks, in others but from three to four days. So it is better to have it done more frequently at a harmless heat than to demand a long time duration of the wave.

Dark hair should be waved with a large curl to avoid a kinky effect. Light gray and blonde hair show up most prettily under the marcel treatment.

Water Wave Pretty.

Hair that curls naturally but not enough to satisfy should be given the water wave treatment instead of the hot iron. It is almost impossible to give oneself a water wave, as it is done by combing the hair in waves and holding them in place by tiny combs or ribbons and letting the hair dry. A curling fluid is sometimes added to the water in which the combs are dipped.

Hair that has been dyed and bleached should never be permanently waved. Nor must one think the permanent in the permanent wave is permanent for life. It requires doing over every six months, for hair grows on an average from eight to ten inches a year, and the hair nearest the scalp loses the curl most quickly. By water waving a permanent wave you get the appearance of a perfect marcel.

The baking method of permanent waving is harmful. If one's hair needs curling for the good of one's face or the good of one's soul, all I can advise is that you intrust it to the care of some one you know to be honest and conscientious as well as efficient.

Beauty Answers

By Antoinette Donnelly

Write you about that, too fat, too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair oily skin freckles pimples or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic a diet or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly The Tribune Chicago

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

MOLLY: IT STANDS TO REASON that if the hair falls out during and after a sickness the state of health bears directly on the quality and quantity of hair. The flu epidemic of a year ago left a tremendous number of bereaved heads in its wake. But with the regaining of health and strength and the complete elimination of the toxins the hair began to come back again. First, therefore, in correcting hair falling you must eliminate any physically destructive germ that your body is harboring. Then be scrupulous about cleanliness of the scalp. Wash your hair frequently. You won't wash the oil out, as a popular fallacy hath it. On the contrary, you increase the oil distribution by stimulating the pores of the scalp. Immediately after the wash it may seem drier—but a few persistent brushings will remedy that.

WIFE: THERE WAS NEVER A normal and healthy man who did not prefer an attractive woman with a merry laugh to a tired, peevish one and a perfectly dustless home. Let the dust gather on the furniture rather than on yourself. Let the windows go dirty—but not yourself.

ANXIOUS: THE TONIC WOULD not make your friend's hair curly. It must have been wavy anyway. You cannot believe everything that some hair tonics are advertised to be able to do. Temper your judgment with a wee grain of mercy, and do not expect a hair tonic to do what nature didn't.

LOVE LETTERS

How does a love letter contest appeal to you? Don't you love to read them? Don't you love to receive them? Can you write a good one yourself? The Tribune is going to pay $5 for every love letter published. So if you can write a good one or if you have one in your private or family possession you would like to enter in the contest send it to Doris Blake, Chicago Tribune. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

LOVE THAT INSPIRES.

DEAREST GIRL: I know you are looking forward with keen anticipation for the fulfillment of my promise, to write to my own beloved at my earliest opportunity after reaching France.

Your dear face is ever before me, and I thank the divine master for the incident which brought us together. It will always be a day for thanksgiving in our lives.

The knowledge that I had the love of a sweet, pure girl like you made my departure much pleasanter. Of course, it meant leaving you behind, but am I not here to do my bit for your safety and honor, as well as others?

From the beginning of my life, I think, the spirit of my angel mother has hovered over me, aiding me in my attempts to be manly, upright, and honest. Now I am further inspired by our mutual love.

How long will seem the days, although they will be filled with activity, and, if the good Lord so wills it, I will return to my native country and my promised bride.

It hardly seems possible that such love exists. The love I gave to you is not the transient passion of a boy, but the steadfast, everlasting love of a man. Since the day of our bethrothal my heart has known no shadow of turning from its fidelity.

The spring of my happiness is that after all I content you. The time may pass slowly, but before we realize it our day of days will be here, and you and I will be made one, inseparable for all time.

I send you all my love.

Yours always, BOB.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

HATS FOR EARLY SPRING.

NO woman ever possessed too many hats at one time, and if she can do her own millinery she is fortunate, for hats cost a good deal, even the less expensive ones. If a woman makes her own hats, she will usually have three or four, while her less fortunate sister will probably not have more than one or two a season.

A fascinating variety of buckram shapes are shown in any of the stores, and when the shape is chosen, one has a variety of materials from which to choose the covering—satin, taffeta, duvetyn, and crepe de chine being the most favored materials.

Milliners' needles and millinery paste will help, and before separating the crown from the brim be sure to mark both in the middle back, so you will know just how they go together again. Then one has to be careful in covering the parts not to make them smaller where they fit over the head.

A small, close fitting shape was seen covered in brown crepe de chine. There was a smoothly covered crown and a narrow brim that rolled up, which was also smoothly covered. Then there was a wide strip of the material slightly shirred into a piping of the same.

This piping went around the upper part of the hat so that just the top of the hat showed above it, and the shirred crepe was rather loosely draped over the hat from the piping down to the bottom. Where the draping ended there was a fold of the crepe not over five-eighths of an inch wide, put smoothly around the hat, covering the edge of the draped piece and ending in a small tailored bow in the middle of the front.

Another hat, covered in taffeta, had for trimming fan shaped pieces of matching ribbon. The ribbon was 2 inches wide and knife plaited. It was cut in 3 inch lengths, and each piece was gathered up tightly at one end, and the opposite end was spread out, fan shaped. These were put on, all around the hat, slightly overlapping, and so that they covered the hat from the brim to the crown.

A small turban covered with duvetyn in henna, blue, or gray will be attractive looking with the brim covered or faced with taffeta in a contrasting color. The only trimming necessary will be some hand made flowers in contrasting shades. These small hats are ideal for general street or motor wear, and with the addition of a stunning veil cannot fail to be becoming. Gray would be beautiful with orange or blue as the contrasting color.

Answer to Sewing Queries.

MRS. R. D. R.: We have no transfer ink for the embroidery designs, but you can transfer them successfully by tracing on tissue paper, using a soft pencil, then laying the pencil side of the paper down on the material and going over the pattern again with the pencil. The second tracing will cause the tracing on the side next to the cloth to leave the outline on the material.

A READER: I hope you will like this little design and the one printed a few weeks ago. You can doubtless find the sort of elaborate design for a lunch or tea cloth you write about in some of the embroidery catalogues sold at most any magazine stand. It would be impossible to give enough space here to show such a design large enough to copy from.

ASKING FOR A RAISE

MARION, Dorothy, and I already been served before joined us at luncheon Thursday. Dorothy started to say, "What would you when she caught sight of Ann toward us, and broke off to "Here comes Ann. I'll wait until here before I ask your advice."

As Ann took her place at Dorothy heaved a sigh of relief said, "I was afraid you were ing, Ann."

"Why afraid?" Ann asked smiled across at Dorothy. right, dear. There's nothing about as far as I'm concerned.

"I wasn't worried about you wanted to ask your advice about thing." Dorothy ignored Ann ing, and went on: "I just for this morning that one of the the office, who hasn't been firm as long as I, was given a tion and a raise in salary last It seems unjust to me. I think serve a raise as much as a Several of the girls went in to manager the minute they heard it, and demanded a raise for selves. I couldn't bring myself the point of doing that. I think ever, that I've more right to tion than she has. Would you me to try for it now?"

"No!" Ann, Marion, and I echoed in chorus. Our vehemence startled Dorothy. When she recovered herself she said:

"I nearly made a fatal mistake. I'd like to know, though, haven't as much right to a raise as any of the other girls."

"Right—right," Ann repeated her. "Why do you keep emphasizing that word? In applying for tion or a raise in salary, it seems me that your success depends much upon what you consider rights in the matter as your right to choose the psychological time to present your request."

"Tell me," Ann continued, "how know if any of the girls who ed salary increases this month the strength of the raise given one of your office force last week what they asked for?"

"Well——" Dorothy hesitated a moment before answering. "I don't that they did. None of them told exactly what happened during the interview with the manager, but I gathered from the general talk around that they had each been put off with some sort of indefinite promise, only positive effect their demands had as far as I could see, was to irritate the manager. He was as cross as

WON WITH VIOLETS

ABOUT forty years ago, after father was graduated from college, there was great excitement over the finding of gold in the Klondike. He caught the fever and started to work his way there.

In April, 1883, he was in Seattle working on a newspaper. He and other newspaper men lived together, and one night one of them invited them to the birthday party of a girl friend. Father accepted, and when he arrived, George, his companion, presented Miss Bessie with a bouquet made in the style of the day—rows of flowers, placed round and bound with lace paper, and finished with a tinfoil holder.

The young belle, surrounded by many admirers, did not seem overwhelmed at meeting the stranger father. In fact, she was spoiled and not easy to please. George, in a sentimental tone, asked her if the flower was her favorite. She looked at his bouquet and announced, "violets." There was not a violet in George's bouquet.

Father rushed from the room, went to a florist's, and demanded violets. Recklessly he said: "I want all you got in the place."

Miss Bessie thanked him, but said his flowers no more appreciated than she had to those George presented.

Thereafter George and father were rivals. From that night he heard little about the Klondike. And on Bessie's next birthday they eloped.

And now father likes to tell how he got the violets and how George had to borrow his best ties to go courting, and how he (father) used to help Bessie with her lessons, which she says is the reason that to this day she can

"Why afraid?" Ann asked as she smiled across at Dorothy. "I'm all right, dear. There's nothing to worry about as far as I'm concerned."

"I wasn't worried about you; I just wanted to ask your advice about something." Dorothy ignored Ann's teasing, and went on: "I just found out this morning that one of the girls in the office, who hasn't been with the firm as long as I, was given a promotion and a raise in salary last week. It seems unjust to me. I think I deserve a raise as much as she does. Several of the girls went in to see the manager the minute they heard about it, and demanded a raise for themselves. I couldn't bring myself up to the point of doing that. I think, however, that I've more right to a promotion than she has. Would you advise me to try for it now?"

"No!" Ann, Marion, and I exclaimed in chorus. Our vehemence rather startled Dorothy. When she recovered herself she said:

"I nearly made a fatal mistake, I see. I'd like to know, though, why I haven't as much right to ask for a raise as any of the other girls."

"Right—right," Ann repeated after her. "Why do you keep emphasizing that word? In applying for a promotion or a raise in salary, it seems to me that your success depends not so much upon what you conider your rights in the matter as your happening to choose the psychological moment to present your request."

"Tell me," Ann continued, "do you know if any of the girls who demanded salary increases this morning, on the strength of the raise granted to one of your office force last week, got what they asked for?"

"Well——" Dorothy hesitated a moment before answering. "I can't say that they did. None of them told me exactly what happened during her interview with the manager, but I gathered from the general talk afterward that they had each been put off with some sort of indefinite promise. The only positive effect their demands had as far as I could see, was to irritate the manager. He was as cross as a bear for the rest of the morning. I suppose that was really why I couldn't get my courage screwed up to the asking point."

"Yes, I suppose it was," said Ann. "Your instinct was right there, and you probably wouldn't have thought of asking for a raise today if you hadn't been influenced by the unwise decisions of the other girls."

Marion and I, realizing Ann's great influence over Dorothy, sat back and let her do the talking.

"Ask for a raise whenever you think you deserve it," advised Ann, "but don't ask for one simply because you happen to discover that some one else in the office got one. That's rather a high-handed method to use in order to advance yourself, and it's an unwise one, too. I've never known it to work.

"The last time you asked for a raise and got it, did you think that every other girl in the office should have had one at that time, too, and for the same reason? No, of course you didn't," she said, as Dorothy shook her head. "If you really feel that you ought to be earning more money, wait until this present excitement in the office subsides, then, when you do present your request, it will stand on its own merits."

"I didn't expect this sort of answer from you, Ann, but I'll admit it's a relief. I'd much rather wait and ask peaceably for a raise a little later on than have to fight for it now, as the other girls intend doing."

"Just one thing more," said Ann, detaining Dorothy as she was about to leave us. "When you do ask for a raise, later on, don't advertise your decision in the office. Keep the result of it to yourself."

One of Her Old Flames.

I expected a phone call from a friend of mine at about 8 o'clock, and at 9 I had just about given up all hope of receiving it, when the bell suddenly rang. I hastened to answer it, and in my coldest tone said: "Well! It's certainly about time you were giving me the pleasure of hearing your voice again." What was my surprise and horror to find that it was one of my old flames who wanted a date for the following day. R. B.

Let 'Em Go By.

I am 6 feet 4 and weigh 220. I got my first tryout with a big league team after having made quite a reputation as a hitter in the minors, and as the club did not have a uniform that would fit me for the time being, I made out with an outfit that I could just squeeze into. The breeches looked like a pair of tights and were so short in the legs that the waist line was some six inches lower than it should have been. The shirt was short, too, and this made it difficult for me to keep the two garments properly joined up. I got my first chance as a pinch hitter in a rather exciting game. We were opposed by one of the smallest pitchers in the league, and as I stepped to the plate he advanced a few steps and looked me over from head to foot. I knew that he was directing the gaze of ten thousand fans right at me. Friend pitcher smiled and stepped back to the box as the fans howled. I figured that he would try to make me break my back reaching for a wide one, and I decided to wait him out. I did so as he slipped over three strikes one after the other. The pitcher just gazed and smiled, but the fans were more unkind than ever and as I hit that long, long trail back to the dugout my humiliation was 100 per cent plus. R. H.

She Knew Him Well.

Waiting to change trains at a small country station, I felt sorry for a woman who walked to the ticket office and at once became the target for the cross and cranky old agent on the other side of the window. Seeing her board the same train I was taking, I followed her into the coach and, sitting near her, took advantage of my opportunity in referring to the cross old crank of an agent who had so unmercifully and shamefully abused her at the ticket window. In my indignation I expressed my opinion of him in glowing terms. To my great surprise and embarrassment, she turned coldly to me and replied, "You can't tell me anything about that man. I've been his wife for ten years and know him better than you." J. D.

WON WITH VIOLETS.

ABOUT forty years ago, just after father was graduated from college, there was great excitement over the finding of gold in the Klondike. He caught the fever, and started to work his way west.

In April, 1883, he was in Denver, working on a newspaper. He and two other newspaper men lived together, and one night one of them invited him to the birthday party of a girl he knew. Father accepted, and when they arrived, George, his companion, presented Miss Bessie with a beautiful bouquet made in the style of the times—rows of flowers, placed regularly, bound with lace paper, and finished with a tinfoil holder.

The young belle, surrounded by many admirers, did not seem overwhelmed at meeting the stranger—father. In fact, she was spoiled and not easy to please. George, in a most sentimental tone, asked her what flower was her favorite. She glanced at his bouquet and announced, "Violets." There was not a violet in poor George's bouquet.

Father rushed from the room, drove to a florist's, and demanded violets. Recklessly he said: "I want all you've got in the place."

Miss Bessie thanked him, but gave his flowers no more appreciation than she had to those George had presented.

Thereafter George and father were rivals. From that night he forgot all about the Klondike. And on Bessie's next birthday they eloped.

And now father likes to tell us about the violets and how George used to borrow his best ties to go courting, and how he (father) used to help mother with her lessons, which she says is the reason that to this day she can't spell.

THE UMBRELLA MOVEMENT.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—If it didn't rain every minute and if I could, therefore, spare my old red umbrella, I think I should have it made over into a skirt. That would be a step toward putting me into the present fashion. All along the boulevards you are hearing about the umbrella movement, and what it means is that the skirts and lower tunics of the season look exactly like an umbrella when it is lowered but not rolled. They are tight over the hips, and around the bottom they ripple.

Here is one that is like an umbrella cut in half and a section hung over either hip. Molyneux showed it the other day at his opening. The dress is of white taffeta, belted in black malacchite (a precious and expensive stone, by the way), edged with black jet beads. The neck is round, and the sleeves, as you can see, are short, although most of the sleeves of the season seem to be either long or of three-quarter length—and I think the latter prevail. (In other words, whatever you like, go to it.) The bottom of the umbrella is edged with black jet, as are the neck and sleeves. A square parasol in white taffeta, edged with black fringe, is a part of this costume, and also a white hat entirely covered with a black veil, which ties on each side and falls in points.

The umbrella movement is, as a matter of fact, merely the lesson of the master which has been assimilated and applied. Paul Poiret, the greatest artist of them all, has used it during the winter, and now in the spring it comes out as a popular style.

The second is one of his dresses which will be good for the next two years. I saw it worn at the theater, the other evening by a rather tall, very fair girl. The bodice is of shiny black satin. From the sides of it hung a gray tulle tunic that was the beginning of the umbrella movement. As you will see, it was the umbrella halved and appended from the hips only. Some of the later ones grow straight round the waist and ripple along the hem. The edges of the umbrella were bordered in wide bands of gray fox fur, and the body of it was hung over a skirt of silver cloth edged with a black ruche of the satin.

As for some generalizations on spring styles: There is promise of a great deal of embroidery in "paillettes" or flat beads made into big, bold designs, rather romanesque or byzantine in character. There is a reminiscence of the 1830 and the Louis XVI. styles.

Full draperies sometimes fall over slender skirts. Little capes, such as will be worn a great deal on coats, are also shown separately for afternoons. Many tailored jackets are short, and as for separate wraps, most of those I have seen look like a bathrobe, with a yoke across the back and drawn into the kimono line across the knees, or allowed to hang straight, at the caprice of the wearer.

The third dress represents a quiet little thing for afternoon wear on the boulevards. It is really most effective and not as loud as it looks, for that futuristic pattern over it is not a print or an embroidery, but coarse black lace, the ground being of white taffeta. Over the sides at the hips fall square pieces that suggest the line of the short coat of the day.

The hat is, as I am informed, in the Charles II. manner. It is wide, flat, and of black satin with an uncurled ostrich plume of white speeping round it.

We do not seem for the most part, to be turning to the courts and the superrefinements of life for our inspirations this summer. The fourth sketch shows the source of some of our designs. It is a peasant's costume, sublimated, and shown, as was the foregoing, by Molyneux at his opening.

Of course, a peasant doesn't really dress like this even for church on Sunday. It sort of makes you think of Queen Marie Antoinette, when she played at being a milkmaid.

This costume comes nearer imitating the real thing than that. It is made in gay colors of printed cotton edged wherever possible with black and white. It has a tiny waistcoat with straps over the shoulders and a frill of turquoise blue taffeta round the waist. The sleeves are full, and they drop off the shoulders. The mannequin, when she showed it, carried a white rustic leghorn hat faced with blue.

Bright Sayings of the Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

Harold had been given permission to go to his grandmother's, who lived near by. It was nearly noon, and grandma invited Harold to stay to luncheon.

To her mystification he said: "I will if you ask me twice more."

She did so, and Harold enjoyed his luncheon. When his mother called for him later, grandma asked her what he meant.

His mother said: "I told him not to stay to luncheon unless you insisted upon it." M. L. L.

The evening before, Raymond had been at a picnic in a beautiful woods near the river. At breakfast, when asked by his mother: "What would you like to do today?" he replied: "Let's go out and eat in the dirt." A. C.

One day I was hearing a recitation in my third grade hygiene class, and we were studying muscles. I asked if any one could tell me what caused the cat's hair to stand up straight at times. The youngsters all looked thoughtful, and finally one little girl replied: "The dog." S.

Betty watched her grandfather while he cut the chickens' wing feathers to prevent them from flying over the poultry yard fence. Several days later grandpa was having grandma trim the few gray hairs that surrounded the pink baldness of his head. Betty was again an interested observer. Presently she asked, "Grandfodder, is you having your fedders cut, too?" C. V. B.

A woman who came to see mother brought her little girl also to play with Miriam.

As the children went into the next room in order not to disturb the grown-ups, mother said: "After a little while, Miriam, do not forget to give the little girl some cake and fruit."

What was our amusement, some five minutes later, to hear the little visitor say insistently: "Miriam, why don't you do what your mother told you to." I. S.

Howard sat beside me at the movies. He had a bag of peppermints in his pocket and would frequently hand me one. Finally he whispered to me: "Say, if you would just suck them they would last longer." M. H.

Tommy, whose chief concern for the moment was the hip pocket which was not to be, was a picture of dejection as his mother gave instructions to the seamstress that his new trousers should thus be made. She excused the omission by saying it made one extra pocket to clean out and was of itself useless. The seamstress, an old friend and herself a mother, felt sorry for the little fellow and interceded for him. When mother said "Very well,"

Tommy, in deep gratitude, stepped to the side of his friend and said: "Gee! Now I can show Bobby he is not the whole cheese; I'll go downtown on Sunday, too, and come home with a funny paper in my hip pocket." M. R.

For many years we have had an uncle living with us and next door a child by the name of Mary. She would sometimes meet my father and would always speak to him, and sometimes meet my uncle—not knowing it was my uncle—and would always speak to him. One day she met them together and went home and said to her mother: "I saw Albert's two fathers this afternoon." A. C. J.

How to Secure a Good Position

During the war it was easy for girls to find employment. As a matter of fact, employment found them. Many girls, without any previous experience whatsoever, got positions paying $20, $25 and even $30 a week.

But that was only a temporary condition. Times have changed!

Think of a concern getting more than 100 applications for a stenographic position from a single "want ad." That happened just the other day. And two years ago the same want ad was inserted for a whole week without bringing a single reply.

The trouble is that there are too many girls doing certain kinds of work. The supply is greater than the demand. There are also too many girls trying to get positions who have never taken a business course—in anything!

We advise every girl who is looking to the future to consider filing. It is a necessary department of a business. Its importance is being recognized more and more every day. The work is pleasant and interesting and the salaries are good.

The best place to learn filing is at The Illinois School of Filing. We say "best" because all systems of filing are taught there by actual practice. You learn by doing.

May we make a suggestion?

Write today for the 54-page book called—"Filing as a Profession for Women." It will be sent to you absolutely free.

It will answer all your questions. It will tell you all about this interesting profession for women. It may save you lots of worry in securing a position.

AN ADAPTABLE BUNGALOW

MACAULAY was the first writer to sing the praises of specialization. "A tool that is designed both to shave and to carve," he informed us, "cannot possibly shave so well as a razor or cut so well as a carving knife." It sounded well, and for a generation all the people cried "amen!"

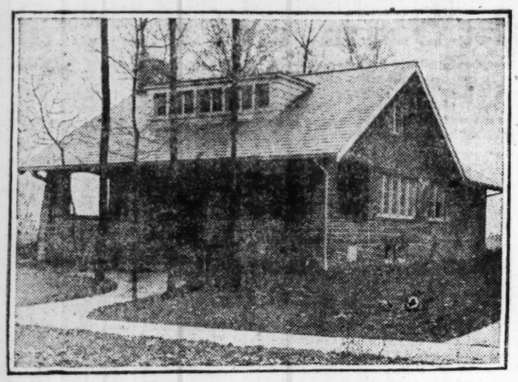
Now, however, folks are beginning to have doubts; or rather, they are finding that what holds true of a razor and a carving knife is not always true of all other things. We are learning anew that human society, and even the separate human family, is a changeable, variable thing, and that if we specialize too sharply to suit one phase, we shall be out of touch with all others. It is best not to diagram the future too closely and to have a little adaptability in reserve.

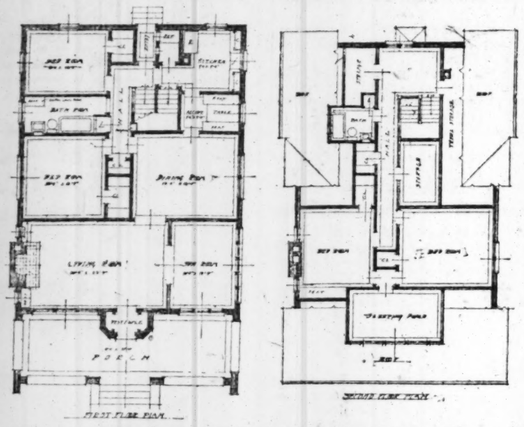
The brick bungalow here shown has this adaptability to a remarkable degree. It provides for a small family on one floor or for a much larger family by utilizing both floors. It has a simple alcove for informal meals and a capacious dining room for formal ones. In a word, it is not too highly specialized, and is far the more valuable on that account.

This bungalow starts with a pleasing exterior, which is a good asset for either an individual or a house. The main roof comes over the front porch in an unobstructed sweep, and gives that hovering, brooding, protecting look which we all demand of a roof, even though we do not always know why. The lifted dormer relieves this long roof line without seeming to break it, as a ridged dormer would do.

In fact, the roof is so impressive that the architect had to take special pains to keep it from dominating the whole house. He has done this most sucessfully. The substantial porch pillars, broadening toward the base, look competent to hold up anything, and balance the roof. Another balancing feature are the arches at the ends of the porch. There is something satisfying and sustaining looking about an arch.

The floor plans are as good as the outside leads one to expect. In front of all is an entrance porch, eleven feet deep, and running clear across the house. The vestibule projects into the porch—where there is ample room for it, thus providing a pleasing variation as well as conserving the space inside the walls.





From the vestibule you come straight into the large living room, 13 feet 4 inches by 22 feet 9 inches. The outer long wall of this room, fronting on the porch, is composed almost wholly of windows. The outer short wall, at the left as you enter, is occupied by an ample fireplace, with a seat on one side and a built-in bookcase on the other. A long stretch of unbroken wall opposite the porch side and a protected corner near the vestibule afford places for the larger items of furniture.

At the opposite end of the living room from the fireplace is the opening to the sun room, 10 feet by 13 feet 4 inches. This has three windows opening on the porch and five on the side, and thus is flooded with light, part of which goes on into the living room.

Back of the sun room, but reached only through the main living quarters, is the dining room, 13 feet by 16, with a fine window group; a handsome place for formal meals or for the ordinary meals of a large family. One suspects that a small family, however, would eat here only on what might be called state occasions, for just back of the dining room, in the region usually occupied by the butler's pantry, is an alcove too cozy to be resisted. A long table is place end-on to a window, built in seats are on either side of it, the kitchen is a step away—and so long as there is room enough, what more does a family want?

The kitchen itself is small, 9 by 9½ feet. The best experience seems to show that small kitchens save work. It is lighted from two sides, with a sink under one window, flanked by cabinets, and the range in a recess with a hood over it. The refrigerator is in still another alcove, and is filled from the rear entry. This icebox alcove really serves as a store closet.

The passage from the kitchen to the service entry leads past the stairs which go to the basement and those to the upper floor, and opens on a rear hall. This hall gives access to two bedrooms and a bath. One of the bedrooms is quite large, the other of good size, and both have ample closets. There is a linen closet at one end of the hall, and a clothes chute in the bathroom.

Here, then, is a first floor fully equipped for a small family. But if the family grows, the upstairs is available, too. Here there are two large bedrooms, a bath, and two storage attics, while the lifted dormer noted from the outside shelters a delightful sleeping porch.

The house is built to last; brick walls, metal lath and gypsum plaster on the interior, asphalt shingles for the roof. It is a most admirable design; beautiful, substantial, labor saving, and fitted to the needs of a growing family. This is one of the dwellings that never will be out of date.

Bellboy to the Rescue.

Four of us decided to take a trip to Michigan. We sat on deck until an early hour in the morning, then all lazily got into our berths. We were all in one room—two were obliged to sleep in a lower berth and two in an upper.

I drew an upper berth with another long, lanky chap, and after we were all in I noticed that just outside was an electric light which struck me in the face. At the suggestion of my lanky friend I cautiously tip-toed outside the berth and unscrewed the bulb so the light was out and then turned to get back into our stateroom. Lo and behold, the other fellows, realizing that I was in pajamas, had bolted the door and refused to open it for me.

At first I thought the door had become caught, so I whispered quietly and asked them to open the door. They paid no attention to me, so I made a little noise and much to my distraction I awakened a number of other passengers who had been dozing on chairs on the deck and they came to see what the trouble was. I was greatly dismayed to have them find me in my pajamas trying to get back into my stateroom.

Finally a bell boy came to my rescue and opened the door with a skeleton key. I found the other three in the stateroom in convulsions over my sad plight. A. L.

What the Trouble Was.

I was on a train going to Toledo. At a small country town two women passengers got on and hurried through to the rear platform of the last coach, waving frantically to three others who were running down the tracks, evidently bent on catching the train. I was the conductor. We were ahead of schedule, and I was by nature more kind hearted than most conductors, so I pulled the bell rope signaling the engineer to stop. People rose from their seats as we slowed down to see what the trouble was. With a great deal of panting and puffing the three women finally reached the coach, and as they did so the two on the rear platform descended the steps and they all bade farewell with much kissing. Then the three retraced their steps to the station, while I pulled the bell twice amid roars of laughter. Some of the passengers were knights of the grip and made regular trips, and as I was on that run those traveling men never failed to ask me when I was going to have another kissing bee. J. K.

The Wrong Freight.

In the fall of 1911 I was traveling with a bank examiner in the southern part of Minnesota. Time meant money to us, and upon finishing our work one afternoon we were informed that the only way to make the next town that day was to ride on a freight train then due to pull out. We grabbed our satchels and hurried for the station about a block away and saw a freight headed the way we wanted to go already on the move.

We ran for it as fast as our baggage would allow and were just in time to swing on the caboose at the risk of serious injury.

After going about five or six blocks it stopped and one of the train crew then coming in the caboose we asked if the train soon would proceed.

He then informed us that the freight which was going to our town was still in the yards near the station and we were obliged to get off and walk back and then had to wait a good half hour before that train really started. We both took it good naturedly and have laughed about it many times since. N. W. K.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

"I am a girl 14 years of age, and I have been ill and cannot go to school until the next term. I should like so much to get any kind of reading matter—books or magazines—as I get lonely. ELIZABETH."

Come, little girls, and share some of your favorite stories with Elizabeth. Her address is waiting for you.

"I have a boy 16 years old. He is in a hospital, and I think he will be coming home soon. He is in need of a suit of clothes and shoes. Do you think any of your kind readers has a suit they could give him? MRS. C. K."

Convalescents must be comfortably clad. If any one has clothing to fit a 16 year old boy, kindly let me hear from you.

"My husband, who is an ex-soldier, has been sick since his return from the army and is unable to work steadily. He could make some money if he could secure some patterns for scroll saw work. Patterns for parlor, bedroom, dining room, and kitchen furniture of about four inches in height are needed. If any of your readers has such patterns no longer needed I would be glad to pay for them and any parcel post charges; or if some one would loan me the patterns I will take good care of them and return same. I would also be grateful for any information given me as to where I could buy patterns of this kind. MRS. W. H. O."

I print this in the hope it will come to the notice of some one who has some scroll patterns to give to the ex-soldier.

"Could you please help me to get a pair of lace low shoes? I am a crippled girl who has to get along on crutches and I would be so thankful to you for the favor. I can wear No. 6 or 6½ shoe, and prefer a low heel. I am just out of the hospital, and am living at a convalescent home. M. L."

I present your request with warm wishes for its success.

Have Bread Filled with Raisins
For Flavor and for Health

A bread is made that's full of raisins, luscious nuggets of sun-cured California fruit, Nature's own confections.

It's called Sun-Maid Raisin Bread.

First-class bakers make it, and supply it to retailers, or you can bake it at home according to the recipe at the right. Serve such bread because it's real raisin bread and because it's healthful.

Raisins are rich in natural iron content. And natural iron in the blood makes ruddy, rosy cheeks. Rosy cheeks make pretty women prettier.

One needs but little iron daily but that need is vitally important. Eat raisins daily and be sure you're getting all the iron you need.

SUN-MAID RAISINS

Sun-Maid Raisin Bread is made with Sun-Maid Raisins, California's best.

Use these raisins for all home cooking purposes. In pies, cakes, puddings, salads, rolls, etc.

Plump, tender, juicy raisins, made from the finest table grapes. Packed in California in a great, new, immaculate plant.

Clean, sweet, wholesome American raisins—the kind you know are good.

Three varieties: Sun-Maid Seeded (seeds removed); Sun-Maid Seedless (grown without seeds); Sun-Maid Clusters (on the stem). All dealers. Insist upon the Sun-Maid brand.

SUN-MAID Raisin Bread

3 cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
3 scant teaspoons baking powder
1½ tablespoons of sugar
Sift well together
½ package Sun-Maid seeded raisins
1¼ cups milk

If desired to make bread a little richer, 2 tablespoons of butter and 1 beaten egg may be worked in. Bake 50 minutes. Will make one loaf. Cannot fail.

This recipe makes delicious raisin muffins.

How to Use the Patterns

It seems as though a small boy is always outgrowing and always wearing out his clothes. So, no doubt, mothers will welcome this pattern No. 9885. When warmer weather comes the children will need any number of changes. It will be a good idea to buy enough galatea, or whatever you prefer, for the trousers and have it thoroughly shrunken and smoothly ironed.

Be sure and make all the pockets the law allows, for a little boy has so many treasures he wishes to stow away. The bands for the buttons and buttonholes must be strong and the buttons sewed on so there is a good shank of the thread well protected by twisting or winding the thread around several times before fastening.

If you are making the shirts for play a sleeve that just covers the elbow will be much more comfortable and will not soil so easily.

There is a dart on each shoulder of pattern No. 9906, which is a desirable feature, especially if one is full across the bust. The dress is not difficult to make, the skirt and waist parts being in one—the only seams being on the shoulders and under the arms. The collar is an attractive feature and could be made detachable if one preferred—in which case one could have two or three—maybe of different materials as well as colors. If the collar is to be detachable finish the neck of the dress with a bias facing on the wrong side, being careful in any event to clip the seam at close intervals where it curves.

The long sleeve is cut with a dart up the outside from the wrist to the elbow. It is a pretty sleeve and not difficult to make. But after it is basted look carefully to see that there is no inclination to twist. If there is, open the outside seam and pin together again. It requires careful handling, as the edges are somewhat bias. In a tailored frock this seam could be finished to button almost the whole length, in which case an extension and faced hems would finish the edges. Both these hems should be cut on the straight of the cloth.

Bead girdles are pretty and a decided change from those made of the dress material. So many women are clever with the needle, they could make one of these novelties, choosing rather good sized beads.

No. 9899 is a useful pattern to have. Many women like to wear middy blouses with some odd skirt in the house; the school girl likes them sometimes, and summer ones can be made of duck, Indian head cotton, or percale. The directions with the pattern are clear and it should not be hard to make. If the long sleeves are used it will be best to try the sleeves on after basting the plaits down. They will have to be basted, too, so they do not "give" when trying on, else the sleeve may be too tight after it is finished.

I wonder if many women have trouble putting a skirt into a band. It is like anything else—hard to do unless you know how. Probably not so much trouble is had with these gathered ones as used to be with the gored ones; but a few hints may not come amiss.

Take an accurate measure of the size of your waist, also the width of the extension side of the placket, and allow besides one-half inch at each end for turning in. For instance, if the waist measures 24 inches and the width of the extension side of the placket measures one and one-half inches, and we allow one-half inch at each end for turning in, it will mean that we have a band strip that measures 26½ inches.

Tear the cloth if the band is to be of cotton, and pull a thread, as a guide to cut by, if the material is silk, linen, or anything a thread can be pulled in. Beginning at the right hand end and holding the wrong side of the skirt next to you, pin the band to the skirt at the end, after turning in one-half inch there. Then measure from the end twelve inches, which is the middle, and pin to the middle of the front gore. Measure from the middle twelve inches on the band and pin this point at the other end of the skirt. Then turn in the one-half inch at the end and pin the one and one-half inches that remain to the extension hem.

Holding the skirt next to you, pin it to the band at intervals, arranging whatever gathers there may be so there are more at the sides and back than across the front. The skirt is ready to be tried on. And if the band is pinned together exactly as it will be when finished, one can tell whether it is too tight or loose, and no changing after the stitching is done will be necessary. After the skirt is stitched to the band, the opposite edge of the band is turned in and hemmed down over the seam.

"HE WAS LAUGHING UP HIS SLEEVE ALL THE TIME."

Lives to See the Prescription He Wrote in 1892 the Worlds Most Popular Laxative Remedy

DR. W. B. CALDWELL TODAY

Born Shelbyville, Mo., March 27, 1839
Began the manufacture of his famous prescription in 1892

Founder of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, long past Biblical old age, but hale and hearty—Still sees patients daily—Wonderful achievement of a "country doctor."

WHEN I started to practice medicine, back in 1875, there were no pills or tablets or salt waters for the relief of constipation, and no artificial remedies made from coal tar.

The prescription for constipation that I used early in my practice, and which I put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid remedy, and I have never had reason to change it. I intended it for women, children and elderly people, and these need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

I am gratified to say that under successful management my prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that over eight million bottles were sold by druggists last year proves that it has won the confidence of mothers whose chief interest is the health of their children.

It is particularly pleasing to me to know that the biggest half of those eight million bottles were bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for grownups. The price of a bottle holding 50 average treatments is sixty cents; such a bottle will last a family several months.

I have never made a secret of what is in Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a compound of Egyptian Senna and other simple laxative herbs with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. These ingredients are endorsed in the U. S Pharmacopoeia. I consider Syrup Pepsin today in the serious 82nd year of my age, as I did in 1892, the best remedy a family can have in the house for the safe relief of constipation and its accompanying ills, such as headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and I believe if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

TRY IT FREE Send me your name and address and I will send you a free trial bottle of my Syrup Pepsin. Address me Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 513 Washington Street, Monticello, Illinois. Everybody now and then needs a laxative, and it is well to know the best. Write me today.

Spring Style Show

Professional models will display the garments

THE early Easter of this year prompted us to advance the date of our Fashion Show, so that women may have ample time in which to choose their spring wardrobe with discrimination.

We wish to emphasize the fact that the purpose of this style exhibit is to show women how they can dress modishly and in good taste at a moderate cost. The garments displayed on live models are standard styles which we carry in our stock, except a few that were bought for show purposes only.

Two performances daily
10:30 a. m., 2:00 p. m.

This Style Show sounds the keynote of our Spring readiness in all departments. New Spring styles are shown in millinery, in skirts and blouses, in children's apparel, in clothing for men and boys, in shoes for every member of the family, in silks and dress fabrics, in wash materials, in dress accessories of all descriptions.

A beautiful display of spring hats on models

THE new millinery styles in all their splendor are represented. Grace and becomingness are dominant in every model. All the materials of the season, all the shapes, all the tasteful trimming effects are shown. Note particularly well how beautifully the hats harmonize with the garments worn by the models.

Featuring for the opening of the season two groups of trimmed hats at 7.50 & 4.95

The new sailors, pokes, turbans, off-the-face models and other popular styles. Made of straw or straw combined with silk or georgette crepe. The prevailing colors are black, navy, henna, pheasant, jade and gray. The preferred trimming effects are flowers, ribbons and fancy pins.

Two features for the Style Show

Spring dresses at 32.50

—showing beautiful creations of Canton crepe, silk taffeta, silk satin and georgette. The very becoming straight-line models with circular skirts, basque effects or full skirts. All of them show elaborate conceptions of trimmings in embroidery and braid. Models for street and semi-formal wear included at this pricing.

Spring suits at 37.50

Tailored styles and semi-fitted models developed of the fashionable wool tricotine and always popular wool serge. The backs are ornamented with silk braid and long panels, and the waists finished with shoe string belts. Lined with a good quality silk in plain or floral patterns. Exceptionally good values at the price.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

FRIED AND BROILED FISH.

IN the technique of cookery small fishes cooked whole are called pan fish. The next larger fishes are in general too large for the pan and yet in pieces are good fried, as are most or all fish, and the most convenient pieces are often the whole side of fish of this size, although when this is thick it is usually cut in half for frying. These pieces are called fillets, or in French filet, that is, they are a strip or piece of meat without bone. We have not used the word much in American cookery.

The third form or cut of fish cooked in the pan, though more often broiled, is the fish steak or piece cut across a whole fish of the larger type, like salmon and codfish and the halibut.

An amateur in fish cookery, writing on the subject not so long ago, made the statement that fish should not be cut into round slices, but into fillets. This depends upon what sort of a fish we have. It is a waste to try to fillet fish under a pound in weight usually, and no fish with thick, meaty sides is filleted unless the long strips are then cut up into small ones. The most characteristic fish fillet is that of the sole and of our American flounder, which is often called sole on the hotel menu. It deservedly ranks as a high class cookery number.

To Fillet a Fish.

Lay fish on flat surface. With a sharp knife make an incision on the back at the base of the head and cut the meat from the whole side close to but away from the backbone; then cut off the other side. The butchers commonly prepare our whitefish thus for patrons, giving them two long slabs of fish which can be prepared with as little trouble as a slice of halibut.

Generally our fillets of fish are not skinned, but almost universally the more accomplished cooks of the world do skin the fish first before filleting it. If the fillet is to be rolled and cooked in seasoned milk for exceptionally fine service it must be skinned, but for pan frying, unless it is to be dipped in white of egg, it is best to leave the skin on and fry it on the skin side first.

The skin of the flounder is thick and unpleasant in the mouth, while the flesh of that fish has so peculiarly agreeable a flavor of its own that the perfect way to serve it is to have it in pieces of concentrated perfection like a bonbon. None of this flavor should be washed out in water, and if handled with care in the skinning there is no need of washing it. Some French directions for this read:

"Take a small sharp knife. Hold the fish by the tail in the left hand and with the right insert the knife under the skin at the base of the tail. Lift up in this way enough of the skin to take hold of it securely, and with a cloth grip this loosened skin firmly, turn the fish with the head towards you, hold it firmly on the table with the left hand, and with the right pull the skin off."

After the skin has been removed, cut off the fillets as from any other fish, but they split in the middle naturally. Fillets of flounder cut in diamond shaped pieces of one portion size are attractive and easy to cook. They may be spread with butter and broiled or simply rubbed with flour and sautéd. They make an appropriate number for the finest possible menus.

Preparing Fish for Frying.

The frying of fish being the most primitive method of cooking, it follows that they may be prepared for the pan in the most primitive ways, or again in the highly sophisticated frying batter. This or the covering of egg white and crumbs is absolutely necessary when the fish are to be fried in deep fat, but for pan frying nothing save the fisherman's cornmeal or plain flour is needed for a covering.

In fact, the camper does not always roll his fish in any of the prescribed meals, including bread crumbs. Those who believe in traveling light claim that all that is necessary is some salt, and the accomplished tramp heats a stone, brushes the ashes from it, leaving it lying in a circle of coals and puts his fish on that rock to fry, where it soon begins to "hiss and curl and shrivel."

But while we want little pan fish to be crisp we do not really want them to shrivel. We dry them, dip them in milk or egg and then in crumbs or flour, in order that the surface shall stiffen or crisp and hold in the moisture of the fish instead of drying up the flesh. And those who fry fish in deep fat break the back bone before it is immersed in the fat, so that it will not curl.

Cleaning Pan Fish.

But first we must clean our fish, and never, before or after this process, throw them in water to stand and become flavorless. Many recipes give contrary directions. And after they are cleaned many cooks like to season them with salt, wrap them in a clean cloth, and let them lie for an hour or so before frying them. But, notice, they are wrapped. Moisture escapes from fish that have been cut, whether into steaks or fillets or just cleaned.

One of the most objectionable things in the marketing of fish today in many places is the cutting up of fish in thin steaks and exposing them on counter or in windows. They not only lose moisture, and with it flavor, but they catch dirt and dust. If we did not have so many unobserved food laws today I would like to have a law to prevent this. A list of the fish on hand prominently exposed would do just as well. We can most of us read.

The expert cleaner of fish cuts off the head of a small fish and draws it at the same time, and the professional cook uses scissors for the fins. But those who like to scrape out that dark lining under the backbone, cut off the two ventral fins first, and then slit the belly to the anus in order to vent. Holding it briefly under water, the dark lining is scraped out with a pointed knife.

There is a whole code for our behavior in eating fish, with the supposedly hard and fast item that we must never touch it with a knife. In places where there are highly trained waiters they do that for you, first showing you the cooked and garnished whole fish. They then take it to a side table and remove the fillets from the cooked fish, presenting you boneless portions.

And this is done even for small pan fish. If you want to do this yourself the task is made easier if in cleaning the fish a half inch slice is taken off the back the whole length of the fish. Then if it is correctly cooked the little fillets slip away from the backbone so easily that the fork is all that is needed.

Cooking Pan Fish.

When a pan fish is correctly fried the flesh readily separates from the backbone, just as a cake separates from the sides of the pan when it is baked enough. The flesh of the fish can be dried to the bones.

The ideal is that it should not be too wet nor too dry. Too wet, it is likely to suggest slimyness. Too dry, it is like brown egg white. The flesh of a dainty fish, like herring or small perch, is held together by something corresponding to egg white, or it is the same thing chemically.

Quickly browned on the surface and then finished over a smaller amount of fire, allowing five or six minutes to a side, will usually produce the desired effects in the case of small pan fish. One of the best fats in which to cook the fish, especially if they are rolled in finely granulated corn meal, is that from salt pork, two or three tablespoons of it. If hot butter is used much the same precautions must be taken as in cooking an omelet. It must not be burned, and it burns easily when hot enough for the fish to be put into the pan.

Fish Steaks.

Fish steaks need protection, but are not usually rolled in flour or crumbs for broiling, although they may be for frying or sautéing. They are brushed with butter or some fine oil, instead, or better yet, they are marinated, which is desirable when they are market fish far from the shore.

Marinating Fish Steaks.

Rub a bowl with the cut end of a clove of garlic if you have it, but you can get on without this if you use onion. For two large slices of salmon steak put into the bowl a teaspoon of salt, some paprika, or pepper, three tablespoons of oil, and one of vinegar. Whisk these with a fork until creamy, and pour these over a small onion cut in slices on a platter or plate large enough for the fish.

Turn the slices of fish over and over in this and broil at once, or let them remain in it for an hour to marinate, turning them several times during the hour. Broil fish in hot oven with the broiler far enough from the flame so that the fish may not burn.

For an inch steak allow from twelve to sixteen minutes, but time depends on the nearness of steak to fire, heat of oven when it is put in, etc. A hot broiling oven with the gas lowered after a minute or two is desirable.

Fish Sauces.

The hot Hollandaise sauce is difficult for most people to make, and even presumable experts serve it curdled. A substitute for it is a stiff white sauce flavored with lemon juice or vinegar and thickened more with egg yolks than with flour. Egg sauce is quite exclusively used with boiled fish as is horseradish sauce, but sauce Tartare is favored with pan fish.

Sauce Tartare.

One cup of mayonnaise, one tablespoon of olives chopped fine, one tablespoon of chopped gherkin, one teaspoon of onion juice or—if to be used at once—chopped chives to taste. An even teaspoon of mustard should be used in seasoning the mayonnaise. Capers may be used instead of olives or gherkin, in which case season all the additions with a rather vinegary French dressing before adding them to the mayonnaise.

Garnishing Pan Fish.

Sprigs of mint, although not commonly used, make cooked pan fish attractive, but watercress and quarters of lemon are more common. Some people spread the fish and garnish out rather thin perhaps to prevent steaming, but modern taste does not sanction this.

Broiling Fish in a Pan.

A government expert and demonstrator—there is a government bulletin on the subject—showed us how to bake fish in a 500 or 600 degree oven, so cooking a large quantity at one time and saving the odor of frying fish. She dipped her fish in heavily salted milk with one hand, in crumbs with the other, put them in a buttered pan, sprinkled a few drops of oil over them and then put them into the superheated oven.

But it is sometimes difficult to get an oven as hot as that in these days, and a woman who is successful in feeding a large number every day puts her dipped fish in a large pan in this same way, but cooks them under the broiler. It is easier to get the broiling oven hot, and the upper surface of the fish get a surface we like in broiler fish. Take up with spatula as you turn your pan fish with that utensil.

By Percy Hammond

GEORGE S. KAUFMAN and Marc Connelly, the New York newspaper men who wrote "Dulcy," seemed so tranquil during the first performance on last Sunday night that their acquaintances were impelled to wonder. Here they were, two youthful dramatists experiencing the Great Adventure of a Chicago Sunday night premiere, and giving in the process none of the evidences of so agonizing a travail. Both, of course, are typical New Yorkers. Long-traveled in the ways of men, they are inured to excitements, and a little weary of life's tedious inertias and fluctuations. They have the repose, the poised unconcern, the elegant equilibrium of men of the world—or at least they seemed to have on Sunday night as they gracefully inspected "Dulcy" and its first audience at the Cort. Their demeanor was as cool as that of Marjorie Fleming's famous turkey hen—

". . . who was more than usual calm
And did not give a single dam."

None, however, but an author knows an author's cares; and following the initial performance of "Dulcy" Mr. Connelly gave me an account of his emotions and those of his collaborator. Their Sunday evening's placidity and indifference were, it seems, but spurious, the metropolitan counterfeit of a graceful insouciance that did not exist. The night, Mr. Connelly infers, was one of frightful frets and torments, and he is willing to believe with the essayist that there is no hell for playwrights in the next world—they suffer so much in this.

"Up to last Sunday night," said Mr. Connelly, "I always thought that a collaborator was a fairly useful creature. It's really the ideal way to write a play—having a collaborator. He comes around with an idea for a play and says what do you think of it, and should the first act be laid after lunch or in the garden, and you say yes, and when will the advance royalty be ready? Then, during the next few weeks, he sketches the plot in greater detail, while you go to his house for dinner occasionally and agree with him. Then, during the month that follows, he begins to put the dialogue together, while you do the really hard work, such as telling your friends about it. I never could understand all this talk about playwriting being so difficult. It's really very simple, once you get the system.

"But that was all prior to last Sunday night, when 'Dulcy' opened at the Cort. I don't know just what should be done with a collaborator on an opening night—I'm about half for chloroform and half for strangulation. Personally, I never was calmer in my life. Around about 8 o'clock, for example, when I saw people actually paying money for tickets, I calmly ran up and down the balcony stairs about six times, just to prove that I was in full possession of my faculties. It was shortly after that that I entered the theater and first discovered George Kaufman, my collaborator.

"My first thought was that the ushers had forgotten to take the white cover off one of the seats, but when I looked again I saw it was Kaufman. I introduced myself.

"'Do you think they're enjoying the play?' he asked, giving a wonderful imitation of a phonograph record of the early nineties.

"'It's hard to tell until the curtain goes up,' I answered.

"The lady who was with me then assisted me to my seat, although I could have walked about twice the distance without any help at all. At the end of the first act I felt sure the play was a hit. I pushed a lot of dramatic critics out of my way and went out on the sidewalk hunting for Kaufman.

"'My God! Wasn't it terrible?' he asked.

"'What?' I inquired.

"'The play,' he answered.

"'This play?' I repeated.

"'If you could call it that,' he said.

"I went back to my seat and the second act began. Once more the audience seemed to like it. I was feeling pretty chipper again when I found my way outside during the next intermission. The living corpse was waiting for me.

"'They—they seem to like it,' I faltered.

"'There's a train at 10:30,' he said, 'we can catch it.'

"I began to wonder. Maybe he was right. He never had been right before, but there was a chance. I went back and saw the last act, but my heart wasn't in it. I knew he'd be waiting for me again at the end of the play. Sure enough, he was.

"'I'm sorry for your sake,' he said.

"'O, that's all right, old man,' I answered, now thoroughly convinced.

"'Let's go home and go to bed.'

"'Has George Tyler's body been found yet?'

"Then he disappeared into the night.

"I broke down. I recalled how my mother, and others who could not possibly be biased, had said it was a great play. They had laughed when I read it to them. But why had they laughed? Was it possible. . . . No, it was certain.

"I went back to the hotel, and found Kaufman.

"'What became of the girl you took to the show?' he asked.

"'I think she hung herself,' I said.

"We sat up together for the papers. Every hour or so he gave me a final message for his folks.

"'Let's go to bed,' I said finally. 'They haven't anything but weeklies in this town.'

"'I'll wait another two hours,' he said.

"With the first streak of dawn THE TRIBUNE arrived. I turned to the dramatic page.

"'By gosh, he liked it!' I shouted. 'Listen to this: "One of the funniest of the season's episodes—exquisitely done——"'

"He looked at me pityingly.

"'Don't kid yourself,' he said.

"It was then—and not before, as some reports had it—that I went out into the hall and got the fire-ax."

MR. WOODS will present Miss Willette Kershaw at the Playhouse, March, 8, in Michael Morton's new play, "Woman to Woman." Miss Kershaw's rôle is that of a French girl who fell in love with an English officer in the war, became the mother of his child, was deserted by him, and grew famous later as a dancer on the English stage. The play begins with the officer's discovery of her, a celebrity in London after six years have passed. Mr. Woods' company will include Miss Gail Kane, Kenneth Hill, and Felix Krembs. For a few minutes last week the drama was known as "The Immoral Woman."

Aaron Hoffman is at work on Barney Bernard's new play and a little about it is beginning to leak out of the factory. Mr. Bernard's role will be that of a benignant old gentleman, who finds his viewpoint altered when he acquires wealth. When he believes he has lost his money, however, he is brought to a realization of what it is all about, and there is a comfortable ending, which finds him dowered with both riches and a happy philosophy. Mr. Dillingham, by the way, is to be the producer of this work, and not Mr. Woods. The precise reason for this transfer of allegiance is not announced, but it is said that "His Honor, Abe Potash," has not been a profitable venture on the road this season.

Miss Martha Hedman will soon present "The Romantic Young Lady" under David Belasco's direction in Baltimore. This is a London "hit," a dramatization by Granville Barker of a play by G. Martinez Sierra.

Jack Norworth, in "My Lady Friends," Henry Hull in "When We Are Young," and Miss Olive Tell in "Cognac" will be on their way next week. "Irene" will move to the Studebaker; "Kissing Time," a musical comedy with William Morris and Miss Edith Taliaferro, will come to the La Salle; Miss Fay Bainter in "East is West," will reach the Garrick—and Walter Scanlan, a new Irish singing comedian, will appear at the Central

MISS CLARA MOORES IN "SHAVINGS" POWERS'

Miss Moores, a Chicago product, appears at Powers' as the disturbing widow to whom "Shavings," the Cape Cod toymaker, loses his heart, thereby providing a theme for the play.

RAYMOND HITCHCOCK IN "HITCHY KOO" AT THE ILLINOIS PHOTO © BY STRAUSS-PEYTON

The latest in Raymond Hitchcock's "Hitchy-Koo" series will begin tonight at the Illinois, with Miss Julia Sanderson, G. P. Huntley, Doyle and Dixon, and the three Mosconis, dancers, aiding the star. The book is by Glen MacDonough and Anne Caldwell, the music by Jerome Kern; there are two acts and fourteen scenes, and the show is said to have cost Mr. Dillingham, the producer, $125,000.

Give Us Drama, Me Lords! Scenic Art, Howe'er Gorgeous, Is Not Shakespeare

By James Whittaker.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—In the Apollo theater Lionel Barrymore and Julia Arthur, attended by delirious Robert Edmund Jones scenery, whimpering incidental music by Robert Russell Bennett, and trick lights by Arthur Hopkins, have brought forth a "Macbeth." The ghost of Shakespeare, uneasy and forlorn, wanders in the empty standee room at the back of the house and soliloquizes:

"Out, damn spotlight! Out, I say! One, two, why, then 'tis time to do it. The stage is murky. Fie, my Lord Barrymore, fie! An actor and afeard to own it! What need you fear who knows it, when none can call your power to account?

"Yet who would have thought old man Jones to have so much art in him? Here's the smell of his scenery still; all the lights of Hopkins will not lighten this production. Oh, oh, oh.

"Wash your hands on't, Barymore; put off your makeup; you look pale; I tell you, Shakespeare's buried, but he can come out on's grave."

Art has tyrannized over this revival of Shakespeare, whose drama is slave to Robert Edmond Jones' scenery. What mesmeric cultural spell has Jones cast over such shrewd minds as those of Julia Arthur and Lionel Barrymore? They, too, obedient to the mandate of Jones' impressionism, crawl into his paint tubes to be squeezed out into a series of pretty pictures. The whole cast is ready for hanging—in an art gallery.

The two famous actors are starred in the programs and advertising. That is misleading. Jones and Hopkins are the misleading men of this "Macbeth." In the future Mr. Barrymore and Miss Arthur may use that as an alibi. Truly, they have little to do with or in the show.

Mr. Jones has confused simpleness with simplicity. He is mean with his means, not economical. For all that you can enumerate the items of his scenery on the fingers of one hand; his stage is cluttered.

All of the "Macbeth" interiors, for instance, are "suggested" by two screens. He has cut three Gothic apertures in each screen. They serve variously as doors, windows, pillared halls, gates, and alcoves. The actors must remember which they are at any given moment of the play. No doubt they do. But the audience does not. The illusion is shattered, for instance, when Mr. Barrymore walks into an inner chamber of the castle through the same aperture which has lately given him a view of Dunsane woods. The fourth wall of the stage falls with the other three standing so feebly.

For Mr. Jones' convenience, "Macbeth" has been squeezed into three acts, consisting of a dozen tableau scenes apiece. The curtain falls on actors frozen into picture posture immobility at the end of each scene. As far as Jones is concerned, the action and speech of each scene exist for the sole purpose of bringing the cast into oil paint in groupings.

This "Macbeth" will make a wonderful collection of colored photographs. It will make a poor collection in "Hearts of Erin"—his metropolitan debut.

Mr. Miller and Miss Bates will also exeunt in "The Famous Mrs. Fair" March 7, to make way for Miss Patricia Collinge, the Blackstone's favorite actress, in "Just Suppose," a comedy in which she will act an American girl with whom the Prince of Wales falls in love. "The Night Boat," with Jack Hazard, the millionaire comedian, will come to the Colonial next Sunday. Six openings—breaking all records for a prairie metropolis.

Ben Hecht, who with Richard Henry Little has been seeking the "perfect woman" for the Beauty Mart at the Coliseum, writes that he finds Miss Margaret Edwards' dancing to be a poem macabre by Brusov and her body as faultless as a Swinburne lyric. "Lest you think," says Mr. Hecht,

"that my enthusiasm in the matter is a whim unfounded, I call to your attention the shrewd pronunciamento of Dr. Dudley Sargent, head of the physical culture department of Harvard university. The good doctor, after an inspection of Miss Edwards from a purely professorial standpoint, during which he measured the young lady from head to foot, confided to the world that Miss Edwards batted 100 per cent as a perfectly proportioned beauty. I submit the above academic item as vindication of my own selection, I never having met Dr. Sargent or been privey to his decision."

Miss Edwards, in addition to allowing her measurements to be used as a guide by the harassed judges in the beauty contests, has graciously volunteered to dance at the opening of the Beauty Mart Monday night. She gave her service gratuitously when she learned that half the proceeds from the tickets on sale is to go to the Herbert Hoover fund for the relief of the starving European children.

Burton Holmes' tour this week at Orchestra hall will be through Algiers, Tunis, Alexandria, Cairo, "The Garden of Allah," Constantine, Timgad, Biskra, and Carthage.

Milton T. Middleton, this season's manager of the Princess theater, has sent his resignation to the Messrs. Shubert. Mr. Thannhauser has also withdrawn from the Shubert Studebaker.

While Morris Gest was here last week having trouble with the censorbunds he reiterated the determination of his firm to make "Mecca" the last of its spectacular productions.

"We can never hope to equal or surpass 'Mecca,'" said Mr. Gest. "So what is the use of trying? Furthermore, the cost of production, the wages of labor, the high railroad fares, and the many increases of salary demanded by the players all make the cost of any future productions of this magnitude prohibitive. It cost $408,000 to raise the curtain on 'Mecca,' and it will be almost three years before we can hope to get our original investment back again. 'Mecca' and 'Aphrodite' have been enormous successes, but Mr. Comstock and I have decided that the risk of making such productions is too great.

"Therefore, next season our firm will confine its activities to dramatic attractions with comparatively small casts. Instead of 400 persons in one show we will have companies that will number not more than a dozen players. I believe managers generally will follow this example of retrenchment."

From Powers' comes the news that James Bradbury, who plays Cap'n Sam Hunniwell in "Shavings," employs 563 "different and distinct" facial expressions in the course of the play. Also that Mitchell Harris, the leading man, is a nephew of Maggie Mitchell and the son of William Harris, who played prominent rôles with Edwin Booth and the elder Sothern.

Mr. Gilpin, the Negro actor, over whose invitation to a Drama league banquet there has been much discussion, announces that he does not wish to pose as an object of sympathy. "Against those who do not care to sit in the same dining room with me I have no complaint," says he. "This only will I say: Thus far in the world's history no race or profession has ever been given relative rank and none has ever been permanently prevented from winning of equality rating for itself. Real people everywhere, without regard to color or estate, realize that 'Honor and shame from no condition rise. Act well your part; there all the honor lies.'"

Louis Verneuil's "Daniel" has been presented at the St. James, after considerable heralding, and is described as a play of "torrential action." Alexandra Carlisle, Lyn Harding, Leslie Faber, and C. Aubrey Smith are in the cast. The Daniel of the title—the rôle was written for Sarah Bernhardt and played by her in Paris—is not seen until the third act, and is then revealed as dying, partly for love and partly because of sixty daily pipes of opium. The play is "a little overingenious," says the Times, but "overwhelms you in Act III."

By Mae Tinée.

A LOT of people were quite fond of Samuel Merwin's "The Passionate Pilgrim" when it ran serially in a magazine some time ago. I thought his hero, Henry Calverly, the worst bore I had ever encountered. To me, therefore, it seems an achievement to have made so laudable a picture from so tiresome a tale.

As a character study "The Passionate Pilgrim" was declared by experts to be marvelous. Probably quite true if you admired the character so much good white paper was spent on describing. Anyhow, I am stamping around where I have no business. We be no literary critic. And I like the movie.

Henry Calverly is an author. A strange, dreamy, mutty soul always blundering into trouble and miraculously being rescued. His adventures are numerous. The picture picks them up at the time when he makes the acquaintance of Miriam Cantey, an invalid heiress, whose father has decreed that she shall manage his vast estate after the termination of a trust which he had created.

Deftly the picture reveals to you the fact that Calverly had been married before, had been implicated in a murder, and had served time in prison for blocking the paths of justice. He is a widower now and under an assumed name sets out to earn his daily bread by reporting on a newspaper.

Calverly, through the interest of a sympathetic and beautiful sob writer on the daily, is given the chance to write the biography of Cantey's life. It is thus he meets Miriam Cantey.

Miriam's discontented sister and the gentlemen who have been managing the estate perpetrate—or attempt to perpetrate—much dirty work. They are foiled, however, by Calverly and the beautiful invalid.

If you have always thought Tom Moore to be the best actor of the three Moore brothers you may change your mind when you see Matt Moore as Henry Calverly. His work shows real genius this time. Rubye de Remer is sweet as the invalid Miriam. She is just delicate enough, just haggard enough, just wistful enough, just brave enough. Your heart throbs joyously when the last reels discover her walking for the first time in years.

Frankie Mann as the newspaper girl deserves special mention. She is rather a new type. They have let her be trig without making her mannish, and they have permitted her to be capable and up and coming without robbing her of all feminine charm. One thanks Mr. Vignola for this.

Claire Whitney is also awfully good, which may be said for every other member of the cast. The production is splendidly staged, excellently directed, and finely photographed.

"The Passionate Pilgrim" (photoplay), therefore, is recommended to you as worth while.

Margarita Fisher, for so long the American Film company's featured darling, is to be exploited by a new company called the Independent Films corporation. Miss Fisher was the Norma Talmadge of former days.

Ask Me! Ask Me! Ask Me!

UNICELL: So you are a big, strapping he-man, are you? Well, now, that might interest somebody. I am glad, though, that you "was raised genteel." It is nice to get letters from those who are "sticklers for the niceties." Yes, if you are seeking the intellectual type I am the one you are searching for. Far be it from me to say what I look like, but my picture has not been included in the startling array of midwest beauties that stare at you from the fair pages of our newspaper. Having timed myself and it having taken thirty minutes so far to get to the place where I am in your letter, may I beg you to let me continue my answer in our next? As you say, "these be great old times with work so scarce." It's nice of you to see that I don't have any idle moments on my hands.

LEE: Good night! I will give your regards to the little song bird.

CATHERINE K.: You might write to Carl Ullman, in care of the Brunton studios, Hollywood. It is the only address I have.

HENRY B.: Owing to the scarcity of white paper, I don't believe I will be able to use the article you so thoughtfully sent me. So go ahead and elaborate on it, and I hope you will be able to dispose of it advantageously.

REID H. RAY: You sure have some department. Thanks for your nice letter. Thanks for reading the column. (Now you thank me for answering you twice.)

K. A. K.: Yep, I admit I'm great! Address Tom Moore care of Goldwyn, Culver City, Cal. I don't know whether he'll respond or not. Let's leave it in the lap of the gods.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Chicago Leads in Number of Givers to Hoover Fund

By Mme. X.

DURING a recent visit to Chicago Herbert Hoover expressed his interest in the fact that Chicago's quota to the relief fund for eastern and central Europe was subscribed by many more people than New York's, though the latter was three times as large. The New York $3,000,000 was, roughly speaking, derived from four sources: John Rockefeller subscribed $1,000,000; the Pershing dinner realized $250,000; the Christmas fête at the Metropolitan opera house added $750,000 to it, while about thirty rich New Yorkers contributed the final $1,000,000.

The Chicago and Illinois committee was so organized that its work covered a much wider field. There were about 30,000 $10 subscribers. Thousands of children contributed $21,867.08.

Chicagoans contributed $106,000 to the Literary Digest's $2,500,000 national fund. Over $900,000 was raised in Chicago, the largest subscription being Julius Rosenwald's $50,000. Illinois farmers through the farm bureau sent 1,000,000 bushels of corn worth between $50,000 and $75,000.

It is not the size of our contribution of which we may be proud, although in these financially critical times it is no contemptible sum; it is the universal answer to the call for help from the famine stricken districts of Europe which stands to the credit of the fine committee which has worked here, giving its services freely since early in December. The response shows a widespread organization most ably administered.

Many Tireless Workers.

Augustus A. Carpenter was head of this committee, which included such trained workers and assistants as Mmes. Arthur Ryerson, Russell Tyson, James W. Morrisson, H. C. Phillips, John MacMahon, and B. F. Langworthy (the work of Mrs. Langworthy and Mrs. Phillips downstate was a feature of the campaign), while among the men who devoted much time and attention to the fund were James Keeley, Julius Rosenwald, and Gen. Charles G. Dawes.

The committee expected to close its Chicago offices on North Michigan avenue early this month, but the contributions continuing to pour in made it necessary to keep the machinery going a little while longer. Yesterday, however, they shut up shop entirely. One final remark and we finish on this topic: In calculating the number of contributors to the Chicago fund no attempt has been made to enumerate the units included in the many subscriptions from women's clubs nor the number of children whose pennies made their good sized contribution.

The administration of these famine funds under Hoover's direction has since the early Belgian relief days been the chief marvel of the war. That Belgian relief was a vaster problem than any that confronts the committee today. From first to last the work has been so carried on that the total overhead expenses have amounted to only 2½ per cent; that is, out of every dollar subscribed 97½ cents has reached the starving children of Europe. Only the most concentrated food is used—flour, rice, beans, condensed milk and lard, all bought in wholesale quantities. From the time the relief commission in Belgium was started the child mortality there was less than in pre-war days.

A Honeymoon in Haiti.

Swift and obliterating as is the passage of time, there are nevertheless many people who remember the Glidden Osbornes, who lived here ten or eleven years ago. She was a stunning looking blonde, tall, charming in manner, and with many friends. He, too, was good looking, an athlete and also a great book fancier.

The war took him to Europe even before this country went into the fray. He left his wife and two children behind, and for several years was utterly absorbed in his work over there. Time and circumstances separated them. Mrs. Osborne finally secured a divorce, and now comes the news of her marriage yesterday at Washington, D. C., to William Stuart Reyburn, son of Mrs. John Edgar Reyburn of 1745 N street, Washington.

The marriage took place at the residence of Mrs. George Garrett, 1808 New Hampshire avenue. The Reyburns will live in Washington. When she lived here the present Mrs. Reyburn was, among other things, interested in the suffrage struggle, and played an active part in the gentle battles of those faraway times. Doesn't all that seem as remote as the anti-slavery days?

The Reyburns are going to spend their honeymoon in Haiti, sailing thence from New York March 4. Later they are coming to Chicago to visit Mrs. Reyburn's friend, Mrs. Hathaway Watson.

The World That Travels.

Although over 2,000,000 people are still left in this neck of the woods, the current phrase in the world that amuses itself is, "There's nobody left in town; absolutely nobody!"

Nevertheless, as long as Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. Marshall Field, Mrs. Ogden Armour, Mrs. John Borden, Mrs. William J. Chalmers, Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, and several others are still to be seen on the Boul Mich Chicago can't be said to be a barren desert, socially speaking.

Among the recent departures is that of Mrs. C. M. Ely, who went to New York last Wednesday preparatory to sailing for Bermuda next Wednesday. On the same steamer also goes Robert Allerton, who plans a few weeks' sojourn on that isle of sunshine and ocean breezes. Mrs. Ely is joining friends from her old home, Cleveland. Former fellow citizens of ours, the Charles Blair Macdonalds of New York, are likewise in or on Bermuda.

The report is that the island of Bermuda is getting rich out of our arid state. It is rumored that an underground system exists by which hooch purchased there is delivered to the American buyer at his home. This is recorded here merely as one more illustration of the fact that to be effective a law has to be graven on the hearts of the people as well as on the statute books. This is the great weakness of our prohibition act.

Mrs. Arthur Ryerson and her daughter, Mrs. George H. Clark, are going east tomorrow, the former to visit in New York for a week, the latter to her home near Cooperstown.

Mrs. John A. Carpenter, who has been for some weeks at the Mercy hospital, returned to her home, 712 Rush street, yesterday. She and Mr. Carpenter will go out to Pasadena soon for a few weeks' outing. Her father, Joseph Winterbotham, is at Hot Springs, Ark., where he is taking a cure. Her brother, Joseph Winterbotham Jr., was in Chicago last Sunday for the day. He is soon going abroad to join his wife and daughter in Paris. After a month there he plans to go to South America for a business trip. There is every likelihood that next winter will find this branch of the Winterbotham family in Chicago again, which news will be received with rejoicing by their many friends, who wept their departure last spring.

Unexpected Gardens in Town.

Mr. and Mrs. Rosecrans Baldwin, who left here about the same time, are not so likely to come back to us, although there was a rumor that they would. When they arrived in New York and set about looking for a home with rare perspicacity Mrs. Baldwin selected as a residence a house on East Forty-seventh street, not far from the East river. At that time it was rather an out of the way, neglected part of town. But before the Baldwins had finished remodeling their house fashionable New York had discovered the neighborhood.

Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, to whom the burden of a palatial abode and the possession of splendor in keeping with it had become too heavy, abandoned them and bought a simple dwelling next door to the Baldwins. Immediately other Gothamites began to flock to the region about Forty-seventh street and Second avenue. Miss Elsie De Wolf and her cohorts of decorators swarmed over the district, and what had been a year or so ago a forgotten part of the town became the center of excitement.

In New York the knowing and wise ones are more and more adopting the custom set by Mrs. Shoshone of taking whole blocks of houses that back on each other and remodeling the facades. The fashioning of the interiors is left usually to the fancy of the occupant. The chief feature of the enterprise is the turning of the old and unattractive back yards which lie between the houses [New York has none of our hideous alleys] into charming gardens, somewhat like the lovely and unexpected gardens which you find in London.

In the midst of that grimy metropolis there are ancient and delicious gardens where the dwellers who have access to them can and do give delightful garden parties. I don't know how they do it, but these gardens are so arranged as to secure to their frequenters absolute privacy. Tall trees, thick shrubbery, glimmering statues, secluded benches, winding paths, and even glowing flower beds make these enchanting oases in that wilderness of brick and stone. Our unfortunate back alleys would make such an innovation difficult to achieve here. But New York, more fortunate, is adopting and adapting the London idea.

Playgrounds Overseas.

A cheerful party is that consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hutchinson, Mr. and Mrs. Martin A. Ryerson, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Linn, and Miss Mabel Linn, on board the Megantic, now making the tour of the West Indies. Cuba, the Panama canal, Jamaica, Martinique, the Windward isles, Costa Rica, Porto Rico, and Haiti. These and many other ports and islands are on their itinerary.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Dick are sailing Wednesday for France, their ultimate destination being Algiers. They may run across Mr. and Mrs. Henry Patten, who are at present enjoying the sand and sunshine of northern Africa. The Hugh Johnston McBirneys are at the present moment coasting down the snowy mountain slopes of San Moritz, Switzerland.

In this favorite and delightful winter resort there is an extraordinary combination of warm sunshine and snowy mountains. One may skate, and ski, and coast at the same time that one can with perfect comfort sit out in the sunshine without extra wraps on. It is the most popular playground of Europe. All that is left of fashionable society, the great world of the capitals of the continent and England, gathers there at this season of the year.

Chicagoans who have delayed their departure for southern California until now are having the best of it, for those who went earlier in the season report an unusually cold and wet winter. Also they dwell on the emptiness of the big and expensive hotels. One large and newly equipped one in Santa Barbara is described as having 117 servants and 78 guests. Another in Pasadena as being less than a quarter full. The smaller, less expensive hostelries are, on the other hand, quite crowded.

Breezes That Bring Health.

Among the Chicagoites wintering in that part of the world is Mrs. Thornhill Broome, who, with her two children, has a bungalow in Pasadena. Her mother, Mrs. John A. Spoor, is leaving there March 12 to visit her. Mr. Spoor, who went to Honolulu a few weeks ago with Thomas Hinde, is expected to arrive in Pasadena March 15.

Others at Pasadena are the Charles Schweppes, the John J. Mitchells, Mrs. Henry Blair, Miss Anita Blair, the Edward E. Ayers, the Harry B. Clows and their daughters, the Misses Marion and Helen Clow, the Philip Wrigleys, and Mr. and Mrs. William Wrigley Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Watson Blair are at Belleair, Fla., where the breezes of the Gulf of Mexico will, it is hoped, help the latter back to health. Other fellow citizens enjoying the relaxation of a winter in Ponce de Leon's state are the Honoré and Potter Palmer families, who have attractive homes near Sarasota, Fla.

At Oakland, near the center of the peninsula, are the Frederick Mather-Smiths, Mrs. William Prescott Hunt, Mrs. William J. Calhoun, and Miss M. J. Rozet. Mrs. Bryan Lathrop has a cottage at Palm Beach, with her sister, Miss Cornelia Aldis, of Washington. Farther south is Hugh T. Birch, who has an estate near Miami. With him at present are his daughter and her husband, Frederick C. Bartlett. At Miami are several detachments of the Deering family—to wit: James Deering, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ely Danielson, and the Chauncey McCormicks. Mrs. Danielson and Mrs. McCormick are nieces of James Deering's.

Lathrop Home May Be Clubhouse.

Apropos of Mrs. Lathrop, there is a rumor that her charming colonial house on Bellevue place is being considered as a home for the proposed Army and Navy club here. It seems an ideal place for such a club. It has been known for some time that Mrs. Lathrop wanted to dispose of it.

For the present it is probable that she will not be much in Chicago. She has a delightful summer house in York Harbor, Me., and prefers to spend her winters in a warmer clime.

The Lathrop house is full of memories for their many friends here. It was always the center of a charming, well bred, interesting circle in Chicago, and the setting for much genuine hospitality. The late Mr. Lathrop was one of our most devoted and distinguished citizens, a patron of music and art. In his time many noted foreigners who visited Chicago were entertained there.

The last to be dined there during his lifetime was Ignace Paderewski, who, with Mme. Paderewski, visited this country in 1917 when the war outlook was at a discouraging moment for the allies. The famous pianist was in great form that evening, and the entire company sat about him asking questions and listening to his description of the condition of his native country. He declared then that he never wished to play the piano again, certainly not until Poland was free.

It is with much regret that her friends view the possibility that Mrs. Lathrop may never return to her place here. She was a great force for good in this community. Her gentle, cultivated, generous personality was a power here and set a high standard for the people who came in contact with her.

Lured from Terra Firma.

At a gay house party at the Edward C. Waller mansion in River Forest lately an accident which came near being serious was one of the unexpected features of the festivities. Mrs. Charles Belmont Davis and Joseph Mulford were strolling about the grounds, which lie in the embrace of an elbow of the Desplaines river. An attractive patch of ice, seemingly solid and trustworthy, lured them from terra firma.

Alas, for the deceptive qualities of even the stoutest ice! Both pedestrians went through at what was probably the one spot in that part of the river which was over their heads. Had it not been for a cane which Mrs. Davis was carrying and which she had the presence of mind to fling out over a more solid stretch of ice, the adventure might have terminated disastrously, for no one was within hail. As it was, both got a chill soaking from the waist down, and were fortunate to be within reach of warm, dry clothes.

Tomorrow afternoon, at the residence of Mrs. James W. Morrisson there will be a meeting of the League of Women Voters, when Mrs. Morrisson and the association's president, Mrs. Henry Cheney, will speak. The latter will tell of the work of the league so far, describing especially the success of the school on voting, which had a fortnight's session at the Y. W. C. A. building on Michigan avenue when 1,200 women came to learn about their new duties. It was an unexpected response.

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Chicago Woman's Aid Concerned in Varied Civic Work

By Kate Webber.

THE Chicago Woman's Aid is sponsoring a concert to be given tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock at Orchestra hall by the Civic orchestra of Chicago under the auspices of the Civic Music association. This is the second concert which the Woman's Aid has assisted in making successful, the first having been given on Dec. 19 at the Marshall High school. The concert will be under the direction of Frederick Stock, assisted by Eric De Lamarter and George Dasch.

For the last few years the club has centered its activities in the Smyth school, at which an evening social center, now self-supporting, was organized. Four days each week the club conducts an afternoon social center in the same school, the average attendance being between 200 and 300.

A mother's club, with a membership of sixty women, is one of the most interesting features of the work at the school. There are educational as well as entertaining features, a class in English, and an executive committee which decides all problems relating to the club and many of those in which the children are concerned.

Health work in the Smyth and Dore schools is another activity of the club. Instruction in food values and habits conducive to health are given both mothers and children; and aside from carrying the regular class work in both schools, the Chicago Woman's Aid supplies breakfasts for undernourished children in the Dore school.

The social service committee of the civic and philanthropy department has assisted widely, in various agencies and of its own accord. It also has established libraries in many philanthropic and health institutions. The committee for assisting the blind, of the same department of the club, features interesting monthly meetings for inmates of the Industrial Home for the Blind.

"Better Films for Children," the slogan of the motion picture committee, which has done constructive work along this line. They view pictures in film studios, and at regular intervals print lists of those especially suitable for children.

The club has offered a scholarship in the junior college of the Joseph Medill School of Journalism. The scholarship is to be granted on a competitive basis, to either the girl or boy in the Medill school who qualifies. A scholarship for Jewish children also has been established.

For two years the club has bestowed a monetary prize at the Art institute, the recipient being the woman who has made the greatest progress in sculpture.

A symphony orchestra study class, a class in architecture of music, talks on color prints, mezzotints, and etchings, are achievements of the art and literature department.

A study class in "Psychological Problems of Citizenship" is conducted by the education department.

In addition to the activities of the departments mentioned, the club holds monthly lectures and other programs which are attended by the members at large, numbering almost 1,200.

Mrs. Edward Gudeman is president of the club; Miss Carrie Pam and Mrs. Max Loeb, vice presidents; Mrs. George Freudenthal, recording secretary; Mrs. Edward J. Stransky, corresponding secretary; Miss Sara Feder, civic secretary, and Mrs. Edward Fionacher, treasurer.

MRS. MARTIN K. NORTHAM.

Mrs. Martin Kent Northam is the newly elected president of the woman's auxiliary of the Ravenswood hospital, which will give a card party on Tuesday afternoon at the Edgewater Beach hotel. The proceeds will go toward the purchase of a new nurses' home at 4611 North Winchester avenue.. Mrs. G. N. Bussey is chairman of arrangements for the affair.

MRS. EDWARD GUDEMAN.

The Chicago Woman's Aid, which has a membership of 1,200 women, is sponsoring a concert to be given tomorrow evening at Orchestra hall by the Civic orchestra of Chicago, under the auspices of the Civic Music association. Mrs. Edward Gudeman is president of the Chicago Woman's Aid, whose major activities are given in a brief outline on this page.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

The Chicago Woman's club will meet next Wednesday at 2 o'clock in Recital hall. Talks on "Recent Impressions of Italy" will be given by Prof. Rudolph Altrocchi and Julia Cooley Altrocchi. Tomorrow at 2:15 o'clock Prof. Reginald I. Raymond will speak before the study class of the philosophy and science department on "Medieval Philosophy." On Wednesday at 10:30 o'clock the drama study class will hear Mrs. Ethel Colson Brazelton speak on "The Movies," and at 4 o'clock Wednesday the art study class will visit the exhibition of pictures at the Arts club. The forestry class will meet Friday at 10:30 o'clock to discuss "Our City Forestry." Saturday the home and education departments will hold an all day symposium on new movements in health education in Recital hall. Among the speakers are Mrs. Ira Couch Wood, Dr. William M. Thompson, Dr. Caroline Hedger, Mrs. George Thomas Allen, Miss Jessie E. Black, Dr. Ralph Truitt, and Miss Hazel Burke. The American speech committee will hold its monthly open meeting Saturday at 1 o'clock in the club parlors. The subject of the meeting will be "The Practical Side of the Better Speech Movement." This afternoon at 3 o'clock the Sunday Open Door will meet in the club rooms. Mrs. D. Harry Hammer will lecture on spring flowers.

There will be a meeting of the executive committee of the Woman's City club tomorrow at 10:30 o'clock in the club rooms. On Tuesday at 1:45 o'clock the housing and zoning committee will have a meeting, with an illustrated talk by Miss Madge Headley. Miss Edna Foley, superintendent of the Visiting Nurses association, will talk on "Sickness and Housing." The public libraries committee will visit the municipal reference library on Thursday at 4 o'clock. There also will be an open forum on public schools on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. W. B. Turley will be hostess for the meeting of the Homewood branch of the Woman's City club on Friday at 2 o'clock. At 8 o'clock Friday evening Miss Headley will speak at the Drovers Good Fellowship club, 4200 South Halsted street. Miss Frances Wetmore will hold her weekly class in Americanization on Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

The department of home will present the program at the meeting of the Catholic Woman's league next Saturday afternoon. George F. Rush of the circuit court and the Rev. Frederick Seidenburg and the Rev. Claude J. Pernin will be the speakers.

On Tuesday at 4 o'clock William Dodd, professor of American history at the University of Chicago, will speak on "Can Nations Think?" The president, Miss Sarah B. Tunnicliff, will preside. At the regular Friday tea, the following will act as hostesses: Mrs. H. W. Bang, Miss Emily M. Evans, Miss Lucy H. Pearson, and Mrs. C. H. Smith. Friday evening there will be a dinner for Lucine Finch. Miss Finch is the author of the masque given on the occasion of the opening of Ida Noyes hall at the University of Chicago.

Dr. Fay Cooper Cole will give an illustrated lecture on Japan at the meeting of the Chicago Culture club tomorrow at 2:30 o'clock at the La Salle hotel. The philanthropic committee will entertain the soldiers at the Drexel hospital on Thursday evening.

There will be a meeting of the Daughters of Indiana on Tuesday at 2 o'clock at the Congress hotel.

Mrs. D. B. Moss of 5717 Kenwood avenue will be hostess for a meeting of the Stonewall chapter, U. D. C., on Thursday at 2 o'clock.

The monthly program of the Chicago Artists' association will be given tomorrow afternoon in Recital hall, Fine Arts building.

The weekly cost of a

Blue Bird

electric clothes washing machine

is about the weekly cost of a laundress

WHEN you think of it, the Blue Bird washing machine is not a luxury. Fact is, it's just the opposite—an economy. You pay your laundress a certain amount every week to do your washing, and aside from clean laundry you are purchasing nothing. When you pay a similar amount weekly on a Blue Bird washing machine you have better looking clothes and soon own a modern household appliance.

A Blue Bird washing machine does away with wash-day drudgery; it accomplishes the hard labor of a day in an hour of easy operation; it eliminates the fuss a laundress usually creates. There is no reason in the world why every home should not be equipped with a Blue Bird.

Telephone, write or call and we shall gladly do your washing for you free of charge in your home as a demonstration. Demonstrations also on our fourth floor.

In a Short Time SULPHUR clears rough, ugly skin

Any breaking out or skin irritation on face, neck or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur. Because of its germ destroying properties we believe nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation that instantly brings ease from the itching, burning and irritation.

Mentho-Sulphur heals eczema quickly, leaving the skin clear and smooth. It seldom fails to relieve the irritation or blemish. A small jar of Mentho-Sulphur may be obtained at any drug store. It is used like cold cream.—Mentho-Sulphur Co., New York.

Are your feet putting lines in your face?

That drawn, unhappy look will disappear when your feet find comfort again

Every woman knows that pain is a deadly enemy of beauty. And aching, cramping feet are a source of keen suffering.

The nerves and muscles of the feet are as sensitive as those of the teeth and head and when overworked or abused can cause as much suffering.

Not only do aching, cramping feet cause loss of grace in walking, but they put kinks in the disposition which are inevitably followed by lines in the face.

Foot suffering a needless enemy of beauty

Anything that menaces a woman's beauty should be condemned. Especially when it is so needless and so easily corrected as most foot suffering!

When your foot muscles get too tired, they weaken and allow the arches which they support to sag.

Then come callouses, corns, ingrowing toe nails, weak ankles, bunions, sharp pains, dull aching through the feet and legs and finally flat foot.

What these weak, tired, aching feet need is just a gentle, mechanical support to hold them in correct position and rest the strained, overworked foot msucles.

What these weak feet need

Dr. Wm. M. Scholl, the eminent foot specialist, has designed the Foot-Eazer for just this purpose. This is a simple, scientific device comfortably worn inside your regular shoes.

By holding the arch up in correct position, it rests the tired foot muscles, rebalances your weight and relieves the strain that causes your entire body to ache with fatigue.

Go to the shoe or department store near you that carries Dr. Scholl's Foot Comfort Appliances. Ask the graduate Practipedist there to examine your feet and demonstrate, without charge, the appliances for various arch troubles.

The Dr. Scholl Appliances are made of springy silveroid, which alone can provide the resilient support that is always needed whether the body's weight be on or off the foot.

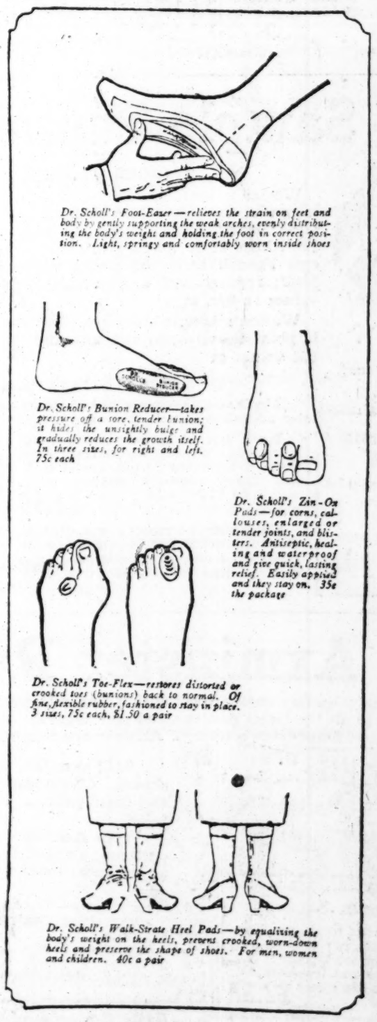
Get those "foot lines" out of your face. You don't have to suffer with your feet. Enjoy the foot and body comfort the correct appliance correctly fitted to your feet can bring.

Free Booklet and Sample

Write for copy of Dr. Scholl's latest booklet, "The Feet and Their Care." With it will be sent, free, a sample of Dr. Scholl's Zin-Ox Pads for corns and bunions.

The Scholl Mfg. Co., Dept. 444, 213 W. Schiller St., Chicago, Ill.; 339 Broadway, New York City; 112 Adelaide St., E., Toronto, Ont., Canada.

Branches in London, Paris, Melbourne, Sydney, Capetown and Buenos Aires.



Dr. Scholl's Foot-Eazer—relieves the strain on feet and body by gently supporting the weak arches, evenly distributing the body's weight and holding the foot in correct position. Light, springy and comfortably worn inside shoes

Dr. Scholl's Bunion Reducer—takes pressure off a sore, tender bunion; it hides the unsightly bulge and gradually reduces the growth itself. In three sizes, for right and left. 75c each

Dr. Scholl's Zin-Ox Pads—for corns, callouses, enlarged or tender joints, and blisters. Antiseptic, healing and waterproof and give quick, lasting relief. Easily applied and they stay on. 35c the package

Dr. Scholl's Toe-Flex—restores distorted or crooked toes (bunions) back to normal. Of fine, flexible rubber, fashioned to stay in place. 3 sizes, 75c each, $1.50 a pair

Dr. Scholl's Walk-Strate Heel Pads—by equalizing the body's weight on the heels, prevents crooked, worn-down heels and preserve the shape of shoes. For men, women and children. 40c a pair

Concert Pianists in Great Numbers Promise of Spring

By Ruth Miller

It is a pianists' spring. Under one management alone we find sixteen piano recitals between now and May 1 listed against the concerts of six violinists and one singer. It would seem upon reflection and twitching the leaves of our scrap book that it has been a pianists' winter. For up to date we have listened to thirty-two pianists of varying degrees of skill exclusive of those who have appeared on the programs of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. The piano trade should be looking up.

Last year the explanation for the large and numerous swarm of violinists was simple to discover. That was the final flowering of the Auer cult. The one for this year's unprecedented number of pianists is not so easy. There are no disciples of any one teacher; it takes at least ten years for a pianist to ripen to the concert giving stage, and we cannot recall any wave of unusual prosperity which struck the country a decade or so ago which would have enabled the pianistically ambitious to appease their inborn desire.

A dozen years hence it will be simple to account for the pianistic surplusage. We'll blame it on the war. For the war profiteers have turned to pianos as weeds to the sun.

Every so many years, through a combination of circumstances—the discovery of oil or coal or gold or a little judicious industrial activity in a war—various people without bank accounts acquire them. With money they yearn for art.

The piano is the largest article of art we have on the market, as well as being considered a noble and indispensable piece of furniture.

For instance, in England after the war a new rich man purchased one of the fine old estates that were lying around loose to be picked up by any one with a desire for ancestral halls and the requisite money with which to buy them. Having acquired his castle, this new laid millionaire put it in the hands of a famous decorator.

But the important part of his scheme of furnishings he had no intention of intrusting to any interior decorator regardless of that artist's reputation. He went out himself and ordered a grand piano of gold for his great music room. It was an elegant instrument. But when it was placed in its niche at one end of the room he quite apparently was not satisfied. He scowled at it for several days, and then went to London.

In due course of time another piano of gold arrived from town. It was placed in the end of the room opposite its first purchase. Thereupon he smiled again. His decorative scheme balanced, and he was happy.

Thus, you see, a socially ambitious lady buys an instrument "indorsed by the greatest living artists of Europe and America and the West Indies" and satisfies both its esthetic and decorative sense. This particular piano lies about the house, the outward symbol of affluence, until some luckless offspring gives an undeniable demonstration of his genius, at least from the material viewpoint, by attacking it with a hammer.

A violin, a piccolo, a flute, or a cornet bespeak neither an esthetic education nor a well lined purse. Also they capitulate much too readily to a well aimed hammer. But a piano—

The newly discovered prodigy studies, he practices under duress, some one praises him in a weak moment, and he acquires ambition and the trick of tossing his hair back with a sad, tired gesture; he receives another injudicious compliment and he takes $326 out of the bank and gives a recital. Thus it is quite clear that the decorative idea is the fundamental reason for the overflow of pianists we have with us this season.

It has not only been a pianists' season, but the laurels of large and enthusiastic audiences have fallen to the callow and stumbling fingered instead of the facile great. Hofmann, Lhevinne, Levitski played to the scattering few. The debutante, sans brains, technic, or talent, played to the crowded hall.

How a reviewer dreads the odor of prejudice that hangs fetid over such a concert. An honest commentator works on much the same principle as a camera, and is about as personal. He focuses on an artist's playing, the shutter clicks, he takes the plate over to his office and develops it with the aid of his typewriter. And, like any photograph, every wrinkle and deformity is shown sometimes rather cruelly in the result. A sincere critic is nothing but a more or less skillful photographer.

But every audience, particularly of the friends cult, is made up of portrait painters. Loving schemers, who erase the crow's feet in the music of their protégée, who paint out with care the blemishes of technic and interpretation, and who hold up their retouched critical picture of their friend's art as a perfectly truthful study. It takes a veteran critic to put a diplomatic, flattering frame around the uncomplimentary snapshot of his criticism, that temporarily misleads the faithful friends.

A number of weeks ago one of these pianistic debutantes gave a concert. During a terrible moment, when her fingers were lost among the bulrushes of the variations of Schumann-Brahms' "Theme and Variations," I leaned over and said to a fellow crapehanger, "Why, in heaven's name, does she play it?"

"Because she learned it," he answered.

"You lie!" indignantly interrupted the experienced medicine man of music next us as the debutante's fingers tangled more and more. "She never learned it."

But afterwards a faithful friend of hers fell over two rows of seats and six pairs of feet to give the last named wise man his instructions.

"Pretty good, wasn't it?" demanded the f. f. blocking the critic's path, "pretty good. Guess you'll have to say something fine about that."

"I shall say," was the grave answer, "that the young lady played a long and difficult program and that she gave of her best."

But only a veteran music reporter is ever anything like a match for a faithful friend.

With the exception of the f. f., the cultists among Chicago audiences are rare. Most native music lovers are judicious, calm, open minded and upright judges of performers on that super-xylophone, a piano. Musical sanity is theirs, and courtesy and kindness.

Nothing could have been greater proof of their graciousness than the instance of Storchio, creator of Madame Butterfly at La Scala, who sang at the Auditorium this winter. When she was young, in her glory in Italy, as famous among the Latins as Mary Garden is among the Yankees, rumor hath it she gave a helping hand to Marinuzzi, our artistic director of last season. Last year he found her poor and old and gratitude was in him. He gave her a contract with the Chicago Opera association for so many performances. It was a touching instance of bread cast upon the waters. But the finest part of the whole thing was not the story of Marinuzzi's generosity but that the Chicago public paid $6 for admission, sat through some of the most execrable performances of "Butterfly" that a major league opera company ever got by with, and gave wholeheartedly of their applause that a tired little Italian singer might not know that her operatic days were over.

These opera-goers were not deceived concerning the merits of the performances. They expressed themselves fervidly between acts about being inveigled into paying $6 for such singing. But when, in a caricature of "Traviata" that would have been hilarious had it not been so heartbreakingly pitiful, Mme. Storchio sang the big aria of the first act and plucked cheap draggled white cotton roses with villainous sharp wire stems from a property bouquet and flung them into the audiences with elderly coquetry there was never a sound or move from her suffering listeners that was expressive of anything but the finest breeding and courtesy.

Chicago audiences have other commendable traits. Aside from the faithful friends, they are not cultists. Cultism is a terrible thing. One can cult about anything. About Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms, about a chinless pianist who poses as an exponent of the moderns, and who drops more notes than Percy Grainger did last year in his performance with the Chicago orchestra when he left out twenty measures; or about an opera singer.

There is nothing worse than a cultist except two cultists of opposing factions engaged in argument. They are about as open to reason as two tomcats facing each other on the back fence are to the "pretty pussy" of their respective owners. Nothing but a brick ever diverts the attention of a tomcat or a cultist from his favorite pastime.

But the faithful friends we have always with us. And in looking over the sixteen piano recitals sheduled between now and May 1, it would seem that we shall have them with us more than ever this spring.

Give Us Drama! Scenery Is Not Shakespeare

of photographic records. Speech, the soul of Shakespeare, opulent, glorious speech, is stifled, that its awkward, living concomitant, gesture, may not mar Jones' pictures. And, with speech, all life is stifled out of the drama. This is not life. It is still life.

Julia Arthur is the one passionate, beautiful rebel against the Jones tyranny. Not all the color schemes in the rainbow can confuse this great stage lady's conception of the simple, downright truth of language. She speaks her reading of the rôle of Lady Macbeth out of a cleanly penetrating brain, and to your heart. While the play withers about her, her Lady Macbeth grows healthy to the beautiful flowering of one of the theater's most thrilling moments of spoken poetry—her intoning of the "Out, damned spot!" speech of the last act.

Barrymore is less lucky. Classicism is not his bent. And when he takes Shakespeare's "Therefore, Cawdor shall sleep no more," and makes it "Thawfaw Cawdaw shaw slewp naw maw," why, you know another Barrymaw's gone wrong—this once.

As a protest against operanting Shakespeares, outdoor Shakespeares, Laddy's Seminary Shakespeare, and Shakespeare moulding on the top shelf of your bookcase, Hopkins' Shakespeare serves. But methinks the gent doth protest too much. Bakst drew those fantastic sketches of Russian ballet costumes and settings from his fevered imagination, and brought them over to the office where Price Diaghileff sat with his practical carpenters, costumers, and his practical knowledge of what dancing legs can dance in.

Then Diaghileff tempered Bakst to the dance, and we had ballet that was beautiful, novel, revolutionary, but was still dance. Bakst took long vacations while his masterpieces were being trimmed to fit the theater. Perhaps he died of a broken heart after seeing Sheherazade. Who knows? If Jones had been in the Adirondacks while Barrymore and Arthur staged the new "Macbeth," we might have had less art for Art Hopkins' sake and more play for Barrymore's sake.

A man may be down, but he's never out. Willard Mack, undaunted by the failure of his "Near Santa Barbara" to catch public favor in the Greenwich Village theater, sat him down ten days ago to write another play. At that time "Smooth as Silk," as it is titled, was a shadowy thing in his imagination, wordless, unsold, uncast, and homeless. Now it has lines, actors, production, and is playing lustily in the Lexington theater. The result was that "Smooth as Silk" was rough as rags at its first showing. It is unfair to hold inquest over the unborn.

Groping among the obtrusive errors of the play's performing, one sensed some of the elements of a good crook melodrama. For one thing, Mr. Mack has a refreshing third act solution for his plot. When "Silk," the monocled gentleman cracksman, has finished his adventure of rifling the smooth reformer's wife and exposed that worthy as the scheming villain and the performer of the robbery for which he himself has served part of a prison term, the pretty girl opens her arms, and you reach for your hat. Then you put your hat back under the seat. For Mr. Mack, as the hero of his own picaresque romance, provides one more thrill before curtain when he sternly fends off the happy ending.

"You're a gude gurl," he says to his leading lady, "and I can't spoil yuh. Forget me."

And Mr. Mack strides off tragically as the curtain falls. Hordes of matinee girls attended Mr. Mack's opening and bewailed this dramatic tag to an otherwise unexciting afternoon. But it is possible that, if Mr. Mack brushes up his play, thousands of other girls will come to have their hearts broken. Mr. Mack in this melodrama has gone back to the good old days when mother used to faint at the play regularly every Sunday afternoon, and he may find a following eager to go back to the good old days with him.

GRAHAM
Beauty Secret

A wonderful new astringent skin treatment for removing wrinkles and skin blemishes was recently discovered in the private laboratories of Gervaise Graham, the world famous beauty specialist, who numbers among her patrons Geraldine Farrar, Kitty Gordon, and many other beautiful women.

This entirely new treatment (Graham Beauty Secret), tightens the loose outer skin, removes wrinkles, lines and blackheads—reduces coarse, enlarged pores—and makes the skin firm, smooth and fine textured.

You can obtain Graham Beauty Secret at all first class toilet counters. It is not expensive, as the large jar lasts for several months. Those who have used it are amazed at its quick results, and delighted with the improvement in their appearance.

30 Years to Learn How

The churning of margarin from nuts and fat-freed milk requires highest skill and long experience which can best be gained by making creamery butter. The process is practically the same, with nut fat replacing butter fat. Flavor comes from the same source—from scientifically "ripened" milk.

Thus the man who has learned how to make the sweetest creamery butter, knows how to put the same sweetness into nut butter. This man is A. E. Hoffman, a butter expert with 30 years' experience, who supervises the production of every pound of Troco Nut Butter.

We have built Mr. Hoffman a new plant of white tile and concrete, the last word in modern food plant construction. All the elaborate equipment required by modern food experts is at his command. Every sanitary condition is perfect.

Churned from coconuts and fat-freed milk

Mr. Hoffman makes Troco Nut Butter from snowy fat, extracted from the white meat of coconuts. This is churned with twice pasteurized, fat-freed milk.

This pure nut fat is as nutritious as butter fat. It is highly nutritive—very digestible and easily assimilated. When considering food value, remember that healthy tropic races live on coconuts.

Mr. Hoffman develops the same flavor in Troco Nut Butter which made his butter so famous. This flavor delights and surprises every new user, as your trial pound will prove.

The principal difference is 15 to 40 cents a pound

The principal difference between Troco Nut Butter and the finest creamery butter is 15 to 40 cents a pound. Flavor and food value are the same. But you don't have to skimp and save because of the high price.

Fats are essential foods necessary to health, as war times proved in foreign countries. You get this health fat in its easily digested and assimilated form when you eat Troco Nut Butter.

Instead of wondering if what we say here can be true, just mail in the coupon for the trial order. We will mail you an order good for one pound.

Keep that schoolgirl complexion

A firm, fresh and blooming skin, radiant with health and free from blemishes, isn't the attribute of early youth alone. Every woman can keep her schoolgirl complexion long after early youth has flown.

Proper care is the secret—care which keeps the skin in perfect health. This means the scientific cleansing which makes each tiny pore and skin cell active. You must use soap and water freely—you must use it every day.

But not harsh soap—not soap which dries and irritates. Select mild, soothing soap, which cleanses gently, soap with a smooth, creamy lather—soap made from the bland, cosmetic oils Cleopatra used.

Cleanser, tonic and lotion

This soap is Palmolive, delicately fragrant, and the attractive palm oil color of its beautifying ingredients.

Its profuse, creamy lather penetrates every pore, dissolves dirt, perspiration and excess oil secretions. The rinsing water carries them away. No clogging accumulation remains to make your skin coarse.

This gentle cleansing acts as a tonic, reviving tired nerves and muscles, and stimulating each minute gland and capillary. This gives natural color.

It is lotion-like in its action, leaving your skin soft and smooth. Just add a touch of cold cream and you are through.

If your skin is very dry, or when you use rouge and powder, apply cold cream before as well as after washing.

If your skin seems soft and lacking in firmness, apply cold water liberally. This condition often follows the use of cold cream alone for cleansing.

This finest facial soap costs 10 cents a cake

This price is possible because we make Palmolive in such vast volume. The Palmolive factories work night and day. We buy the costly ingredients in enormous quantities.

You can't buy a better soap, no matter what price you pay, because science can't make finer soap.

But the price allows you to provide it for general family use, a luxury all may enjoy.

The Palmolive Company, Milwaukee, U.S.A. The Palmolive Company of Canada, Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The beauty secret of ancient Egypt

This use of palm and olive oils as cosmetic cleansers was a beauty secret discovered 3,000 years ago in ancient Egypt.

The Greeks and Romans also knew their value. Palm and olive oils adorned their sumptuous marble baths.

Now in scientific modern days these same beautifying oils are combined in the most popular of facial soaps. They still hold first place as soothing, healing, beautifying cleansers.

Volume and efficiency permit us to sell Palmolive for

THE POTTERS

ILLUSTRATIONS BY J. H. STRIEBEL

The Rent Is Raised.

PROLOGUE.—Modern apartments are three or four stories high, and the rents are even higher. They are inhabited by a downtrodden group of people known as tenants who are either paying too much rent or twice too much. The Potters have just been served with a notice that they can pay double the rent they have been paying, or they can move. As a matter of fact they can do neither.

OVERTURE

When the furnace isn't flat upon its coccyx (on its coccyx),
And the tenant isn't colder than a shad

He is infinitely glummer,
For the season it is summer
And the screens would make most any skeeter glad (skeeter glad).
If he cannot change apartments as he'd ruther

Then the plaster tumbles down upon his bun

When the plaster tumbles down upon his bun, on his bun,
Then the tenant's lot is not a happy one, happy one.

SCENE I.—THE POTTER LIVING ROOM.

(They are called Living Rooms because nobody lives in them any more. The family is usually either in bed, at the table, downtown, or at the movie. However, the Potters are in the Living Room this time.)

BILL: Well, Jesse James was here today
And says that if we want to stay
We'll have just twice the rent to pay.

MA: It's robbery . . . he knows it, too . . .
I'll tell you, Pa, what I would do—
I wouldn't sign if I were you.

PA: I s'pose you'd think it quite a treat
To find yourself upon the street—
There ain't much comfort in a flat,
But still it beats the street at that.

MA: Perhaps it does . . . perhaps it don't;
But I am mighty sure I won't
Agree to let him steal me blind . . .
I'll let him know what's on my mind.
I'm not an easy mark like you;
They've always got you jumping through.
I'll tell that man a thing or two.

PA: You'll never tell him nothing . . . see?
You make your grandstand talks to me,
And all the birds you're going to bawl . . .
You never peep to them at all.

BILL: Let's move—it's a dumbbell place at that.

MAMIE: Of course you know of another flat—
You're just about due for a bright idear;
You haven't had one for at least a year.

BILL: Not for a year? Well, don't forget
You haven't shown even intelligence yet.

"I'm not an easy mark like you."

MA: If he would only decorate
Maybe 'twould do;
But he doesn't expect to rate
High in our view . . .
The paper is peeling,
They're cracks in the ceiling,
And it's forty-eight years since the varnish was new.

PA: O, it does no good to holler
And grow heated 'neath the collar—
If he thinks another dollar
Can be added to the rent
He will add it on with pleasure
And another for good measure—
And if you object he says you're
Full of civic discontent.

MA: I never thought a man of mine
Would have a gutta-percha spine—
There's William Carroll, or Bart O'Toole,
Or John E. Byrnes . . . he's no fool.
He wouldn't let them walk on him—
He's got some courage, will, and vim.
He says, "We'll fight their low intrigue
By starting the Tenants' Protective League."
Why, it was only this very day
That Mrs. O'Toole called up to say
The League was going to meet tonight
And organize for a bitter fight. . . .
And all you can do is sit and whine—
You, with your india rubber spine.

PA: What good does it do a guy to kick?
You know-it-all women folks make me sick.
There ain't no other place we can go,
And who but a landlord guy should know?
That's why they're leaning so hard on us.
And what does it get us to stew and fuss?
(But some glad day when I have the chance,
Metaphorically speaking, I'll kick his trousers.)

MA: Don't wait for a day that may never light;
Go to that meeting of tenants tonight.
Assert yourself . . . I dare you to.

BILL: Go on, Pa . . . that's the thing to do.

MAMIE: I think that's a perfectly scrumptious view.

PA: Aw, gee, what's the use? It's all foolishness.

MA: Pooh!
Go on, now, get ready . . . and I'm going, too.

(And they go . . . they go to the first meeting of the Tenants' Protective League. . . . What transpires is another story. See next Sunday's Tribune.—Adv.)

"You'll never tell him nothing, see?"

FINALE.

When the neighbors aren't fitted up with snubbers
(up with snubbers),
They are always underfoot or on his lap
(on his lap),
Or they're doing "Rusticaners"
On their automat' pianers
Till the cat is even dying for a nap
(for a nap).
He's freezing, or he's just about to smother
('bout to smother),
And the landlord takes his toll-begotten mon
('gotten mon).
Taking one consideration with another
(with another),
O, the tenant's lot is not a happy one.
Cho. (slower and sadder).
For the landlord takes his toll-begotten mon, 'gotten mon.
O, the tenant's lot is not a happy one, happy one.
(And that's that.)

Are Your Feet Having a Nightmare?

Did you ever dream that you were bound so that you could not move, while walls were closing in on you, crushing, suffocating?

Your feet have that nightmare all day long if they're confined in shoes of unnatural shape, laced against a stiff-shanked sole as if to a board.

The flexible-arch Cantilever Shoe literally wakes up your feet. It permits the arch muscles freedom to function so that they gain strength and give strong support to the bones of the arch, preventing any danger of flat feet. The circulation becomes full and free, the toes straighten out, and your feet come to life and offer thanks that their nightmare is ended.

Your whole body responds to the release, luxuriating in the new sense of comfort and well-being. Come in and try on a pair of Cantilevers—see how good-looking they are. Widths AAAAA to EE. Write for booklet.

ART and ARCHITECTURE

Architects' Show to Exhibit Houses That Lessen Work

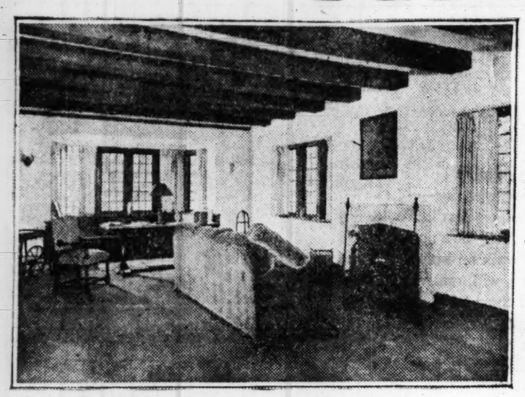
By Eleanor Jewett.

O, will you come, my lovely lass,
And live along of me?
Your love shall be our only latch—
A kiss will be the key.

Red roses I will bring to you,
And lilies shining white
To bind within your dusky hair
Against the coming night.

O, would you come, my lovely lass,
The whole world I would bring
To lay before your feet as queen—
And I would play the king.

But if you laugh, my lovely lass,
And bid me go my way—
I'll find another lovely lass,
And play another play.



Living room in the "Do Your Own Work" house to be shown in the architectural exhibit at the Art institute March 8.

THE subject of homes, and particularly small homes, is especially pertinent to this season of the year. Using the time-worn simile of nesting birds, it is peculiar to the spring months that people then should think more or less practically of their own homes. An apartment can rarely be a real home. It is rather a stepping stone between the time when you owned a house and the time when you expect to own a house again.

During the last week two types of house, similar in many respects but differing in some vital points, have come to my attention. A model for one type, the "do your own work" house, as it is spoken of by the architect, will be shown in the thirty-fourth annual architectural exhibit at the Art institute, which opens March 8.

The photographs which I have received of the house are attractive. The exterior, however, has nothing to commend it especially. It is of no classified type of architecture—simply a not unpleasing example of the American small house, one degree removed from the bungalow state.

The living room is pleasant and light in effect. The walls and ceiling are evidently calcimined, white, and the contrast is afforded by the heavy square beams in the ceiling and by the dark woodwork at the windows and window-seat. The fireplace lacks the dignity lent by a mantel. But the room has possibilites.

The tiny breakfast room is a distinct innovation. It is extremely small, and resembles the compartment in an English first class carriage on a well kept railroad, more than anything else that comes readily to mind. The table is of wood, one end fixed into the wall under the window, the other supported by a stout leg. On either side are cushioned seats, where host and hostess sit at ease, slipping dishes swiftly in and out of the pantry (kitchen, one should more properly say) close at hand. The floor is tiled. The seat cushions are covered in some striped stuff.

There are, I believe, three other rooms on the first floor, and upstairs are four bedrooms, closets, etc. A sleeping porch may be added if desired. The newest feature of the facade is the use of a prepared white-wash substance thrown on the brick foundation which, when weatherworn, gives a delightful, aged look to the exterior that charms while it deceives.

The other little house which I met with last week has the distinction of being made of newspaper. Lest this startle you too much I will add that it is not in the least like the ordinary paper you read at your morning table. The material is really the by-product of the manufacture of newspaper. The technical name is insulite.

The owner of this house is a young artist-architect, Charles Morgan. He bought his lot with standing timber, cut off some of the trees, and with those and the insulite built as comfortable and cozy a little house as could well be imagined. Besides the living house there is a garage and a further addition of a studio with living quarters behind. In type the house resembles to a certain degree a rustic English cottage.

This kind of thing is worth looking into because the cost of construction is about one-half that of wood. The material gives better insulation, making the house warmer in winter and cooler in summer than the average frame house, and possessses splendid acoustic properties. A half inch of this newspaper board equals three inches of wood.

In the living room of this bungalow the ceiling is insulite and the bare timbers of the trees cut from the lot; the walls are unadorned insulite; the floor is of the same with a soft blue burlap covering, on which a rug is thrown. A simple arrangement of breakfast room and kitchen makes work easy for the housekeeper, and upstairs are two large rooms, bathroom, closets, and a sleeping porch.

These substitutes for wood are as cheaply insured as frame houses, carrying a similar risk charge. Another substitute, made from sugar canes, is shortly to be put on the market, and if it can be widely known will do a great deal toward lessening the expense attached to the "own your own home" movement.

The Chicago Society of Artists was the victim this last week of one of the most scurrilous attacks that it has been my fortune to meet with in many years. Naturally I was not prejudiced in favor of the aggressor as he began his anonymous letter to me: "My dear Miss Jewett: It is plain from your writings that you know nothing at all about art and paintings [since when have the two been divorced, I should like to ask him], so if you will use the enclosed comments you will raise the standard of your articles to a level which alone you could never reach," etc.

From that point this kindly critic went on to tear into shreds the reputation and skill of every painter, practically, of any prominence whatever, whose work is being shown in the present exhibit at the Art institute. It is never worth while to dig about in muck, so I do not intend to repeat here any of his superficially clever comments, based in nearly every case on incorrect assumptions. However, if the writer of that letter reads this and dares back up his opinion by his name I am perfectly willing to meet him on fair ground and refute every criticism which he has seen fit to fling at our more successful artists.

The really unfortunate part of the whole matter is that in all probability we are dealing in this case with an unbalanced mind. Dr. W. J. Hickson, head of the psychopathic bureau of the municipal court, states that the letter is an excellent sample of the work of a sufferer from dementia praecox—which is the polite medical way of stating the man is mad. Meanwhile, his handiwork, the letter, is going the rounds of the art galleries, museums, and journals of the country. It is too bad that in this age and generation, and with the postal laws what they are, a person can perform such an act of disloyalty toward his fellow-craftsmen and, perhaps, get by with it unscathed.

An interesting picture of George Washington painted by Edward Savage was presented to the Art institute last Tuesday. Possibly the most interesting feature connected with it is the signature of the artist and the date, E. Savage, 1763. This sets the time of the likeness as some thirteen years before Washington came into the public limelight as a great general and moral force in politics.

The slender history which attaches to the gift is of value. In 1867 Charles H. Savage came to Chicago from Boston and met a young man, William H. Colvin, who had come here from New York. The two became friends and went into business together. Charles H. Savage was the last of his family and at his death he bequeathed to Miss C. Colvin, the daughter of his friend, this portrait of Washington. Miss Colvin, in turn, in memory of him, gave the painting to the Art institute last Tuesday.

A much more beautiful portrait of Washington was hung in the Chicago Historical Society on Tuesday. This portrait is by Rembrandt Peale. It shows Washington in the uniform of a general, and dates probably about 1792. The canvas belonged for many years to W. K. Nixon, from whom it was purchased by the late C. F. Gunther. Eighteen years ago Mr. Gunther was offered $10,000 for the painting, but refused it. The Chicago Historical society secured the portrait at the recent auction of Mr. Gunther's art collection.

A portrait of Thomas Jefferson, by Bass Otis, was presented to the Chicago Historical society by the Iroquois club last week. Jefferson's tenderest point was his hair, which in color was between a red and a straw-gold. Bass Otis was the only painter who dared paint the color as it was—the other artists, afraid of the presidential wrath, doctored the trying shade to one more satisfactory to the Jeffersonian eye.

This portrait shows Jefferson as a rather plain, heavy man, red of face, with small bright blue eyes and a round brow under a thatch of red-gold hair. He does not look at all the sort of person whom the description "the Exponent of Democracy" would fit, yet that was the name given to him in history.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

THE MISSUS GROWS PROPITIOUS.

There's a mystic bit of magic in the Missus, it would seem,
And her air has all the seeming of the gleaming of a dream;
There's radiant expectancy, prophetic of the day
When the world with eager gesture will divesture winter's gray,
The love light gleaming in her eyes is dewed with tenderness,
(But is it love I see therein, or just an Easter dress?)

She flutters through the house all day with newer, keener zest,
And flies to greet me tenderly when I come home to rest;
Solicitously eager that my comfort be her care
As she brings the pipe and slippers and adjusts the easy chair,
And a newer surge of love 'twould seem her tender eyes bedews,
(But is it love, I wonder, or a flock of Easter shoes?)

In the spring the young man's fancy turns to love, the poets say,
And analogous conclusions as to women are O. K.,
For there comes a time supernal with the vernal equinox
Whe the Missus grows propitious as to collars, shirts, and sox,
And her tenderness is touching, and I marvel much thereat
If eventually 'twill touch me for a costly Easter hat.

Plan to Extend Roosevelt Road Throughout State Proposed Route to Be Laid Past Scenic Spots

BY MORROW KRUM

A PLAN which, when carried out, will see a touring thoroughfare through all of the important historic spots of Illinois, is gaining headway in Chicago. The proposed highway—it will be called Roosevelt Road"—will be a continuation of the Roosevelt road that is being pushed by the Roosevelt memorial association.

The plan, fostered as a tribute to the memory of the late president, was offered at a meeting of the Union league club on Feb. 14. After the announcement Col. C. R. Miller, newly-appointed director of public works, and other officials promised their co-operation.

Roosevelt road is now complete from Michigan boulevard to Wheaton. The proposed road will run through Wheaton, Geneva, Ottawa, Rock, Peoria, Pekin, Jacksonville, on down through the Illinois valley to St. Louis.

The road will be paid for by the various counties, the state, and the federal government, according to the plan. The plan is to be placed before the legislature in the immediate future.

"This proposal is a matter of great importance to future generations," declared W. F. Carlson, executive secretary of the Roosevelt Memorial association. "The linking up of a road hitherto unthought of, that will traverse the beautiful scenery of the state, and giving it the name of Colonel Roosevelt, is a step in history.

"It was stated at the meeting that there now exists a number of highways running through the state, one of which is a continuous hard road from Chicago to St. Louis. The latter may be built purely commercial, while the Roosevelt way will link up the state with patriotic sentiment with the benefit of interest in our own state."

It is planned to organize a tour over the proposed right of way as soon as the weather permits. Engineers, members of the Roosevelt association, highway officials, and influential citizens from points along the highway will be invited.

At the meeting at the Union league club the state was represented by Charles Miller, S. E. Bradt, superintendent of highways; Thomas G. Vennum, assistant director of public works, Col. Buford Older, chief engineer. The Roosevelt Memorial association was represented by Frank G. Logan, Joseph Sen, Frederick W. Perkins, Herbert D. Shaw, and W. F. Carlson.

Ran a Press.

Probably never before in the newspaper business has a motorcycle been used to furnish the power for linotype machines. With the power off, necessity became the mother of invention, and Charles Schuyler Vidad [Colo.] printer, offered to hitch his motorcycle and take a chance that its sixteen horse-power engine would prove equal to the task. Belts were shifted around, the motorcycle was placed in position and the gears thrown in high. The machine responded by setting the two linotypes up in motion and enabling the paper to reach its readers on schedule time.

Climb.

Word has been received in Italy that a four horse power motorcycle manufactured motorcycle has created considerable attention in Australian and New Zealand motor circles due to its recent climb out of the crater of Mount Eden, near Auckland. This feat is a most dangerous one and had hitherto been considered impossible.

To Prevent Scratching.

If strips of brake lining placed around the jaws of bars used on nickel plated or enameled levers, pedals, gear light rods, etc., scratching will be prevented.

Anti-Farmer.

New in the farming implement line is a machine that strips the husks from corn stalks, which are left standing, and delivers them husked into the wagon.

Heat of Red Pepper Breaks Chest Cold

Ease your tight, aching chest. Stop the pain. Break up the congestion. Feel a bad cold loosen up in just a short time.

"Red Pepper Rub" is the old-time remedy that brings the quick relief. It cannot hurt you and it certainly seems to end tightness and drive the congestion and soreness right out.

When heat penetrates right down into colds, congestion, aching muscles and sore, stiff joints, relief comes at once. Nothing has such concentrated penetrating heat as red pepper. The moment you apply Red Pepper Rub for colds, backache, sore muscles, stiff neck, lumbago, or the pains of rheumatism or neuritis, you feel the tingling heat.

In three minutes the congested spot is warmed through and through. When you are suffering so you can hardly get about, just get a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub, made from red peppers, at any drug store. You will have the quickest relief known.

The proposed highway—it will be called "The Roosevelt Road"—will be a continuation of the Roosevelt road that runs west from Chicago to Wheaton. It is being pushed by the Roosevelt Memorial association.

The plan, fostered as a tribute to the memory of the late president, was offered at a meeting of the Union League club on Feb. 14. After the announcement Col. C. R. Miller, newly appointed director of public works, and many other officials promised their support.

Roosevelt road is now completed from Michigan boulevard to Wheaton. The proposed road will run through Wheaton, Geneva, Ottawa, Starved Rock, Peoria, Pekin, Jacksonville, and on down through the Illinois valley to St. Louis.

The road will be paid for by the various counties, the state, and the federal government, according to the plans. The plan is to be placed before the legislature in the immediate future.

"This proposal is a matter of great importance to future generations," declared W. F. Carlson, executive secretary of the Roosevelt Memorial association. "The linking up of a roadway, hitherto unthought of, that will take in the beautiful scenery of the Illinois, and giving it the name of Col. Roosevelt, is a step in history.

"It was stated at the meeting that there now exists a number of highways running through the state, one of them a continuous hard road from Chicago to St. Louis. The latter may be called purely commercial, while the proposed Roosevelt way will link up the finest patriotic sentiment with the best point of interest in our own state."

It is planned to organize a tour of the proposed right of way as soon as the weather permits. Engineers, members of the Roosevelt association, highway officials, and influential citizens from points along the highway will be invited.

At the meeting at the Union League club the state was represented by Col. Miller, S. E. Bradt, superintendent of highways; Thomas G. Vennum, assistant director of public works, and Clifford Older, chief engineer. The Roosevelt Memorial association was represented by Frank G. Logan, Jens Jensen, Frederick W. Perkins, Howard V. D. Shaw, and W. F. Carlson.

Ran a Press.

Probably never before in the newspaper business has a motorcycle been used to furnish the power to run linotype machines. With the juice off, necessity became the mother of invention, and Charles Schuyler, a Trinidad [Colo.] printer, offered to rig up his motorcycle and take a chance that its sixteen horse-power engine would prove equal to the task. Belts were shifted around, the motorcycle placed in position and the gears thrown in high. The machine responded nobly, setting the two linotypes upstairs in motion and enabling the paper to reach its readers on schedule time.

Climb.

Word has been received in this country that a four horse power American manufactured motorcycle has attracted considerable attention in the Australian and New Zealand motor world due to its recent climb out of the crater of Mount Eden, near Auckland, N. Z. This feat is a most dangerous one and had hitherto been considered impossible.

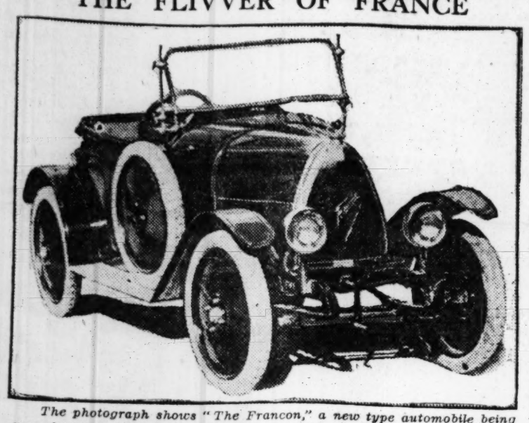
To Prevent Scratching.

If strips of brake lining are tied around the jaws of bars used to bend plated or enameled levers, pedals, headlight rods, etc., scratching will be prevented.

Anti-Farmer.

New in the farming implement line is a machine that strips the ears from corn stalks, which are left standing, and delivers them husked into a wagon.

THE FLIVVER OF FRANCE



The photograph shows "The Francon," a new type automobile being manufactured in France to sell for approximately $800 in American money. It is built to carry three passengers and is driven by a two cylindered motor, which the manufacturers claim holds the record for low consumption of gasoline.

Ideal Section of Lincoln Way to Be Built Soon

THERE is a possibility that the ideal section of the Lincoln highway will be built in Indiana.

Both Pennsylvania and Ohio have made strong bids for this road which will represent a practical ideal for construction, but it is understood that special consideration has been given to the possibilities in western Indiana. In deciding on the location the board of directors of the Lincoln Highway association felt that a location east of Pittsburgh would not be sufficiently central and that one west of Chicago would not present heavy traffic volume problems.

The question has been discussed with L. H. Wright, director of the Indiana state highway commission and a member of the association's technical committee, and it is probable that further investigations will be made immediately now that final plans for the road have been agreed on.

The technical committee, composed of the leading highway authorities of the United States, held its third meeting at the University club during the "good roads" week. At previous meetings in New York all general specifications with the exception of cross section design had been agreed upon and at the Chicago meeting attention was centered on this feature.

The committee agreed upon a concrete roadway forty feet in width as representing a practical ideal design to handle economically, safely, and expeditiously a traffic of 20,000 vehicles per twenty-four hour day. This design permits four lanes of travel.

There were members of the committee who originally felt that the ideal type of construction should segregate the traffic according to direction and provide for two separate strips of concrete paving on either side of a central parkway. While the committee as a whole agreed that this form of construction made for safety and for greater speed and convenience, it felt this design lacked flexibility and did not make for the fullest use of the paving provided.

This section, the funds for which have been furnished to Lincoln Highway association by the United States Rubber company, it is hoped can be built this year.

Taxation in Italy.

In all countries the taxation on automobiles has been increased since the armistice, but in no country has it been so exorbitantly increased as in Italy. The new tax, which is to be effected January, 1921, has caused a great deal of dissatisfaction in all classes of industry. It seems even the Socialists who are responsible for this new legislation are looking upon it with alarm.

ROAD REPORT

The Following Notes on Roads Were Issued Thursday by the Chicago Motor Club.

Roads leading out of Chicago are in a good condition; dirt roads are drying and becoming quite smooth.

The Grant highway from Chicago to Rockford is not in a favorable condition, practically all dirt with stretches of gravel quite rough and chucky.

Roads in the vicinity of Springfield are passable, but there are quite a number of mud holes.

The Cannon Ball trail between Chicago and Hannibal, Mo., is in fair condition, quite rough but dry.

The Meridian highway from Bloomington to Hudson, rough and soft; Hudson to El Paso, dirt, dragged but soft; El Paso to Minonk, good oiled road. The Burlington Way from Bloomington to Chano rough and a little muddy, oiled parts fair. Bloomington to Lincoln, fair dirt. The Diagonal trail from Bloomington to Peoria is fair, quite soft, and muddy.

Missouri roads are improving rapidly and will be in a good traveling condition if the mild weather continues.

Practically all main highways in Wisconsin are passable for through traffic. The small country highways are in a poor condition.

Iowa roads are soft and muddy. Nebraska roads are practically all dry, with the exception of a few stretches in low places, which are rough and soft.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS by HIGH SPEED

Can I substitute an ordinary magneto for the one that is fitted on the Ford when it comes from the factory? Would it work better?—James Gannon.

Certainly. Most of the magneto makers have special Ford models. The question of whether it works better is largely a matter of individual opinion.

Could you run your automobile on acetylene gas, and whats the matter with using it if gasoline gets higher?—T. B. W.

It would be possible to use acetylene gas as fuel, but the cost is prohibitive and is far above any figure that gasoline is likely to reach.

De Palma Has Filed Name for May 30 Auto Race

Rumored Italian Will Drive the Ballot 'Eight in Line'

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 26.—Ralph De Palma, international star and one of America's favorite race drivers, is the second to enter the ninth annual 500 mile international sweepstakes of the Indianapolis motor speedway, May 30. Eddie Hearne, one of the millionaires, and who has met De Palma in many a speed battle on road, track, and hill, is the only one to precede Ralph in entering.

In filing his entry De Palma has not named the car he will drive, but it is generally believed that this will be a Ballot from the Paris factory. De Palma has been driving the "eight in line" speedster for two years, and started the championship season at Los Angeles on Washington's birthday, at the wheel of the French car. He has also been selected by Ernest Ballot to captain his team of four cars in the French Grand Prix in July.

De Palma gained favor of the speed fans in 1912 by defeat rather than victory. The Italian-American drove a Mercedes in the 500 nine years ago. For 495 miles he showed the way to all the American and foreign cars and drivers, only to have victory slip from his grasp and see $20,000 vanish with two laps of the brick course to go. His "dago luck," as he chose to designate his misfortune, made him the favorite of almost every fan.

Three years later he set a track record and won the Indianapolis classic after an almost seven hour battle with Dario Resta and his fleet Peugeot. This time De Palma again drove a Mercedes. While Ralph had perhaps five miles an hour less under the hood of his car he outgamed Resta in driving and attained the ambition of every race driver—a 500 mile victory. Incidentally, no driver has ever twice won this event.

De Palma, in making his entry, has advised T. E. Myers, secretary general manager of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway company, that he hopes to be the first to hang up two five century victories, although he is not egotistical enough to state that he will win the event, which last year carried a total cash award of about $100,000.

"Buy and Ship All Road Materials at Once"—Aishton

AMES, Ia., Feb. 26.—State road officials are reported to be urging county road officials and contractors to buy their materials and ship now. R. H. Aishton, president of the American Railway association, reports that for the first time in five years at this date there is a surplus of transportation, and that the railroads are not being worked to capacity. When spring comes, the peak load time will come again, he asserts, and transportation facilities will again be worked to the limit. It requires about 100 car loads of material for every mile of paved highway, and there will be more than 200 miles of road to build during 1921, making 20,000 car loads of material for this phase of the work alone, according to the state highway commissioners. To prevent serious delay and handicap during the construction season, road officials declare it is necessary to buy and ship now. On primary road work, the state highway commission and the federal government allow estimates up to 90 per cent upon materials delivered and properly stored.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Illinois Automobile club will be held on Wednesday at the Vesta Battery company, Twenty-ninth street and Michigan boulevard.

A BRIDGED SWAMP

Above you see the longest concrete trestle in the world. It was constructed by the California state highway commission over the Yolo basin in the Sacramento valley.

Etching.

The car owner may occasionally desire to put his name or initials on some metal place or surface. This is best done by etching, and if it is iron or steel mix a half ounce of nitric acid and an ounce of muriatic acid. Shake these well, when they are ready to use. Cover the place to be etched with beeswax melted, and when this is cold write what is desired in the wax clear down to the metal, using a sharp instrument for the purpose. Now apply the acid mixture with a feather, being careful to fill each letter. Let the acid stand for ten minutes and pour water in it. This stops the etching and the wax may be removed.

A Truck Village.

The Pacific Telephone & Telegraph company is using a village on wheels in going from place to place to repair its lines in the Sacramento canyon, in the northern part of the state.

In the village are two trucks which haul seven trailers. Three of the trailers are lodging houses, with beds, toilets and shower baths. One is a kitchen and dining room and the other two are a supply truck and water tank.

The village moves from place to place as necessity demands, and is independent in the choice of its location of water or other natural conditions.

THE WORLD'S WORST ROAD

You've been over it. Unburden yourself by addressing "World's Worst Road," The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. Give the exact location of the stretch you struck. The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published.

Good Hunting.

The world's worst road has been found. I found it. It lies between Martinsville, in the southern part of Illinois, and Trimble. In a recent hunting trip we stopped at the end of good roads—Martinsville—and a disastrous rainstorm overtook us there during the night, turning our dirt trail ahead into gumbo. We made the start next morning, but traveled less than three miles before striking a washout. Then came a detour through a pasture to find a place to ford the creek and some twenty-five miles of typical Illinois mud. We covered the distance in eight hour. A. F. W.

Dixie Again.

Starting a few miles beyond Jacksonville, Fla., and extending for nearly seventy-five miles to Waycross, Ga., is the most terrible stretch of road in history. Tourists dread it. Even airmen shudder over it. The only people who care for it at all operate a garage in the tiny town whose one hotel, station, and repair shop stands midway in the trip. Many tourists give up hope here and ship their cars on home.

This is one of the main roads of Florida, but we found it nothing more than a deep, sandy trail through a wilderness of pine trees. It required more than a day to cover the stretch. MRS. L. A. B.

Heat of Red Peppers Breaks Chest Colds

Ease your tight, aching chest. Stop the pain. Break up the congestion. Feel a bad cold loosen up in just a short time.

"Red Pepper Rub" is the cold remedy that brings the quickest relief. It cannot hurt you and it certainly seems to end the tightness and drive the congestion and soreness right out.

When heat penetrates right down into colds, congestion, aching muscles and sore, stiff joints, relief comes at once. Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers. The moment you apply Red Pepper Rub for colds, backache, sore muscles, stiff neck, lumbago, or the pains of rheumatism or neuritis, you feel the tingling heat.

In three minutes the congested spot is warmed through and through. When you are suffering so you can hardly get about, just get a jar of Rowles Red Pepper Rub, made from red peppers, at any drug store. You will have the quickest relief known.

HUDSON

Consider Its Low Cost

INSTINCTIVELY you group Hudson with the few cars men consider really great. But do you take note of its lower price?

Not one but scores of official records give Hudson its reputation. For five years it has been the largest selling fine car. More than 100,000 owners regard it, not as a lower priced automobile, but as a superior performing car of unquestioned reliability.

There is little in the qualities of any costlier car that makes it as desirable. There is a price advantage in Hudson not met in any car of its quality.

CADILLAC STANDARD OF THE WORLD

The World's Greatest Tribute to Dependability

Cadillac Sales in the Last Three Years Were Nearly One-Third Greater Than the Combined Sales of the Eleven Other American Makes Listed at the Cadillac Price and Higher

It has been our pleasant privilege to share with the public the many splendid tributes that have been paid to Cadillac since the beginning.

We have taken a just pride in the long succession of official and popular testimonials to the Cadillac's engineering excellence, its fine mechanical construction and its dependable performance.

Our friends the world over have rejoiced with us in celebrating the remarkable honors that have been conferred on Cadillac, particularly during the last three years.

Cadillac owners would be less than human if they did not partake of our sense of satisfaction over the appointment of Cadillac as the Standard Seven Passenger Car of the United States Army,—the greatest official tribute ever paid to any automobile.

And Americans in general shared our pride in the most recent compliment to Cadillac,—its characterization by a noted English motor authority as "more closely approaching the ideal (of perfection) than any other car on the market today, regardless of price or size."

But, impressive and significant as these testimonials are, we feel that a more impressive and more significant tribute has been paid to the Cadillac during the last three years, by the world's buyers of high-grade motor cars.

Of the twelve makes of automobiles selling at the Cadillac price and higher, Cadillac was chosen by one-third more people than all the eleven others combined.

What these figures would have been had we been able to manufacture all the Cadillac cars the world wanted, is merely conjectural.

It is a well-known fact that many persons who wanted Cadillacs, bought some other make of car because they could not get a prompt delivery of a Cadillac.

The fact is that when it was possible to get a Cadillac, nothing else would suffice; the public was unwilling to accept any substitute for Cadillac dependability.

This was strikingly exemplified during the last three months of 1920, when our production began to approximate the demand.

During those three months, Cadillac sales leaped to a figure 43% greater than the eleven other makes combined.

We are grateful to the public for this unparalleled tribute to Cadillac, and we are fully conscious of the responsibility which it entails.

We pledge ourselves again to go on building, better and better, a Cadillac that can be depended upon to do all the things an automobile is intended to do; do them better than any other car, regardless of price or size; and continue to do them for a longer period, without any nursing, coaxing or petting.

It is our resolve to continue to build the Cadillac in such manner that it shall grow more and more worthy of the wonderful allegiance of Cadillac owners.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Y. W. C. A. Offers Lecture Course in Social Recreation

By Rev. Gardner MacWhorter.

DR. YUTAKI MINAKUCHI

A TRAINING course in recreation and program making for leaders of girls' clubs and classes, church groups, young people's societies, and similar groups is to be offered on nine consecutive Saturday afternoons by the Y. W. C. A. of Chicago, beginning next Saturday. Classes will be held from 2 to 4 o'clock at Central branch, 59 East Monroe street. Mrs. Herbert E. Goodman, chairman of the religious work committee of the Chicago association, is in charge.

Among the leaders who will lecture at various times during the nine weeks' course are Dr. James V. Thompson, superintendent of young people's work, Methodist Episcopal board of Sunday schools; the Rev. Charles W. Gilkey, pastor of the Hyde Park Baptist church; Miss Irene Skinner, vice president of the Academy of Dramatic Education, who will talk on pageantry and the drama as a part of club programs; Miss Sue Weddell, metropolitan girls' work secretary of the Chicago Y. W. C. A.; Mrs. E. F. Leonard, president of the Chicago Story Tellers' league, who will demonstrate story telling in theory and practice at one session, and Miss Emily J. Duncan, girls' work secretary at Central branch, who will demonstrate handcraft and poster making.

Miss Florence Lawson, physical director of Central branch, will be in charge of practical demonstrations of social recreation and games, which will be held in the gymnasium and in which the class will take an active part. "Our aim will be to give material to people with no previous technical training in the teaching of simple games, musical games, and folk dancing, which will enable them to keep church socials and young people's parties from being the deadly bore they are so apt to be," said Miss Lawson.

Miss Sue Weddell will start the course on Saturday with a lecture on "The Psychology of the Growing Girl," followed by a demonstration led by Miss Lawson of adapting a program to a group.

Washington Boulevard Methodist Episcopal church recently celebrated its twelfth anniversary and at the same time the pastor, the Rev. Aubrey Shannon Moore, D. D., under whose leadership the building plans were formulated and the new church erected, entered upon his sixth year of the pastorate in which 350 persons have united with the church.

The Rev. Eneas B. Goodwin, pastor of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church, Downers Grove, is giving a series of Lenten discourses on Sunday and Friday evenings on "Ante-Nicene Leaders of the Church" and "The Life of St. Paul" with readings from "The Acts of the Apostles." Father Goodwin has been pastor of St. Joseph's for a number of years and has built up a strong parish in this thriving west suburban town.

The A. M. society of the First Swedish Baptist church, Addison street and Maple Square avenue, will give a benefit concert on Saturday evening in the church at 8 o'clock with a program by Miss Ebba Fredrickson, violinist; Miss Gladys C. Anderson, reader; Mr. Gustaf Holmquist, and Mr. Edgar Nelson.

Dr. Yutaki Minakuchi is a Japanese evangelist and student of internationalism who has just returned from Japan after spending several months there studying conditions in his native land. Though born in Japan, Dr. Minakuchi has received his education in American universities, including Yale, has served several American congregations as pastor, and took a prominent part in the "men and religion" forward movement. He will speak this evening in Orchestra hall at the Sunday Evening club on the subject "Is There a Japanese Menace?"

The third of a series of Lenten lectures given by officers of the United Charities under the auspices of the social service department of the Church Service league will be that of Mr. Joel Hunter, general superintendent, on Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock at the Y. W. C. A., 59 East Monroe street. Miss Nesbitt also will speak, explaining "The Family Budget." All who are interested in the study of social welfare are invited to attend.

St. George's Episcopal church at 76th street near Cottage Grove avenue, is conducting an open forum after the evening service which is held at 7:30 o'clock. The speaker last Sunday was Col. Holp of the United Americans who spoke on "The American Way." This evening the speaker is to be A. Carroll Binder of the Federated press, who will speak on the work of that organization. Next Sunday, A. G. Prior, an English labor leader, will tell of the work and the aspirations of English labor, especially of the triple alliance. Others who are to speak at the forum during the next few months are Mr. William Bowen, who was with the Friends' Reconstruction Unit in France; Bishop Paul Jones, secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, and former Bishop of Utah, and Dean William Palmer Ladd of the Berkeley Divinity school.

The work of recruiting the chorus of 1,000 voices for the May Festival concert, given under the auspices of the Chicago Sunday School association in the Auditorium the latter part of May, is now in progress. Each Sunday school is entitled to appoint singers between the ages of 15 and 30, equal to 2 per cent of their average attendance. Names should be sent to the May Festival committee, 1602 Mallers building.

I'll loan him money; I'll give him work;
I'll lighten his burden grim;
Throughout my life I will never shirk
The duty I owe to him.
I'll prove the gratitude that I feel
For his acts across the foam—
He waded the mud of St. Mihiel
While I took a taxi at home.

I'll never forget him; I'll be his friend
In deed, as well as thought;
His troubles are mine until the end,
I'm with him until I rot.
And never, as long as tongue shall tell,
Will my sympatny ever roam—
For he bared his breast to the Argonne hell
While I lingered safely at home!

Stearns

You Should Know These Facts

Here are vital facts about Stearns-Knight cars:

With the Knight-motored Stearns you never have carbonized valves.

No valve springs or stems to break.

Absolutely uniform compression.

A minimum of gear-shifting due to high power developed sweetly and easily.

No timing faults, one of the commonest causes of engine trouble. Timing is automatic.

A constant, steady flow of power from a motor that improves with age.

These are facts that will be attested to by every owner of a Stearns-Knight. A test ride will reveal many other reasons why a Stearns is the car you should have.

CLOSED CAR COMFORT WITH OPEN CAR THRIFT

Once it was thought that you must choose between style and economy, closed car comfort or open car thrift.

That was before Lexington built this snappy Coupe.

Now you can have both closed car convenience and smart style, together with an economy you had scarcely believed possible. There is lessened upkeep due to light weight.

And then the economy and increased power of the famous Lexi-gasifier and Moore Multiple Exhaust System.

The original body design of improved construction has been developed for reduced weight and unified construction.

All of these Lexington specialties tend one way—greater desirability. We are no more enthusiastic about this car than you will be when you ride in it. Call us for demonstration.

AVIATION

Budget Passed by House for Aerial Postal Delivery

Mail Flown from Sea-to-Sea in Record Time

BY MORROW KRUM.

MERICAN commercial aviation took two decisive steps forward last week.

On Washington's birthday the air mail service started four planes, two from each coast, across the continent on day and night mail carrying flights. One ship covered the entire distance from San Francisco to New York in thirty-three hours and twenty minutes, breaking all records. According to air mail officials, the practicability of day and night mail service was successfully demonstrated.

Following close upon the successful continental flight came the announcement that an appropriation of $1,250,000 for postal air service had been agreed upon by the house.

Representative Madden of Illinois, who was in charge of the bill in the house, broke down the opposition to the bill and carried the appropriation by a vote of 220 to 121.

When the officials of the air mail service planned the transcontinental day and night flight to demonstrate that such a service was practical they hoped that the trip might be made in about forty hours, possibly thirty-six. Such a flight, they believed, would convince the representatives voting on the air mail budget.

Then seven pilots, flying in turn as the riders of the old time pony express once carried the mail, saw to it that a big De Haviland ship was flown from the Pacific coast to Long Island in thirty-three hours and twenty minutes.

The trip was made through extreme hardships, snow, fog, hail, high winds, and low clouds. One man, in order that the trip should not fail, flew the ship from Cheyenne to Chicago—the longest hop ever made at night by one mail pilot.

The other three ships did not complete the course. One pilot crashed to death. Two others landed in Chicago and were not permitted to continue, so terrific was the gale.

But one ship got through—due to the efforts of Pilots Farr Nutter, John L. Eaton, J. P. Murray, Frank Yager, Jack Knight, J. O. Webster, and E. M. Allison.

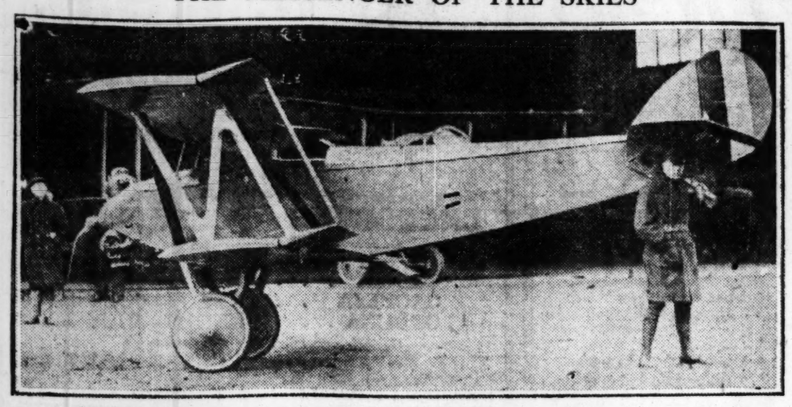
"Now we have demonstrated that day and night service is practical," said Supt. E. W. Majors, head of the Chicago division. "We have cut the time of mail delivery across the continent in half. We have shown that such a service is easily accomplished, and that it should be put to use immediately."

It is evident that the legislators in Washington were of the same opinion. If the bill is passed by the senate and becomes a law America will have a twenty-four hour air mail service, and America will continue to lead the nations of the world in aerial postal service.

To Rule Flying.

The federal government has appointed Col. Brinsmead to the office of controller of civil flying, says the Sydney correspondent of the Morning Post of London. Australian airmen have been eagerly awaiting the appointment of a civil controller who will organize and announce air navigation regulations.

THE MESSENGER OF THE SKIES



"The American Messenger," a tiny ship invented by Lawrence Sperry of New York, was photographed on its arrival at Bolling field, Washington, D. C. Though the plane has a wing spread of only twenty feet, it flies at 90 miles an hour. The ship was designed to take the place of motorcycles in delivering messages for the army air service. It stands seven feet high and will carry 240 pounds, including the weight of the pilot.

Only 271 Landing Fields in U. S.; 145 Municipally Owned

The following statement has just been issued by the Manufacturers' Aircraft association, Inc. It contains some interesting data relating to the growth of the flying industry.

THERE is utter lack of national aerial regulation. We cannot hope to build up commercial aviation until proper legislation assures capital that it is entering a business project instead of a romantic adventure, and rates of insurance will remain prohibitive so long as no competent federal agency exists to determine the airworthiness of aircraft or competency of pilots.

The United States is sadly lacking in air ports. There are only 271 landing fields in the country, 145 of which are municipally owned, sixty-nine privately owned, and the others operated by the army, navy, marine corps, or air mail service. Progressive cities are beginning to realize that a well planned air port will in the near future enable them to reap big benefits from aerial transport services which will connect the main centers of population, because the course of the new air routes will be controlled largely by the existence or nonexistence of air ports.

Some advance, however, is being made. A year ago there was only one air port for every 31,000 square miles of surface area. Today there is one for every 14,000 square miles, and 43 per cent of them are directly or indirectly controlled by communities.

There are comparatively few civilian aerial routes in the United States, because of lack of protective laws. The Aeromarine company is operating the Key West, Fla.—Havana, Cuba, route daily. And airplane passenger service has been started between Los Angeles and San Francisco. Machines are flying on a scheduled service between Seattle, Wash., and Victoria, B. C. But the air mail routes between New York and San Francisco, 2,650 miles apart, with branches from Chicago to St. Paul, Minneapolis, and to St. Louis, and from Washington to New York, are important regular routes because they operate daily, utilizing from thirty to thirty-five planes and transporting from 16,000 to 40,000 letters in each machine. This air mail service advances delivery from twenty-four to forty-eight hours in advance of ordinary methods.

Seaplanes that are seaworthy as well as airworthy now form an indispensable unit of the United States coast guard. The bureau of fisheries has developed fish spotting to such a degree that commercial aircraft companies and fishing fleets are preparing to extend coöperation which has proved to be mutually beneficial.

The aerial camera now occupies an important part in laying out commercial, postal, and military routes over the United States and elsewhere. Aerial photography is now employed in surveying, mapping, and planning, real estate exploitation, fire insurance classification, and obtaining of aerial views.

Airplane patrols guarding the national forests during the last season saved approximately $35,000,000 worth of standing timber. Between 900 and 1,000 fires were reported from a few airplanes lent to the forest service by the army air service. Most of the fires were extinguished by ground forces directed from the air. It should be emphasized that the timber thus saved from destruction is worth more than the total army air service appropriation for the fiscal year.

Eighty-seven commercial airplane transport companies in the United States, using from 365 to 425 machines, carried a total of 115,163 passengers and flew 3,136,550 miles during the last twelve months. These figures are based on the performance records of only 425 airplanes. It is believed the number of passengers and mileage flown would be twice these figures if all of the 1,000 commercial airplanes in this country were accounted for.

Joins Marines.

George F. McCauley, 22 years old, who gained a reputation as a "daredevil" by hanging by his ankles from a landing gear on an airplane high over Boston, has joined the United States marine corps and is now stationed at the Great Lakes Naval Training station.

S-I-A-N-G HOW IT LOOKS

"SHE MADE HIM GET DOWN TO BRASS TACKS."

"Mike" Ebersole Called to Capital to Explain Crash

"MIKE" Ebersole, air mail pilot, was called to Washington last Wednesday to explain the circumstances surrounding the parachute jump from an airplane that saved his life on Feb. 18. The veteran pilot told his story to the investigating committee. Their decision has not yet been announced.

The incident occurred on the Chicago-Twin Cities division of the mail service. It is known among the pilots as "death run." Ebersole was flying a De Haviland twin motored ship. Abuot 4,000 feet in the air something happened. The ship, it is said, started for the earth. The pilot, who had a packed parachute strapped to his back, jumped and floated down to safety.

Rumors reached the air mail officials that the ship was flying in its normal position when the pilot jumped. It was suggested that Ebersole made the jump to test the chute and without regard to the $10,000 ship, which was crashed and almost a total loss.

Here is Ebersole's own story told as he was taking the train for Washington:

"When I started out on that trip I had a hunch that there might be an accident. I put the parachute, which is made by the Floyd Smith Aerial Equipment company, on my back before I got into the cockpit.

"Things went all right for a while—then something happened. I noticed the altimeter at the time, and it registered 4,000 feet. One of three things happened to the motor.

"The crankshaft broke, the propeller came loose from the shaft, or the engine tore loose from the engine bearers—one of those three things happened, I cannot say which.

"I stayed with the ship for 1.5000 feet and made nine different attempts to save it. I was losing altitude fast, and after the ninth unsuccessful attempt to straighten out, I unbuckled the life belt and jumped.

"Free of the ship, I pulled the cord that released the pilot chute, which in turn pulled out the large chute. When the big chute opened I felt my heart slip back to its normal position, and I floated down to the earth.

"It is absurd to say that I wrecked that D. H. I wouldn't even think of doing such a thing—neither would any other pilot. You know a man may risk some other man's property when on the ground, but when you start wrecking airplanes, the detail of life and death must be taken into consideration, and darned few pilots take any such chances with their lives."

Low Upkeep Means Sound Motor Investment

The Chalmers is a sound investment because the cost of operation is extremely low. Actual running expense is held to a minimum. Maintenance and replacement charges are greatly lessened.

The re-sale value is high because of these facts.

All these things make the Chalmers car an unusually fine investment.

Motor Performance Striking

The wonderful Chalmers motor is responsible for low upkeep charges. It is much more efficient because the fuel is pre-heated before entering the cylinders.

Gasoline is all consumed. None leaks past the pistons to dilute the oil. Lubrication is better. Bearings last longer. Cylinders are not scored. Maintenance and replacement costs shrink to a minimum. Carbon is greatly reduced.

The motor runs more smoothly and accelerates better.

Car Always in Service

The fact is that the Chalmers is seldom in the repair shop and that it it is always ready for service. The annoyance of having the car laid up when particularly wanted is avoided.

We will be glad to explain in detail the soundness of the Chalmers investment

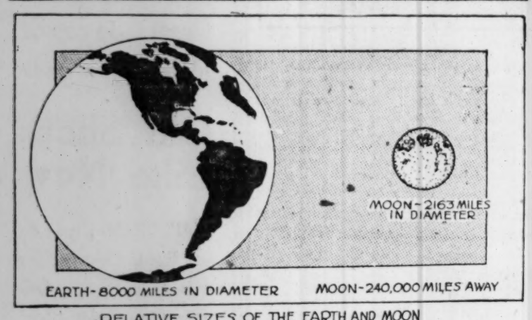
ASTRONOMY



RELATIVE SIZES OF THE EARTH AND MOON
BY S.F.MAXWELL

THE EARTH'S AIR.

WHY does the earth have an atmosphere, while the moon has none? You may perhaps have noticed the sharp curves of the moon as it waxes and wanes, and if you have ever viewed it through a glass you cannot have failed to have been impressed with the hardness of every outline there, compared with the beautiful scenes we find on earth. The reason why the earth is alive and the moon is dead is contained in the nature of air.

Air is a gas, and gases are made of molecules. No one has ever actually seen a molecule, because they are too tiny and move too rapidly, but there are abundant reason to believe that there are swarms of them all about us. They are jumpy, bouncy little things, forever on the fly, constantly stirred up by the sun's rays into winds, clouds, puffs of air, and into a multitude of different motions.

A peculiar trait of molecules is that those of different substances fly at different rates. A molecule of carbonic acid is relatively slow moving; one of water moves faster, oxygen still faster, nitrogen even more rapidly, while one of hydrogen gas goes so speedily that it can fly clear away from the earth.

The earth, and every large body, for that matter, has a definite pull of gravity, or, in other words, a definite speed that it can give to a falling body. The earth, under the most favorable conditions, could force an object to fall at the rate of seven miles per second.

To turn the case around, should you desire to leave the earth you would have to generate a greater speed than this in order to escape from it. No one has ever attained this speed, even in experiments, but the molecules of a few gases do, and these gases, as a chemist can tell you, are conspicuous in our atmosphere by their absence.

Hydrogen gas, which with oxygen makes water, is not found in the air because it escapes from the earth as fast as it may be liberated. The sun, being twenty-seven times as powerful as the earth in its gravitational pull, is easily able to hold, and as a result great clouds of this substance are seen about the sun.

The moon is a body with only one-sixth the power of attraction of the earth, and is too weak to hold even water. All its air flew away as fast as it escaped from the rocks, and left the land as naked as only a dead world can be.

The sun is completely surrounded by enormous, tenuous clouds of molecules of all kinds of gases, extending out to the earth, and beyond, even to the farthest planets, so that all the solar system is continually bathed in a soft gauze of matter. This cloud is far rarer than any atmosphere, but its action in the long run is to feed into the air of each of the planets as much of each particular gas as that planet can hold.

The moon can take none. The earth, a scant 240,000 miles away, takes a generous portion, while the huge planets, Jupiter and Saturn, take so much that they are nearly all gas.

FARM and GARDEN

Good Library Is Part of Modern Farmer's Tool

By Frank Ridgway.

GOOD reading is the power behind the general forward movement so evident in country life today.

There is a direct connection between the reading habit and the success of the modern farmer. Yet there is too great a scarcity of libraries and far too little reading in the farm home even now. In spite of Abraham Lincoln's proof that rail splitting and reading are compatible, many farmers fail to realize the possibility of making reading of good books a part of busy schedules.

The farmer seldom has access to public libraries, and for this reason it is necessary for him to acquire a library of his own if he is to have the stimulating and valuable benefits that come from the reading of good literature. Leaders in rural communities are those in whose homes are found books and periodicals connecting them with the best information pertaining to agriculture. The reading community is the progressive community, and the farm homes with libraries are usually the best homes.

Collecting Forty Years.

Among the best farm libraries in the middle west is that of M. O. Stover, Bloomfield farms, Mahomet, Ill. For forty years this farmer has been accumulating books on all of the subjects in which he is interested. Along the walls of his library are rows and rows of the choicest books on agriculture. One hundred and fifty volumes, each with all of its various phases, from honey bees to live stock. In addition to these there are three or four times as many books on other subjects. One striking feature of this library is that the books have been unusually well selected.

"Books broaden the vision of the farmer, increase his success, and add many pleasant hours to his life," said Mr. Stover in telling about his library. "The farmer has to deal with more phases of learning than are found in any other occupation. A practical study of soils, live stock raising, rotation of crops, and marketing deal with practically every science. In short, the subject of agriculture is so broad that the successful farmer is compelled to specialize in grain, some branch of live stock, or one of the many phases of intensive farming.

Profit and Pleasure, Too.

"Being somewhat isolated the farmer is compelled to use his own judgment. As he deals with nature in all of her aspects he should know something of the constructive effects of sunshine, rain, heat, and cold, and how to take advantage of them; he should know of the destructive effects of floods, bad seasons, insects, and the best to overcome them. With many years of practice it is possible to learn these things, but they are more readily learned from books in connection with farm practices.

"I am 60 years old," reflected Mr. Stover as he smiled, straightened his broad shoulders, and slid his hands into his trouser pockets, "and I know that after a man has borne the heat and burden of the day, and the days are getting low in the west, books are a constant source of pleasure and profit. The reading habit makes the world seem brighter, and it keeps the mind free from rust and decay."

Books for Corn Belt Farmer.

When Mr. Stover was asked to point out some of his favorite books by authors that might aid in guiding young farmers in building up their libraries, he said: "I hesitate to make a choice of books and authors as there are so many good ones that farmers should have in their libraries." He named, however, the following books as

FARM and GARDEN

Good Library Is Part of Modern Farmer's Tools

By Frank Ridgway.

GOOD reading is the power behind the general forward movement so evident in country life today. There is a direct connection between the reading habit and the success of the modern farmer. Yet there is too great a scarcity of libraries and far too little reading in the farm homes even now. In spite of Abraham Lincoln's proof that rail splitting and reading are compatible, many farmers fail to realize the possibility of making the reading of good books a part of their busy schedules.

The farmer seldom has access to public libraries, and for this reason it is necessary for him to acquire a library of his own if he is to have the stimulating and valuable benefits that come from the reading of good literature. Leaders in rural communities are those in whose homes are found books and periodicals connecting them with the best information pertaining to agriculture. The reading community is the progressive community, and the farm homes with libraries are usually the best homes.

Collecting Forty Years.

Among the best farm libraries in the middle west is that of M. O. Stover, Bloomfield farms, Mahomet, Ill. For forty years this farmer has been accumulating books on all of the subjects in which he is interested. Along the walls of his library are rows and rows of the choicest books on agriculture. One hundred and fifty volumes deal with all of its various phases, from honey bees to live stock. In addition to these there are three or four times as many books on other subjects. A striking feature of this library is that the books have been unusually well selected.

"Books broaden the vision of the farmer, increase his success, and give many pleasant hours to his life," said Mr. Stover in telling about his library. "The farmer has to deal with more phases of learning than are found in any other occupation. A profound study of soils, live stock raising, rotation of crops, and marketing deals with practically every science. In fact, the subject of agriculture is so vast that the successful farmer is compelled to specialize in grain, some branch of live stock, or one of the many phases of intensive farming.

Profit and Pleasure, Too.

"Being somewhat isolated the farmer is compelled to use his own judgment. As he deals with nature in all of her aspects he should know something of the constructive effects of sunshine, rain, heat, and cold, and how to take advantage of them; he should know of the destructive effects of floods, bad seasons, insects, and how best to overcome them. With many years of practice it is possible to learn these things, but they are more readily learned from books in connection with farm practices.

"I am 60 years old," reflected Mr. Stover as he smiled, straightened his broad shoulders, and slid his hands into his trouser pockets, "and I find that after a man has borne the heat and burden of the day, and the sun is getting low in the west, books are a constant source of pleasure and profit. The reading habit makes the days seem brighter, and it keeps the mind from rust and decay."

Books for Corn Belt Farmers.

When Mr. Stover was asked to point out some of his favorite books and authors that might aid in guiding other farmers in building up their libraries he said: "I hesitate to make a choice of books and authors as there are so many good ones that farmers should have in their libraries." He named, however, the following books as those which he thinks are of particular value to the farmers of the corn belt:

On soils and field crops—"Story of the Soil," by Hopkins: "Frank Mann's Soil Book"; "First Principles of Soil Fertility," by Vivian; "The Soil," by King; "Soil Fertility and Permanent Agriculture," by Hopkins; "Clover," by Shaw, and "Indiana Corn Culture," by Plumb.

Horses—"The Horse Book," by Johnstone, and "Relations of Man and Horses," by Busbey.

Cattle—"Beef Production," by Mumford, and "Cattle Breeding," by Warfield.

Sheep—"Sheep Farming in America," by Wing, and "Sheep Management," by Kleinheinz.

Dairying—"The Farm Dairy," by Gurler, and "Dairy Cattle and Milk Production," by Eckles.

Fruit—"The Practical Fruit Grower," by Maynard, and "Fruits and Fruit Culture," by Bailey.

Poultry—"Farm Poultry," by Watson, and "Productive Poultry Husbandry," by Lewis.

Gardening—"School and Home Gardens," by Meier, and "The Seasons in a Flower Garden," by Shelton.

"In addition to those," Mr. Stover added, "every man on the farm should read 'Adventures in Contentment,' by Grayson; 'The Brown Mouse,' by Quick; 'Letters to the Farm Folk,' by Wallace; 'Happy Hollow Farm,' by Lighton, and 'New Lives for Old,' by Carleton.

Reading Produces the Thinkers.

Thoughtfully Mr. Stover remarked that it is not the number of books a farmer reads but the kind he reads and digests and puts into practice that makes him a good farmer.

Agricultural books should predominate in the farm library. The successful chemist collects books that deal with chemistry. The physician, lawyer, clergyman, and engineer fill their libraries with volumes pertaining to their vocations. There is no reason why a farmer should not do as well and thus familiarize himself along the lines of the best practices and improvements in agriculture. Real constructive thinking almost invariably accompanies good reading.

Frequently farmers say they would own books if they had time to read them, but their working hours are too long. This is, no doubt, true in the busiest season, and yet there are those who find a few minutes even then to read and study. The best time for reading is in winter when there is a lull in the activities on the farm.

Books Are An Investment.

Definite attention and a little money are needed for the supplying of the right kind of reading for the farm family. In the home of every alert farmer today is found a daily newspaper and farm and household journal. These are all necessary in order that the farmer may keep pace with current events, but the library must not be neglected, for the finest, most valuable, and most permanent ideas of man are found in books.

No sudden big expenditure is necessary. Books selected with care and gradually accumulated make the best of libraries. In this way the expense of buying seems less as it is distributed over a long period of time.

After all, books are an investment, for the information and knowledge to be gained in reading more than pay for the comparatively small cost necessary for the establishment of a good farm library. The time and money saved by a farmer through the knowledge he has gained in reading often amount to more than the actual cost of the whole collection of books that has taken him a life time to gather.

Borrow from Neighbors.

Interest in a farm library is often aroused by borrowing books from neighbors in rural communities. Lincoln's supply of books was exceedingly limited, but he formed the habit of reading and never missed an opportunity of borrowing every volume he could find in the neighborhood.

Owners of most farm libraries are usually willing to loan their books providing they are handled carefully and promptly returned. Mr. Stover says that he has loaned many books, but has learned to discriminate, as he has lost many of them in this way. "Only in exceptional cases do I ask persons to read my books," he said. "In all cases, however, I lend on request, and only ask that the books be returned when read."

M. O. Stover of Mahomet, Ill., owns one of the best farm libraries and the choicest collection of agricultural books in the middle west. Books are a part of his farming tools and he finds them essential on the farm.

WE TEACH COMMERCIAL ART

The Meyer Both College is conducted as a Department of the Meyer Both Company, the most widely known commercial art organization in the field, who produced and sold last year over 12,600 commercial drawings—used by the leading advertisers of the United States and Canada.

YOU get the benefits of 20 years' successful experience in this course—and are taught the very fundamentals which enabled this organization to dominate its field. To give you facts you ought to know about this intensely interesting, highly paid profession—(equally open to men and women). Home study instruction. Get facts before you enroll in any school. Get our special book, "YOUR OPPORTUNITY,"—for half the cost of mailing—four cents in stamps.

ACCOUNTING
Cost — C.P.A. — Federal Tax — External Auditing (Public) — Internal Auditing (Executive)
For the first time in the history of accounting instruction highly specialized home-study courses giving intensive training in advanced branches of accounting are now available to qualified applicants. Each course represents the condensed experience of a number of specialists and is the equivalent of many years' experience.
Applicants who are not ready to profit through the study of the Post Graduate courses may enter for our general accounting course. Our entrance examination enables men of advanced standing to avoid unnecessary review or study. All lessons loose leaf. Every examination is passed on, graded and signed by a Certified Public Accountant.

PAIGE

If you stepped into a New Series 5-passenger Paige Glenbrook without knowing its make or price and experienced its power, speed and general excellence in actual performance, we would be willing to make this prophecy:

After a single demonstration of its capabilities you would price the Glenbrook at five hundred dollars more than it costs.

That is because there are no existing standards by which the New Series Glenbrook can be compared. It has established its own standards.

There is only one way to prove such strong statements—to ride in the car.

Glenbrook "6-45" Five Passenger Touring Car $1795 f.o.b. Detroit
Advance 6-45 Four Passenger Sport model $1795 f.o.b. Detroit

Owner-Evidence Will Lead You to International Motor Trucks

WE KNOW no swifter recipe for making converts to International haulage than to commend prospective purchasers to the advice of present International owners.

The satisfaction and good-will of many thousand owners is responsible for our 15-year success in International Motor Truck distribution and we are content to rest our future with owners. We will give you access to the experience records of International users in any industry—to single truck owners and owners of fleets—and let concrete evidence make up your mind for you.

In these days of varying values you will doubtless make investigations and comparisons. When you have done so we shall be the more certain to equip you with the twin factors—International Motor Trucks and International Service.

We offer for your consideration the great International line of Motor Trucks. This includes a size and style for every hauling purpose, from the 1500-pound truck, with a speed of 35 miles, to the 3½-ton truck for heavy-duty service. The complete line is on display at our sales room, 1814 So. Michigan Avenue.

"A gentleman's coat"

Introducing the

NEW PINKERTON COAT

Named after L. J. Pinkerton, head of the famous Jersild Knitting Mills

THE PINKERTON is a gentleman's coat in character and weave. Heavy enough for warmth, light enough for comfort. A golfing coat, a motoring coat, a coat for fishing and hunting; in brief, for all of the attractions that take men out of doors in the North Temperate Zone. It would be, of course, too heavy for the Tropics and too light for the Poles. The Pinkerton is now in production at the Mills and will soon be offered at all of the better stores.

How It Is Made:

THE Pinkerton, of course, is made of the finest of long fibre yarn, soft as down and yet strong as whipcord (it is absolutely tear-proof); but to get the result we were striving for required nothing less than specially constructed looms.

These looms are made to produce a knitted fabric of even warmth and perfect comfort without either bulk or weight. This has been accomplished by a weave of remarkable elasticity. You can stretch a Pinkerton Coat ten thousand times and yet the weave will come back into place so easily that you would never know the coat had been worn.

THE value of this accomplishment you can readily understand, because it gives you a coat that hugs your body like your skin itself and yet is no more binding than your skin.

For golfing the Pinkerton has a feature that is rather an innovation—and that is, a coat sleeve. This means that for tournament golf and for all fine shooting there is not even the slight tension which even a Jersey cuff might give. The coat sleeve effect is shown in the illustration above.

The Pinkerton comes with the Jersey cuff also, of course, and with two or four pockets, made in bellows style, as shown above, or plain. It is also made in all of the accepted shades; all the new popular heather shades, as well as in plain browns, greens and black.

Our Factory Representatives are now on the road and it will soon be possible for you to see it when you ask for it at your favorite store. It is considered an innovation, and we think you will find it a coat quite desirable to have.

ADVERTISING SALESMEN
On Definite Monthly Remuneration Basis.

A rapidly growing outdoor advertising company operating throughout America has permanent positions for 5 well experienced traveling salesmen.

This is not a "get-rich-quick" proposition, but requires men who are resourceful, who have a thorough knowledge of the retailers' business, who are hard workers, and who will keep everlastingly at it.

Weekly expenses to salesman and a living salary to his home folks, together with a goodly monthly commission check, will be paid to these 5 men who can qualify. An ever growing connection with an organization of this type you can produce larger earnings each year.

Applicants must give full outline of experience for last 8 years, present connections, and average earnings. Only those meeting which an interview will be arranged with an official. Address G H 479, Tribune.

A TERRITORY OPEN to the fighting type of clean cut salesman who is making less today than his kind should earn.

Comprising six of the most populous and thriving counties, a territory that will pay a commission basis $5,000 to $6,000 clear the first year.

A man who has been very successful in selling food products or confections to retailers would perhaps have an advantage, but the personal record and personality of the man will govern our selection.

The salesman will locate permanently within his territory and make all towns by auto and train.

The successful applicant will be asked to substantiate his claim that he is a real exceptional business getter; one who knows downright hard work, and is keen for the reward that comes from it.

To such a man we offer every advantage with our products over competition in the way of merit, quality, and price. Our line is complete and he will sell to six classes of retailers. Our firm is the largest in our industry, and solidly known.
Address G M 328, Tribune.

BARGAINS.
We have a list of over 800 well located 2, 3 and 6 apartment buildings which can be purchased on reasonable terms at the right prices. Many of these are exceptional purchases, owing to closing of estate and parties obliged to leave Chicago for various reasons.
These properties are frequently bought and sold within 30 days, our clients asking prompt action.
We are headquarters for speculators and actual buyers for either investment or home purposes.
If you are desirous of getting in touch with the best buys on the South Side, in the Kenwood, Hyde Park, or Woodlawn districts,

PACKARD

PACKARD TWIN SIX SEDAN—This is our latest series car in the short wheelbase. The body is Custom Built and of five passenger capacity. Interior is like new and the chassis and motor has been thoroughly rebuilt and the entire car carefully refinished in Standard Packard Blue with cream yellow wheels. New car equipment throughout including Goodyear cord tires. Standard warranty; $4,750.

PACKARD TWIN SIX CABRIOLET. This car is in exceptional condition throughout. All necessary mechanical work has been completed and the car has been refinished in dark maroon with black running gear and fenders. The equipment is very complete with excellent cord tires, bumper, heater, etc. The price is very reasonable at $3,250.

HUDSON SPORT TOURING—This car has had exceptionally fine care and is in perfect mechanical condition. The paint is dark maroon with light red wire wheels. Special double headlamps, excellent cord tires with one extra, and rear bumpers, motometer, spotlight, etc., are included in the remarkably low price of $1,500.

ROAMER SPORT MODEL—Here is a late model with Continental motor, only run 7,000 miles. It is most completely equipped with wire wheels, nearly new cord tires, individual steps and fenders, bumper, spare tire, special top, tonneau windshield, green Spanish leather upholstery, etc. Special for this week, $2,250.

OLDSMOBILE TOURING CAR—1920 model. Has only been driven a short distance and is like new in every detail. The equipment is oversize cord tires, bumper, etc., and the motor is absolutely quiet. Top and upholstery look like new. We consider this one of our best values at $1,500.

REO 1917, 4 CYLINDER TOURING. This is an exceptionally good 5 passenger car that will give service at a low cost of upkeep. Good paint, new battery, new top, five fine tires and spotlight. Cheap at $600.

CADILLAC SUBURBAN SEDAN

Latest Model 59,

$4,750

An exact duplicate of the 1921 model 59 Cadillac Suburban [7 passenger Sedan] that is on display at the automobile show for $6,000.

This car is only a few months old and the 3,000 miles of careful boulevard driving has not affected its appearance of newness, but has served to improve its running qualities. This is the finest inclosed car built by the Cadillac and is the last word in quality and comfort. The equipment is complete (including 5 cord tires), and the appointments are luxurious. The upholstery is a heavy, silk velour.

THE VERY LATEST MODEL 3-35.

Brand New

An exact duplicate would cost over $6,700. This car was never owned by a private party, and the few hundred miles of careful driving in the hands of the dealer has served to take some of the stiffness out of the motor. The equipment consists of Hydraulic shock absorbers, Fleetwood special silver lamps, silver radiator, bumper, spotlights, motometer, cut-out, spotlight, Gerlinger, 3 cord tires, patent leather tire cover, etc. The sport touring or phaeton has the square low military back and is extremely smart looking. Finished in Packard blue.

If you are desirous of owning a car of the highest quality we can save you considerable money. Act quickly. Opportunities to buy standard merchandise [such as this Packard] at less than regular price are extremely rare. standard new car guarantee.

AUTO ACCESSORIES, REPAIRING.

MOTOR TROUBLES
The Power and Efficiency

of your motor depends upon its cylinders and pistons. It is impossible to have full power with least expense of operation unless you have perfect round cylinders and pistons. 90% of all motor troubles is caused by out of round cylinders or scored; cause carbon, which acts like emery, that wears every moving part of the motor, fouls the plugs, pits the valves, valve seats causing loss of compression, pre-ignition, waste of oil, gas, and causes frequent expensive replacements. Large service of regrinding cylinders, making oversize pistons and rings, regrinding crank shafts insures a smooth running motor, delivers full power as surely and steadily as when new. Ford price, $24; others, $48 and up.
